The annual initiation of Pledges into the Brotherhood of Pershing Rifles was carried out in a ceremony in the lower Waterman Lounge Thursday the 1st of December. The thirty-seven newly-initiated Brothers were chosen from an original pledge class of fifty-nine on the basis of performance and ability shown in tactical and drill situations. Speeches were given by members of the Regular Army ROTC Cadre and the cadet officers of Pershing Rifles. Colonel Longacre, Professor of Military Science at UVM, addressed the prospective Brothers on the responsibilities, as well as, the privileges of being an officer. Captain Fraser, P/R Advisor, spoke about the experience developed within P/R, which is one of the primary tenets of leadership and success. Pershing Rifle Brothers SFC Robert Gilbert, and 1LT James Mitchell read communications of the society founder, General John J. Pershing. These addresses provided proof of the kind of fervor and dedication inherent in the man who later became the General of the American Armies. Pershing Rifles SSG Thomas Wheel presented Gen. MacArthur's farewell speech to the cadets at West Point, stressing duty to God and country. Pershing Rifles 1st Lt. Walter Cooper discussed the ideals and purposes of Company L-12, placing emphasis upon brotherhood. The actual initiation was completed with the administering of the P/R oath to the Pledges by the Company Commander, P/R CPT Norman Boyden. Part of the ceremony was open to relatives of the Pledges and members of the girls' trick drill team — the Elles — and the Company sponsor, Miss Diane Monti. Then, following the ceremony, a Brothers' meeting in which the program of activities was outlined for the next semester, was conducted.

Ten UVM Students Commissioned

One University of Vermont ROTC Cadet was commissioned a second Lieutenant in the Regular Army and seven cadets were commissioned second lieutenants in the Army Reserve in ceremonies held Friday in the Memorial Lounge of Waterman Building.

The new Lieutenants and their branch assignments are:

Alan B. Levine of Burlington, Infantry; John C. Babcock, Silver Spring, Md., Quartermaster; Steven W. Broderick, Erie, Pa., Corps of Engineers; Jacques G. Couture, Websterville, Vt., Corps of Engineers; Todd E. Fischer, North Tnawanda, N.Y., Armor; Stuart E. Freeman, Westwood, Mass., Artillery; Stephen A. Morse, Brattleboro, Vt., Artillery; and Robert W. Van Ham, East Falmouth, Mass., Artillery.

Levine and Fischer are Distinguished Military Graduates. Levine is also a graduate of the ROTC Flight Training Program.

IT'S A NORTH WIND THAT BLOWS NO GOOD

Crushed between the twin millstones of January weather and final exams, you are saved from total despair, poor devils, only by the knowledge that winter vacation will soon be here.

Where will you go this year? Will it be Florida again, or are you tired of jails? Then how about Puerto Rico?

A most excellent notion, say I. A balmy and bounteous island with long white beaches and blue, blue skies and green, healing seas. And, most pleasant of all, the warm and gracious people of Puerto Rico! You don't even have to know Spanish to communicate with this friendly folk. Just learn three simple phrases and you'll get along splendidly: "Buenos días" which means "Good morning," "Gracias" which means "Thank you," and "Que será será" which means "Your llama is on my foot."

In order to help you enjoy the fabled land of Puerto Rico it would be well for me to supply a bit of historical background. (It would also be well for me to say a few words about Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades because the makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades pay me to write this column and they are inclined to sulk if I omit to mention their product. Of course, they don't stay gloomy long, for they are kindly, cheery men fond of Morris dancing, spelling bees, and temperance punch—fine, upright types, as true and gleaming and durable as the blades they make. And if you've tried Personna's, you know how true and gleaming and durable that is! And if you haven't tried Personna's, poor devil, you've cheated both your purse and face, for Personna's last and last, shave after luxury shave, close, clean, nickless, hackless, tugless, gougeless, scratchless, matchless. Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades come in Double Edge or Injector style and are made only by the makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades.)

But I digress. Back to the history of Puerto Rico. The island was discovered by that popular discoverer Christopher Columbus. Incidentally, considering Columbus' popularity, it's odd we know so little about him. What do we really know? Only this:

He was born in Genoa on August 25, 1451, the son of Ralph T. Columbus, a knee-cymbal vendor, and Eleanor (Swiftly) Columbus, a low hurdler. He was an only child except for his five brothers and eight sisters. From early childhood he was an avid reader and spent all his waking hours immersed in a book. Unfortunately, there was only one book in Genoa at the time—Care of the Horse by Aristotle—and after 18 years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus grew restless. When rumor reached him there was another book in Madrid, off he ran as fast as his little fat legs would carry him.

Disappointment, alas, awaited him there. The only book in Madrid was Cuidar un Caballo, which proved to be nothing more than a Spanish translation of Care of the Horse.

Then one day Columbus heard from a traveller that there were millions of books in India, and he was instantly ablaze to set sail. Off he ran on his little fat legs to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella (Columbus, though more than six feet tall, was plagued with little fat legs all his life) and, as we all know, he persuaded the Spanish rulers to outfit him with three stout ships, the Flopsy, the Mopsy, and the Cottontail, and the rest is history!

Well sir, now you know all about the origins of Puerto Rico. So get packed and get going! You'll love it! Stroll the beaches, swim the coves, breathe the fragrance of hibiscus and bougainvillea. And remember always that the friendly Puerto Ricans are delighted to show you their customs, teach you their language. Why, I'll wager you'll soon know far more Spanish than the three basic phrases. You'll know "Hasta la vista" which means "See you later." "Por favor" which means "Please," and "El tren se paró en la estación" which means "Your llama has eaten my passport."

Gracias from the makers of Personna for giving our blades such a cordial reception, and, por favor, how about trying another of our luxury shaving products — Burma Shave, regular or menthol?

Fossil Whale Returned

A whale, Vermont's largest and best known fossil, is back at the University of Vermont after a century-long stay in the Vermont State Museum in Montpelier.

Its return to the Geological Museum at the University of Vermont was arranged by Dr. C.G. Doll, Vermont State Geologist and emeritus professor.

University geologists plan to exhibit it along with other Vermont fossils, rocks, minerals and maps, in a "Vermont Room" which they hope to complete in the near future.

The whale is about 10,000 years old, and is an adult as revealed by its worn teeth. It lived in the Champlain Sea which formed when marine waters inundated the St. Lawrence and Champlain valleys after the last ice cap had melted from this area. The 13-foot animal was found in Charlotte about 12 miles south of Burlington in a location that is 60 feet above the present lake level.

The whale's resting place might have been his final one had it not been for the Rutland and Burlington Railroad, which was to become the Rutland Railroad. In 1849, a crew widening a deep railroad cut for this line found the whale about 10 feet below the surface.

Grad Students To Do Peace Corps Research

Graduate students, including former Peace Corps Volunteers, will have a chance to conduct field work leading to a Ph.D. while also helping the Peace Corps learn more about itself under a new program recently announced by Director Jack Vaughn.

The program seeks students who are studying for a doctorate in the social and behavioral sciences to do research related to Peace Corps selection, training and field problems.

Most Peace Corps returnees chosen as researchers would work in the country or region in which they served as Volunteers. Living and travel expenses and tuition would either be shared by the student, the Peace Corps and the university, or be paid entirely by the university and the Peace Corps.

Peace Corps research during the coming year will concentrate on studies of what the major Peace Corps programs actually are accomplishing and how they can be improved; studies designed to produce for use in training text and case material that would examine cross-cultural problems of doing specific jobs in Peace Corps host countries; and studies of Volunteers who have failed in training or overseas in order to improve the Peace Corps selection process.

Applicants should write to Charles Peters, Director of Evaluation and Research, Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525.

Before writing, each applicant should discuss the matter with his department head or faculty adviser to determine if Peace Corps research fits the applicant's graduate program and get a preliminary indication of the university's interest in sharing financing of the research with the Peace Corps.

Before the workmen were aware of what they had discovered, the skull and some of the bones had been broken. Careful excavation of the remainder of the skeleton revealed the vertebrae of the back to be in line and apparently in the order that they had existed in the living animal.

Dr. Allen S. Hunt, geologist of the University of Vermont, has been quick to emphasize the scientific importance of this fossil. "Even though there are bones missing," he states, "a specimen as complete as this one is an exceedingly rare find."

The bones were sent to Zadock Thompson, who was a professor at the University of Vermont. Reconstruction of the skull revealed blow holes which indicated that the fossil was the skeleton of a whale. In order to determine the species Professor Thompson consulted with Dr. Alexander Agassiz, the noted naturalist who was teaching at Harvard University at the time. They concluded that it was a fossil white whale and it was assigned to an extinct species called "Delphinaptera vermontanus."

The separate bones were probably mounted between 1850 and 1860 and put on exhibit in the Vermont State Museum at Montpelier. Although the reconstruction was inaccurate in some respects, the work was done with great care.

Short Skis Lessen Odds Of Leg Break

A year's study of skiing and the stress the increasingly popular winter sport places on leg bones tends to suggest that children and persons of slight build may reduce the odds of a leg break by using short skis. The short skis would lessen the strain on leg bones.

That is one conclusion drawn by Dr. John O. Outwater, Jr., professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Vermont, after a year's study under a grant from the U.S. Public Health Service.

His study produced data on the torsion or twisting force on the tibia, one of the common causes of fracture. This data has been reported to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Dr. Outwater, a ski enthusiast, became concerned about broken bones when three women skiers, friends of his family, were hospitalized at the same time with broken legs. He decided to see if the problem had an engineering solution.

He says that a long step toward solution of the problem was taken with the introduction of the "safety" or release binding — providing the binding is properly adjusted in the first place and then properly maintained. The binding is designed to free the skier from his skis in the event of a fall.

The upper limit of release would be the strength of the tibia itself, thus a means for measuring the strength of the bone was one of Dr. Outwater's aims. He computed the strength of different bones by studying X-rays of fractures contributed by medical colleagues. His conclusion is that the strength of the tibia is related to its width just below the knee, where it is relatively easy to measure.

To seek to determine upper and lower limits of release, Dr. Outwater instrumented a ski binding so that it measured both twisting and forward forces during skiing. Speed, snow conditions, and type of ski turns were checked during a long series of tests of skiers of varied capability at three different Vermont ski areas.

These tests gave Dr. Outwater estimated measurable maximums and minimums for the setting of the ski bindings, the maximum being below the estimated breaking point based on the measurement of the tibia; the minimum at the load needed for normal skiing.

A racing skier, for example, would probably set his release for nearer the maximum; the pleasure skier nearer the minimum to give himself the wider margin of safety.

At the present time, there is no simple way for the average skier to determine the maximum or minimum suggested by the U.S.P.H.S. study. Dr. Outwater has, on the basis of this study, devised a curve which, with measurement of the tibia, would suggest an estimated maximum and minimum; and a torque wrench, which measures twisting force, and devices called a release check and a snap tester are also available commercially.

STORY Seeks New Talent

NEW YORK, N.Y., January 18 — STORY, the magazine that since 1931 has discovered or first-printed such important authors as J.D. Salinger, Norman Mailer, William Saroyan, Tennessee Williams, Richard Wright, Truman Capote, and Joseph Heller, has been acquired for Four Winds Press, a division of Scholastic Magazines, Inc., from STORY's original publishers and editors, Whit and Halie Burnett.

Carrying on its tradition of finding new talent through its famed College Contest, which first printed Norman Mailer, when he was a freshman at Harvard, Budd Schulberg, when he was a student at Dartmouth, and others, STORY is expanding its contents to include all fields of creative writing on campus, from the short story and poetry to drama, television, and journalism. STORY will be available by subscription, through college bookstores, and from selected newsstands.

Mr. Libresco has experience as an industrial psychologist and an economist.

Insurance Firms Offer Good Students Benefits

Good students are reaping great financial rewards for their scholastic efforts, the December Reader's Digest reports. One insurance company is offering a 20 percent discount on auto-insurance premiums to male students with a B average or better, or ranking in the upper 20 percent of their class, or attaining the dean's list. Behind the discount offer (in effect in 34 states and the District of Columbia) is the discovery that accident claims are far less for good students than for poor ones during the dangerous driving ages of 16 to 25.

The expanded 1966-67 Contest will award up to $6,650 in prizes and bring possible publication in STORY. The closing date for entries will be May 5, 1967.

The Awards will be made to college story writers, poets, playwrights, biographers, critics and essayists, film writers, TV writers, photo-essayists, journalists, and cartoonists, who are registered in a college or university in the United States, its territories, and Canada.

The special Awards to college newspapers and magazines (equal to half the prize money in any first category) will go to any campus periodical which has already published a work winning first prize. The intent is to stimulate initiative and discovery in college publishing activities.

STORY is now located at Four Winds Press editorial office, at 53 West 43rd Street, New York, New York 10036.

Got Any Guts?

Did you all survive the change of enrollment? This semester was better than usual.

Only a few of the professors changed their courses to real stinkers. You must have noticed the mass migration from them, however. (The profs were quite indignant, catching those of us that bolted, weren't they?)

Then there were those that just didn't exist — one or two at least. It was a shock to arrive and find no class, the first few days.

Well, the semester is in full swing and everything is in high gear. May the guts you finally found be easy and good luck to those still looking for Economics 2041.

Brazilian Exchange Students To Visit

A group of 10 Brazilian students will arrive on campus next Wednesday for a two-week stay as part of an eight-week visit to the U.S. under the sponsorship of the Experiment in International Living.

They are sponsored here by the University and the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils. The following fraternities and sororities have invited the students to be guests in their houses: Sigma Phi, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Gamma Rho, Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Gamma Phi Beta, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Alpha Theta, and Alpha Delta Pi.

Coffee hour with Brazilian exchange students will be held on Thursday, February 2 at 4:30 in Marsh Lounge.

Mancini To Perform In Red Series

By Judy Beeber

Headlining the second Red Lane Series of the new semester will be composer-musician Henry Mancini, accompanied by a 40 piece orchestra. They will appear on Monday, Jan. 30 in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

Mancini started on the pathway to fame in 1952 when he joined the music department of Universal-International Studios. During the next six years, he contributed to over 100 films, most notably "The Glenn Miller Story" and Orson Welles' "Touch of Evil."

Soon after leaving Universal Studios, Mancini was engaged by producer-director Blake Edwards to score the TV series, "Peter Gunn." His use of the jazz idiom created an instant success and resulted in a nomination from the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences for an Emmy Award. The success of

"Peter Gunn" was soon repeated by another Edwards-Mancini collaboration, "Mr. Lucky." The use of strings and organ provided a complete contrast from the driving "Gunn" music.

In addition, Mancini has written many successful movie scores such as "The Great Imposter," "Hawaii," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Charade," "Pink Panther" and many others. Mancini's award winning record is eye catching. Since 1958, he has been awarded 17 grammys and, in 1961, the Motion Picture Academy recognized Mancini's ability by awarding him two Oscars. One Oscar was for the Best Original Score, "Breakfast at Tiffany's," and another for Best Song, "Moon River." In 1962, Mancini received another Oscar for his song, "Days of Wine and Roses."

Proof of Mancini's popularity with the public is that more than three million of his albums have been purchased in the past three years. His time is not only spent in making records but, also, occasionally in writing. Mancini has recently written a book of orchestration titled, "Sounds and Scores." The book has received wide acceptance among music students and professionals.

John Browning, Year's Finest Lane Series

By K. Klonsky

From the standpoint of artistic perfection, John Browning's Red Lane Series Concert of last Saturday night was the finest individual performance to appear in Burlington this year. In a wonderfully varied program, the young pianist showed a remarkable display of tonal richness, sensitivity and overall virtuosity.

The first piece on the program was the "English Suite in D Minor" by Johann Sebastian Bach. This particular work is unusual Bach because of its distinct nobility. Browning demonstrated fantastic power and control in this well chosen opening.

Chopin's timeless "Sonata in B Minor" was the next offering. Throughout the great "Largo," third movement, one could perceive the feathery touch and, at the same time, the full-bodied tone of Browning. The entire work sparkled with the true Romantic luster of Chopin.

The second half of the program was devoted to the two great French Impressionists, Claude Debussy and Maurice Ravel. The three brief preludes by Debussy and "Gaspard de la Nuit" by Ravel were handled with a superb flowing style. Music for piano had been greatly transformed since the time of Bach. The impressionistic pieces, besides being of captivating beauty, are difficult lessons in manual dexterity. Again Browning played them like the master he is.

Browning struck the listener as a dedicated and serious minded performer with an undoubted love for his craft. He is a skillful and sensitive pianist who may be without peer by the next generation.

Bigotry Is Theme Of New Book

"The Painted Bird" by Jerzy Kosinski (Pocket Books: 95¢) is the searching, semi-autobiographical account of a small boy's odyssey in search of his parents throughout rural Poland after Hitler's invasion. It is a powerful human document, depicting the jarring confrontation of an innocent but civilized child with the worst, most revolting aspects of the human character.

Lost to wander from village to village at the outbreak of the war, the boy soon discovers that he is suspected as evil by the blond inhabitants because he has black hair. A Jew? A Gypsy? We are never told, we just know that he is "different" and is, therefore, condemned.

The crude peasants are of another world, a fantastic and repulsive world, in which civilization in any form is nonexistent. Their level of savagery includes the amenities of the most barbarous of the jungles in its superstition, complete with sorcery and witchcraft. Christianity is but a veneer of pageantry, a cruel and perverted travesty upon faith, incorporated into the local witchery as a further absurd adjunct.

One incident starkly symbolizes the pathetic plight of the boy. Several peasants catch a blackbird, paint it weirdly with many colors, then release it to join the other birds, who instantly tear it to pieces because it is different from the others. Thus, it is with the boy, who, by callous fate, possesses black hair -- his father was blond -- is different from the rest and must suffer. Thus it is with man, who causes his brother to suffer because he is different. It is all the same absurd tragedy.

Indeed, Kosinski's macabre sketch is a tormenting document of man's pointless cruelty, particularly to innocent children. Here we hardly meet any Nazis at all. We don't need to. In its tragic beauty, the masterpiece portrays the violence that has haunted the human conscience, violence that came not from the official (convenient scapegoats), but from the people themselves, who are the ultimate sanctuary of all bigotry. It is a potent work, all we really need to know -- much, much more than we want to know -- about the true tragedy of such events.

FILM WORLD

By KEN KLONSKY

Caine is Brilliant As Alfie

Along with the quality films coming out of England this year, "Alfie" stands as one of the more thoughtful and praiseworthy. The brilliant Michael Caine reaches new heights in the title role of a cockney with a confused and misplaced set of values.

The character, Alfie, has what an earlier film labelled as "the knack." He can pick up and captivate most any woman that comes near him. He is occasionally indifferent to, looks gravitating from a beautiful young redhead to homely, middle-aged housewife. Alfie is a pleasure seeker, scrupulously avoiding marriage. Events in the film cause Alfie to question this mode of living and the familiar "What's it all about?" becomes the crucial question. Why is Alfie so terribly dejected and why are his old girlfriends, living in more traditional ways, more happy than he is?

Michael Caine is the obvious centerpoint of the film and he succeeds in giving the character

Alfie great believability. His presence, airs, and mannerisms are perfect for the role. Excellent in a supporting role is Shelley Winters as the call girl who starts the long road of Alfie's disillusion.

"Alfie," playing this weekend at the Flynn Theatre, is an important film for serious moviegoers. The film has something to say and, with touches of wry humor, says it well.

Other Films

STRONG — Tony Curtis and Virna Lisi in "Not With My Wife You Don't" — painful trivia.

STATE — Julie Andrews in "The Sound of Music" — held over in record smashing run; getting a wee bit out of hand and monotonous. Betting has it gone by next September.

S.A. — "A Tale of Two Cities" — Ancient, occasionally dull but a generally good rendition of the Dicken's classic.

Coming February 1, 2, 3 — Votey — SCOPE presents a Bogart festival — 2 new films each night.

Catamounts Struggling

UMass Here For YC Battle

The INSIDER

Editors Note: In continuing the newly-started "tradition" of "The Insider," sophomore guard Bob Jacobs of the 1966-67 Catamount basketball team has consented to be the columnist for this season.

By Bob Jacobs

Seeking no small measure of revenge, the UVM quintet anxiously awaited the tilt last Saturday with the University of New Hampshire Wildcats.

Although considerably thinner, Dave LaPointe was returning to the Catamount lineup and figured to supply the fire-power needed for an upset of New Hampshire. Bruce Hanna was assigned the unenviable task of handcuffing Tuffy Clark, the slick six-one playmaker who makes the UNH offense go. Clark was not adverse to shooting and could hurt us in that area too if hot. Librera, Boardman, and Donny Katz were to make an all out effort to hit the boards, pitch out, and run in an attempt to fastbreak the Wildcats. It was hoped that the fastbreak would both facilitate a quick score, which would negate any UNH attempts at a zone defense, and also get their key men in foul trouble.

Things worked fairly well in the opening minutes, especially because of Hanna's fine defensive work and LaPointe's brilliant shooting. Furthermore, the Wildcats retreated to their lair at half time in serious foul trouble in vital areas (three starters had three fouls apiece). In view of this, the 44-42 deficit at the half seemed a small obstacle to overcome.

The beginning of the second half made it clear that UNH was not going to roll over and play dead. While we were scoring fairly well, our defense was something less than spectacular, and they scored right along with us. With 13:57 left in the game, we were up by five points, but this was evaporated quickly to a 61-61 tie with eleven minutes to go.

From here on in, it was all UNH as they steamrolled to a 27 point victory. They shot well under pressure, and masterfully exploited the chinks in our defensive armor. During this drive Tuffy Clark netted 14 of his game high 27 points. When the smoke settled, the score was 101-74 and UNH had four players with 20 or more points.

The Cats will next host the University of Massachusetts, and will try to seek redemption for their Poor showing last Saturday. UMass has one of the finest young players in the conference in Billy Tindall and it should be interesting to see how UVM attempts to cope with him.

Cats Hoping For Upset At Home

By Ted Ryan

"The Massachusetts game is the big game for us now," is the way University of Vermont varsity coach Art Loche described Saturday's clash with the Redmen.

Loche's 4-10 Catamounts are the underdogs in the second Yankee Conference clash of the season between the two squads. In the first meeting, Massachusetts romped to a 71-51 victory.

Loche noted that the Redmen have beaten Rhode Island and are rated as co-favorites with Connecticut to capture the Yankee Conference title.

Although both Vermont and Massachusetts are in the Yankee Conference, the Vermonters can not be rated in the same class with the Redmen. "UMass has a new coach, young and talented players and a rugged schedule which has greatly developed Massachusetts basketball. Over the Christmas Holidays, UMass competed in the Oklahoma City Tournament.

The Catamounts have played only two home games in their first 14 contests, dropping both.

The Cats opened the season by losing a 45-40 decision to Dartmouth. After losses to Massachusetts and Amherst, the Vermonters finally notched victory number one with a 86-65 win over Middlebury in the American International College Christmas Tournament. In the same tournament, the Cats lifted their record to 2-3 after beating Bowdoin, 91-60.

The next three games included an overtime loss to Plattsburgh State, a win over Loyola of Montreal, and a narrow 58-49 loss to Connecticut. Loche explained that "sloppy play dominated the game against Connecticut."

After the Connecticut game, the Vermont defense fell apart. Leading New Hampshire with just a few minutes remaining, the Cats faltered and the Wildcats romped to a 100-76 win. In the next four games, Vermont picked up only one win, 90-84 over Maine after losing to the same team, 96-67, the day before. Loche called the second Maine game the Cats' best effort of the season.

Through the first eight games, Vermont averaged 65.8 points per game against 62.5 for its opponents. During the next six however, opponents have scored at a clip of 95.3 to 72.1 for Vermont.

The loss of sophomore guard Dave LaPointe to an infection hurt the Catamounts most over the past six games. A highly touted prospect, LaPointe started slowly and was hitting form when the infection sidelined him.

Loche also attributed the sudden collapse of defense to "a suicide schedule." The New Hampshire game was the first of a 10-day road trip which included five games. Loche traveled with only 11 players.

Loche has only one plan in mind for the rest of the season — try to reach the .500 plateau. "We've just got to start winning," he added.

The prospect for victory Saturday is dim but Loche knows his Catamounts will come out battling and try to cut down on the loose defense.

Alden Hale and Bill Librera will start at the forward positions with Rusty Boardman at center and LaPointe at one guard spot. Either sophomore Terry O'Leary or captain Bruce Hanna will be in the backcourt with LaPointe.

With LaPointe sidelined, Librera has handled most of the scoring load and each game the junior has improved. But the most improved player, says Loche, is Boardman, the senior "who is the most aggressive and has come a long way."

One of the big problems which has plagued Vermont throughout the years is the lack of height and this year is no exception. Loche however, is looking to the future with the current freshmen.

From last year, Loche lost his top three scorers, Milt Goggans, Layne Higgs, and Kenny Spalter and the loss of the sharp outside shooting of Higgs and Spalter has hurt the Cats most. Loche noted the lack of consistent outside shooting.

Forward Don Katz hits for two underneath despite the defensive efforts of two New Hampshire players.

Center Russ Boardman adds to UVM's total against New Hampshire last Saturday with this layup.

Skaters Host Salem State

By Fred Schlapp

To say the least, the UVM hockey team is having its difficulties this season. The Cats stand 1-8 on the season and 1-5 in Division II play, both of which are the worst records since Vermont reinstated intercollegiate hockey in the 1962-63 season. The fact that UVM has won a game this season is a tribute to the fine coaching of Jim Cross. Plagued by injuries, lack of material, and academic casualties, Coach Cross has turned out the best possible team under the circumstances.

Lady Luck has frowned on the Catamounts as two starters, goalie Thomson Gregg and defenseman Claude LaPearle lost their battles with the books and co-captain Ozzie Swett fractured his wrist. All three were key losses, leaving Vermont with only four experienced defensemen and a very inexperienced goalie.

John Hynes, ex-Kimball Union Academy basketball star turned hockey player, has done a creditable job in the nets despite his lack of experience, but he is still learning his trade. The loss of Swett was perhaps the heaviest blow of all as he had proved to be the only member of the UVM second line who could score with any frequency.

Having talked to Coach Cross about the team's performance to date, he commented, "We've had our problems and they'll probably continue, but the boys are starting to look better, especially Lee Roy (Vermont's all-time high scorer) who has finally regained the scoring touch that made him such a standout last year."

The Coach also had words of praise for junior Jack Semler and Chip Uihlein. "Uihlein has played every position I have asked him to without complaint, thereby jeopardizing any chance he might have of making the All State Team or the Division II all star team," said Cross.

The hockey mentor also pointed out that he had made some changes in his lines and defenses. The starting sextet which will face Salem State this Saturday at 3:00 p.m. includes Hynes in goal, Bob Schroeder and Doug Krebs at the points, and co-captain Uihlein centering for wings Roy and Semler. The second unit has Jim Brock and Bob Snyder on defense, and Curt Tobey centering for Paul Dorsey and Dick Catron.

This second line has been a major disappointment to Coach Cross this season, as he has expected them to score often. To date, however, with the exception of the 12-3 rout of U Conn, the line has scored just two goals and these have come from the stick of Catron, a smooth skating sophomore from Huntington, N.Y.

According to Cross, the lack of scoring by the second line gives the opponents an opportunity to concentrate on stopping the first line and this is part of the team's problem.

When asked if he expected much help from newcomers Bob Martin and Pete Myer, both of whom have been sidelined with injuries up to now, Cross said that he expected both to be a big help. Meyer is counted on in particular after his brilliant campaign with the freshman team last year.

The Cats should find the sledding rough when they take to the ice Saturday against the always powerful skaters from Salem State, in hopes of getting back on the winning trail.

GO TO SKIDMORE

By Terrie Wurzbacher

February 4 will be the date of the UVM Pussycats adventure to Skidmore College in New York. There, the girls on the swim team will engage in a meet which is intended as preparation for the following weekend's big event, for the Women's Swimming team of UVM will host the first New England Intercollegiate Invitational Swim Meet on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 10th and 11th. More than ten of the colleges and universities (including Radcliffe and U Mass) in the East will be represented at the competition. Diving will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday, while the swimming events will commence at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

This event will bring a climax three weeks of intensive work by the girls on the team: Ann Graham, captain; Wendy Clough; Nancy Feyereisen; Margot Johnson; Sandy Lotowycz; Sue Pitt, member of the 1964 Olympic Team; Candy Pratico; Robbin Ramage; Linda Schufeldt; Mibbs Taylor; and Terrie Wurzbacher. Miss Terry Brusstar is the sponsor of the team and the major organizer of this event.

There are hopes that the interest stimulated by this new meet will increase participation in women's sports throughout the New England area. Great effort has been expended for the success of the Intercollegiate Invitational Meet and all indications promise that it will be successful.

KITTEN KORNER — Highlights In Freshman Sports

By Sandy Luckenbill

It was a good week for the UVM freshmen teams. Each team rolled up impressive victories. The Frosh basketball team beat St. Michael's, the hockey team defeated Kimball Union, and the Swim team knocked off Holy Cross.

The Kitten cagers met cross town rival St. Michael's in front of a large crowd at the Partick Gymnasium. They jumped out to an early lead and never lost it. Excellent defense early in the first half and smart ball handling on the part of UVM was too much for the smaller Knights. Salati, Bueb, and Hutton crashed the boards and jammed up the middle, keeping St. Michael's on the outside. Back-courtmen Greenman and Martiniuk led the scoring parade with a total of 44 points. The final score was UVM 82, St. Michael's 76. The Kittens are 2 and 1 on the season while St. Michael's is 7 and 2. Next Tuesday the UVM Frosh are pitted against Dartmouth at home.

Both varsity and the freshman swim teams traveled to Worcester, Mass., to meet Holy Cross in a dual meet. The freshman, with only a seven man team, defeated the Crusaders 56 to 30. Coming in first for UVM were: Edsall in the 50 yard free style, Loyett in the 200 yard butterfly, Arnold in the 200 backstroke, Ettinger in the 500 yard free style, and Castle came through with victories in the 200 yard breast stroke and the 200 yard individual medley. Baker captured the diving victory, and swam in the first place 400 yard medley which included Arnold, Philipson, and Lovett. The 400 yard free relay was captured by Edsall, Lovett, and Philipson. The swimming Kittens are now 2 and 1 on the season, and they will face the varsity team of Loyola of Montreal Saturday.

back into pre-vacation form as they whipped Kimball Union of New Hampshire, 5 to 3 Saturday afternoon. The offensive unit worked well together, as the skating kittens proved too much of a match for the younger Kimball Union boys. Cussen was high scorer for UVM as he hit the net for two tallies. Yeates, Krebs, and Mullany all put the puck past the goalie for UVM scores. The defense looked good as Kriener and Lane overpowered would-be scorers. This was the team's first victory in 3 starts, and they will travel to Canton, New York, to face a tough St. Lawrence freshman squad.

of our military and commercial business provides openings
for virtually every technical talent.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, we suggest you consider career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Like most everyone else, we offer all of the usual "fringe" benefits, including our Corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. But, far more important to you and your future, is the wide-open opportunity for professional growth with a company that enjoys an enviable record of stability in the dynamic atmosphere of aerospace technology.

And make no mistake about it . . . you'll get a solid feeling of satisfaction from your contribution to our nation's economic growth and to its national defense as well.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL, AERONAUTICAL, CHEMICAL, CIVIL (structures oriented), ELECTRICAL, MARINE, and METALLURGICAL ENGINEERING • ENGINEERING MECHANICS, APPLIED MATHEMATICS, CERAMICS, PHYSICS and ENGINEERING PHYSICS.

Tracksters Set

By Mick Kropsky

The Varsity and Frosh indoor track teams head for Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, this weekend as indoor track officially begins for the UVM cindersmen. Veteran track coach Archie Post reported that he has from 25 to 30 men on the Varsity squad and about 20 men on the Frosh team. Coach Post said he could not be more specific regarding the size of the teams at this early stage of the indoor track season.

Regarding the Varsity squad's prospects this year, Coach Post would make no definite predictions. He indicated that the team was weak in some events due mainly to being "thin in number" in those events. However he also pointed to events in which he felt the team was stronger. A few of the members of the squad and the main events in which they will likely participate are as follows: Captain Peter Nolan (50, 600, relay); Paul Ardell (shot, discus); Ed Childs (high jump); Argie Economou (hurdles, relay); Wes Cate (hurdles, high jump); Jim Bahrenburg (hurdles); Jack Farley (hurdles, broad jump); Ralph Coleman (mile); Jim Dedman (600, relay); Avery Seaman (weight, shot); Dick Kabat (low hurdles, 50, pole vault, broad jump); Peter Jones (2 mile); Bruce Miller (weight); and Wilmont Howard (2 mile.)

Both the Varsity and Frosh cindersmen will be at home Saturday, Feb. 4th as they entertain Bowdoin College. The Varsity will also be at home the following Saturday, Feb. 2nd, for a dual meet with Boston State.

KAKE WALK COMMITTEE

ANNOUNCES ENTERTAINMENT

Kake Walk Ball Features Mitch Ryder and Company

Mitch Ryder and Company

Mitch Ryder will be performing at the Kake Walk Ball at Patrick Gymnasium February 16th, 9-1. Mitch Ryder and the Wheels have recently merged into a ten piece orchestra with special lighting, costuming and a custom made sound system. The orchestra will consist of two sets of drums, horns, two guitars, and a Hammond organ. This is a brand new revue known as the Mitch Ryder Show. Led by "soul singer" Mitch Ryder, the group get off and running with their first record "Jenny Take A Ride." The group comes from "Soul Music Country" which is Detroit. They do the blues the way it was originally done and don't intend to water it down for anyone. Their present hits of "Midnight Hour" and "Devil With A Blue Dress On" are at the head of the "top ten" charts across the country.

Ramsey Lewis Trio Highlights Jazz Concert

The Directors of the 70th Annual University of Vermont Kake Walk have announced "an outstanding variety of outstanding entertainment" for the 1967 weekend which will be held February 16th-18th.

Ramsey Lewis will highlight The Kake Walk Jazz Concert in Patrick Gymnasium February 17th, 1 p.m. The Ramsey Lewis Trio hit prominence with "The In Crowd," which has sold into the millions. This was followed by equally successful recording of "Hang On Sleepy" and "Wade in the Water." Lewis' recognition was capped when the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences awarded him a Grammy (the Record Industry's Oscar) for "The In Crowd." Pianist Lewis is the "hottest jazz artist going," reports Time Magazine. "The younger generation has adopted Lewis as the purveyor of a new and wonderful sound." The new sound of Ramsey Lewis won virtually overnight success for the tall, academic looking Chicagoan. Ramsey and his Gentle-Men of Jazz have appeared on TV shows Tonight and Hullabaloo and have given concerts at Lincoln Center, Carnegie Hall and Ravinia.

The second group for the Kake Walk Jazz Concert has been selected and has agreed to appear. However, the contract has not as of yet been received despite early negotiations by the Committee. Consequently, the name of the second group to accompany the Ramsey Lewis Trio will be publically disclosed immediately after the contract is received.

KW Skits Show Promise

Kake Walk is only two weeks away. The Kake Walk Directors and assistants are running about continually, tying loose ends together, arranging publicity, getting the tickets ready for sale and doing a host of other varied duties.

Bill Machanic, assistant production director, is overseer for those houses putting on walking skits. Fortunately, Bill has the experience and ability to encourage and assist Alpha Tau Omega, a house entering the competition for the first time in many years. Bill has stated that ATO is doing well and suggests their possibility of placing. In charge of ATO's skit is Scott Hendrickson and Steve Robinson. They have chosen P.I.E.C.E. as the theme of their skit.

The Epsilon Phi Fraternity placed second both nights last year. The theme of their skit is along the line of "Institutions Void of Educators." They are being coached by Mark Stine.

Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity, last year's first place winner, will present "Columbus' True Mission to the New World." Phi Sig is being coached by Tim Hayes. Last year the Phi Sig's were awarded the Frederick Marston Trophy for first place; and last Saturday when Paul Shambo, the assistant publicity director, picked up the huge trophy for its annual polishing, they were very reluctant to give up one of the most sought after Kake Walk Trophies of all.

The houses have been working since October on the skits. They spent a good deal of last fall writing the scripts. The three best skits from all of the entries were chosen by a faculty panel. The three houses chosen to participate in the production of the skits have been working earnestly since the second semester began. Two hours are spent nightly preparing the skit and at least one hour a day is spent building props. So far, the results look very encouraging and we should all look forward to Friday and Saturday nights when the Fraternities play for real.

Lester Lanin Orchestra To Appear

The Lester Lanin Orchestra will appear with Mitch Ryder at the Kake Walk Ball. Lester Lanin, whose fabulous career began on the Main Line of his native Philadelphia, is carrying on the 126-year old musical tradition of a family that has been playing dance music for royalty, presidents, high society and debutant parties the world over. Today, he can well be proud of his reputation and popularity as the undisputed "King of High Society Dance Music." As the #1 society orchestra, Lanin employs more men and has the most traveled band in the country. His 20 Epic record albums are the best selling dance albums, and are danced to and listened to in the United States and in almost every country in Europe and Asia. The amazing thing about the Lanin organization is the unique Lanin beat and style of music. Each musician is personally and thoroughly schooled in the "Lanin style." They use no sheet music, either while cutting records or playing engagements. His tailored-made music has changed with the times.

'67-'68 Calendar Announced

Recent rumors to the effect that the next year's academic schedule may be changed back to the old system (finals after Christmas vacation) have been dispelled. According to the University of Vermont catalog for 1967-1968, the schedule will follow basically the same format we have witnessed for the past three years. For example, the first semester final exam period will end on December 19, with the second semester beginning on January 16, still allowing an intersession of close to a full month.

Travel in Korea - Great Mobility

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

One of the characteristics of Korea today is the great mobility of the people. For centuries in traditional Korea, people were anchored to their farm villages except for the regular trips that they took to the nearest town where markets were held every five days. This was, at most, a three or four hour walk. Today, however, roads and railroads lead even to the isolated valleys. It has become a commonplace for Koreans to ride the buses to the market town, to go to the provincial capital or even to Seoul, the national capital, for sight-seeing.

Railroads were constructed by the Japanese during their days of control in Korea from 1910 to 1945. Since then the Korean government, which runs the railroads, has extended some lines to coal mining areas and has made some connecting lines. Though the railroads were badly damaged during the Korean War, they have been rehabilitated; some of the cars, however, are of very ancient vintage. The Koreans have inherited the excellent Japanese tradition of having trains leave on time, but they are not too successful in adhering to arriving schedules.

KOREAN TRAINS

Getting a ticket to ride on a train is a fascinating experience. The government runs a tourist bureau to which one can go, but it is more fun to try to purchase a ticket at a railroad station. Few signs are in English, so it helps to be able to spell out the Korean signs written in their phonetic alphabet. A few through trains have first class cars, but the bulk of the people travel third class, while some more fortunate ones ride in the less crowded second class. The fares for second class are double that of third, but even so are inexpensive compared to American rates. In addition to the classes, the trains may be regular, express or limited express with additional tickets required for the express trains. Most express trains have reserved seats which do not go on sale until just the day before. This is done in an effort to control the black marketing of train tickers - but does not appear too effective, at least judging by the number of times one is approached, while standing in line at the ticket window, to buy one at an inflated price. In Seoul the day before the New Year holidays, there were 80,000 people trying to take trains out of the city. The standard black market gratuity was two dollars per ticket on that day. Even after a ticket there is bound to be confusion in reaching the proper train, car and seat. Finally one may find that duplicate tickets have been sold for the same seat; but possession has power, so it is well to arrive early.

MOST TRAVEL BY BUS

Travel by train, however, is not so common a practice for most Koreans as on the ubiquitous bus - the main transportation vehicle of today. It is cheap. One can travel the length and breadth of Korea by inter-connecting lines. The buses are built upon truck chassis, most of them from trucks brought to Korea during the Korean War fifteen years ago. The drivers attempt to keep them running by rare ingenuity, but every few weeks one reads a news headline saying, "Twenty People Killed in Bus Accident" - due to brake failure or a broken steering rod.

BUSSES OVERCROWDED

low salaries which they supplement by letting persons ride without tickets but with gratuities that they split fifty-fifty. I was on a bus in the country which was supposed to hold only 50, yet I counted 75 getting off. It is not just passengers, but their baggage that crowds the buses. The variety of stuff is amazing - eggs, chickens, vegetables, bags of rice, jars of "fragrant" pickle, boxes and bundles of every size.

Running in the cities and between the cities and the suburbs, in addition to the regular buses, are micro-buses or hap-sungs. The Korean word can be translated as "joint-riding" or "sharing the vehicle" and certainly one does! These are built on jeep chassis, many of Korean war vintage. By putting the driver to the side of the engine they are able to crowd in 21 seats. The passenger load is supposed to be restricted to that number, but here too countless pieces of baggage and their share of weight and odors.

TROLLEYS IN CITIES

In the largest cities are trolley lines. The cars are mainly discards from Los Angeles and other American and Japanese cities, which have been converted to buses. The trolleys are unbelievably crowded, since there are no restrictions on the numbers who can get in or hang along the outside. Though there are supposedly safety zones for trolley passengers, most are not well observed. One gets on or off while dodging trucks and taxis. Safety precautions in all modes of transportation leave a great deal to be desired.

Because the trolleys are run by the city governments, they have the lowest fares. The buses and hap-sungs are owned by private companies, often in sharp competition with each other, but their rates are higher than the trolley rates. Still they are low by American standards. I rode a bus from Buddhist temple area, Heinsa, to Pusan - a trip that took eight hours - 305 Hwan/ or a few cents over a dollar. A forty minute ride in a hap-sung, the length of the urban area of Pusan, costs less than a dime.

FEW CARS

In the major cities there are some taxis and a few private cars, but the roads are crowded chiefly with trucks of all sizes, bicycles often piled twice their height with merchandise, and carts. The small carts have two bicycle-sized wheels with rubber tires and are hand-pulled. Large carts are drawn by oxen or ponies. They have old automobile or truck tires for their two wheels. There are also some four-wheeled carts with two small wheels in front, but these are found only in the major roads, not out in the rural areas where the narrow roads are pitted and stony.

MUCH WALKING

Finally, the Koreans are great walkers. To carry a heavy load, men and boys use a chiggee or carrying frame on their backs. The women and girls carry most of their burdens on their heads. Seeing a Korean lady walking with swinging gait down a busy street as she balances a two-foot water jar or a crate of eggs on her head is a portrait of gracefulness. A boy carrying on his chiggee a load of firewood and brush, towering five feet above his back, as he walks along a mountain path, is a picture of endurance.

I've been travelling all over Korea during the last month using every form of conveyance. It has been fun to meet Koreans in this way. They have a remarkable sense of humor and take their crowded buses and trains with good grace. They all seem happy to be on the move and enjoy seeing an American travelling along with them.

UVM'ers Win In Sweepstakes

Ten University of Vermont students: Judith Bergess, Glen Gurnit, Joseph Grenon, Deborah Gray, Marcia Wool, Robert Penman, Maurice Jenks, Joseph Copulsky, Sandra Batease, and Timothy Stanley were picked as winners in a national College Bookstore Sweepstakes conducted on campus recently by Vermont University Store. Merchandise prizes from Esquire Socks,

The Gillette Co., Jiffies' Footwear and Mercury Slippers have been awarded to the winning students on this campus and at 66 other colleges.

Top prize, a 21-day trip to Europe, co-ordinated by Trans World Airlines and University Travel, Cambridge, Mass., was won by Edith Villarreal, a senior at the University of California at Berkeley.

It's trade-in time for tired old myths.

Like the one about business. Especially big business. That it is beyond the rugged individualist's wildest daydream to enter this holy of holies because he'll lose something that's very sacred - like his independence.

Sure, it can happen. If a guy or gal wants to hide, or just get by, or not accept responsibility, or challenges.

We're not omniscient enough or stupid enough to speak for all business, but at a company like Western Electric, bright ideas are not only welcome, they are encouraged. And no door is shut. Create a little stir, go ahead, upset an old applecart (we replace shibboleths at a terrific pace - we have to as manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System - in order to provide your Bell telephone company with equipment it needs to serve you.)

There's an excitement in business. True, we're in it to make a profit, but working to find new and better ways to make things that help people communicate is very rewarding and satisfying. Did you ever hear these wry words of Oliver Wendell Holmes? "Never trust a generality - not even this one."

That's how we feel about the generality that claims you'll just become a little cog in a company like Western Electric. You might, of course, but if you consider yourself an individual now, odds are 10 to 1 that you'll keep your individuality. And cherish it. And watch it grow. Even at big, big Western Electric.

You know, that's the only way we'd want you to feel. If you feel like coming in with us.

THE BIG CAREER SHUFFLE GOES ON ACROSS NATION. One half of all our young men who make plans to become physicians when they are high school juniors abandon the idea by the time they finish their freshman year at college. Only one in eight would-be mathematicians at the 11th grade sticks with the plan for more than the next two years and only one in 16 medical technicians-to-be holds to that career objective. A full three out of four boys graduating from high school in this era change their original career goals within one year after graduation. These are a few of the sobering findings published two years ago by the University of Pittsburgh, as part of an exhaustive study for the U.S. Office of Education involving 440,000 U.S. high school students.

The ultimate objective of "Project Talent," which was launched in 1957, is the "identification, development, and utilization of the talents of American youth." To the schools, the findings underline the fact that enormous sums of money are being wasted on early career-oriented educations and training. To the U.S. job market, the disclosures flash the threat of future dangerous manpower shortages in precisely the fields hungriest for talent; many of the nation's most fertile careers for future job hunters have the least holding power on today's young men considering these careers. A prime example of this is illustrated in talking about the career of selling. When we look at the career selection of the UVM graduate, a very small percentage enter some form of sales. To millions of today's high school students, the study signals the probability that they will dissipate tremendous amounts of energy and time taking courses for which, in the words of the report, "they are unsuited," and which will leave them with only a deep sense of frustration and failure. Once again in my relationships with the UVM students I cannot help but wonder at the increasing numbers who by the time they have reached their final year have switched out of their concentration once, sometimes twice, and in a few instances three times! The career choices high school students and entering freshmen are making today are, in a vast majority of cases, virtually meaningless and so is a good part their early specialized education or training. A career choice at this level and under present circumstances is little more than a guessing game. The question to be tackled: "Should our high school postpone pressure on students to choose careers, or should they make far greater efforts to prepare students to make early career decisions?" In light of your own personal experience, what is your answer?

UVM Hosts Engineers

During the week of Feb. 19-25, the University of Vermont will play host to professional and student engineers from the Burlington area in an extensive program in conjunction with National Engineers' Week. The theme for the national event is "Engineering . . . for the Human Environment."

Dean Warren O. Essler, of the College of Technology, said last week that there will be approximately "a half-dozen public meetings." The program at the University will include the Student Engineer-of-the-year Award, for a UVM student. There will be a public meeting at Votey on Friday, Feb. 24, entitled "Supersonic Transport (SST) - The Sonic Boom and You." The speakers will be Dr. John L. Powers and Mr. T. Kenneth Power of the Federal Aviation Agency. Professor Wilfred Roth is arranging the events in the Burlington and Professor Douglas Fay is handling the student engineers involvement and campus activity. Dean Essler estimated the number of students who will participate at about 400.

VSM Podium: Free Speech

With the establishment of the V.S.M. Podium the Vermont Student Movement seeks to reassert the principle that freedom of speech is the single mode by which clear thinking men and women may maintain an exchange of ideas and opinions. Therefore, believing that the above philosophy is in direct correlation with administration policy (i.e. that of free speech) we offer to students and faculty the V.S.M. podium.

Each week the Podium will present the opinion and ideas of an individual concerned with a specific topic (the opinions being only those of the individual). Any student or faculty member may write an article for the Podium provided it contains an acceptable number of words. Selection for printing of articles will be on a first come, first served basis. Replies may, however, be made in the form of "letters to the editor" rather than through the Podium. Articles to the Podium should be placed in the V.S.M. box at the Student Activities office in Billings. V.S.M. will, upon request, withhold the name of the author of a particular work, provided the individual presents his name with the original copy along with his reasons for anonymity.

EDITORIAL...

Once again the time has come to review the women's curfew at UVM. This is a yearly occurrence here which generally has no effect. However, it appears that this year may well be different. The difference lies in the fact that a sponsor for the abolition of curfews has arisen in the name of the Vermont Student Movement.

It is the purpose of this movement to create an awareness, in the students of UVM, of certain situations which exist and the questions which arise as a result of these situations. They believe, and rightly so, that each student, as an intelligent and somewhat educated individual, should recognize that these situations exist and should be answered rather than ignored.

Thus the curfew, as a perennial local problem, is being brought into precise focus through such meetings as this Sunday's forum, sponsored by the UVM Ecumenical Fellowship. The hope is that the students will, for a change, face this issue, discuss it, and arrive at a solution. It is to this purpose that we address ourselves.

The major question, and perhaps the hardest to answer, is, why need there be curfews? Also, precisely who is responsible for the present curfew situation? Perhaps the best manner in which to answer these questions, rather than to merely repeat the usual comments about parents expecting these controls in the administration's responsibility, would be to tell of a conversation with our past president, Dr. Shannon McCune.

Although Dr. McCune's word could scarcely be considered gospel, it is reasonably safe to assume that, in this situation, his views were accepted University policy and not merely his own opinions.

In the conversation we asked Dr. McCune "why do the girls have curfews?" He answered that they had them because they wanted them. Under further questioning we were told that the administration sets curfews according to the wishes of the WSGA. Thus, if the women wanted later curfews, more graduated curfews, or even no curfews they need only so demonstrate and they would get their wish.

It thereby becomes apparent that the only way to clear the air is for the women of this university to arise and voice their opinions. If the women want a curfew then there should be one. Likewise, if they are opposed to such restrictions then they should be abandoned. It seems quite incongruous to deny that women of college age are incapable of deciding this question for themselves.

It has long been our contention that the reason nothing ever comes of the multitude of anti-curfew comments is because too many people feel that the situation cannot be changed. Administratively, this apparently is not true. For those sceptics among us, let me be reminded that, but a year ago, the women of the University of Massachusetts faced this exact problem. As of September, 1966, they no longer had a curfew. The ice has thus been broken and the path cleared. UVM is no different than UMass, a similar action can take place at UVM and can be successful, if that is what is wanted.

All we can say at this time is: Let there be enlightenment and a clearing of the muddle surrounding this situation. Let the problem be decided by the students in such an open manner as will leave no room for complaints or more questions. We might even suggest a campus-wide referendum. For the moment, however, we urge you to take advantage of an opportunity which is presently available. This Sunday, February 5, 1967, at St. Anselm's Chapel (near Redstone Campus - girls!), at 6 p.m., there will be an open forum. Dean Roland Patzer will, at that time, address the topic - "Dialogue On Coeds...."

This concerns all women and, of course, all interested men. In the name of enlightenment, we ask you to plan to attend this meeting and to express your opinions. This is your opportunity. Do not let it pass!

Letters To The Editors...

Reviewer Is Challenged

To the Editors:

What is the point of printing reviews of musical events if you are going to have them written by someone who quite clearly demonstrates his total ignorance of the subject? Anyone who could possibly write that the D-Minor English Suite is "unusual Bach because of its distinct nobility" knows nothing whatsoever about Bach, and Mr. Klonsky's comment that, by the time of Ravel, "Music for piano (sic.) had been greatly transformed since the time of Bach," and that "The Impressionistic pieces... are difficult lessons in manual dexterity" are among the most meaningless, naive and irrelevant statements I have ever seen in a music review. This sort of Twaddle is unworthy even of the CYNIC, and does a disservice to your readers as well as to Mr. Browning.

What are some facts about this particular Lane Series concert? Mr. Browning was suffering from acute food poisoning, and showed tremendous professionalism, personal dedication and integrity in managing to perform at all that night. It is the overwhelming consensus of pianists, whom I have talked to about the concert, that he had an "off night," which is certainly understandable! Moreover, Mr. Browning's Bach is not at all his strong point, for reasons which your reviewer, at least, is in no position to discuss. In short, it was not a terribly satisfying concert, and a University paper should be bound to say so, and to say why (The CYNIC, after all, is not the Free Press!).

PERCEPTION

By Jan Quackenbush

I found this letter tomorrow, addressed to the Gallants, who until the Great Thaw, lived alone in the land of the Singlersingers. It is of great historical importance (the letter) because it illustrates the common existo-temporo-crapplio of the Fleebits who, surely absurdly, dwelled in the land of the Greatsociety within the edge of night beyond the heart of darkness; it said: Our lola,

I have just spent six hours before its inquisition; but I was gallant! First, it...

(this portion was banned by the arids) ... and then it asked me of Orthodoxy, which it assumed to be the creed of Oths. Standing below its plaited tongue, I told it exactly what I understood. I said: Orthodoxy requires of all Fleebs only one female sacrifice - Freedom.

It quivered furiously, shivered like a silly hip and beat its breast. It grunted like a prostrate prostitute and couldn't stop spitting Red smiles and one was: What is female Freedom like, Red?

I was gallant! I stood below its festering oral issue and told it exactly what I understood. I said: Female Freedom is like a Flee's mental eye-lid which always prohibits vision.

It undulated spasmodically, spattered drops of pyuria bubbled uraemically from its pisiform oral pore! It wheezed pituitously and gropped sinistrously like a slug for a tissue! It was on the verge of empathic parataxis!

A bit shaken, it had to recuperate and now is in The Good Senate Hospital. I'm afraid my attempt to be educated and honest and gentle, all at once, made it ill. Please send it a get-well card; its name is Huac.

Forever ours,
Izzy

These things said, would the editors of the CYNIC please remind themselves that John Browning is one of the finest young pianists in the world, and that he deserves an intelligent, discriminating, high-level review. Anything less is an insult to his talents, and certainly the well-meaning nonsense, which you printed, is both insulting to him and utterly useless to your readers.

Sincerely,
William Metcalfe

Klonsky Replies

To the Editors:

In reply to Dr. Metcalfe's vituperative criticism, I should at least like to defend myself on certain of his comments. Far from being a musical expert like our respected history professor, I will admit being a mere novice in the subject of music criticism. However, I have always done a certain amount of homework before attending a concert so I can, in some small degree, know what to expect of the artist and his particular program. My statement about the nobility of the English Suite by Bach was simply in reaction to a criticism I had read which stated that this piece was noted for its exceptional nobility, far above the normal pomp of much of Bach's work. My statement about the music of Ravel being greatly transformed from that of Bach was in response to the varied and chronological nature of the program, and not mere "Twaddle." Furthermore, I never said that "Mr. Browning's Bach is... his strong point." I simply stated that I thought he played the piece with fantastic power, more a judgment of his tonal capacity than anything else. Lastly, I think Browning's concert was "Terribly satisfying," and never having the good fortune to have heard him before, like these phantom pianists of Dr. Metcalfe, nor having the knowledge of the food poisoning, I would very much like to hear Mr. Browning on a good night.

Sincerely,
Kenneth Klonsky

STUDENTES

By Cora Simpson

"Well, How was Israel?"

It is the fifth time I have heard the question today, and the thirtieth time in the past four days. I shall respond in the acceptable two word manner, and then hurry on dissatisfied, leaving dissatisfaction.

"It was wonderful. I learned so much..." is true enough, but it may take me a year to fully realize how much I have really learned, and another year to begin to express it all. This is, I think, a common experience of those who are fortunate enough to study abroad anywhere, the possibilities of which are not nearly so remote as some people imagine, as I imagined.

When I applied to Brandeis University to attend their Jacob Hiatt Institute in Israel, I felt I was truly grasping at straws. I had no money, almost no Hebrew, and only half a year to spare. Brandeis University runs the Hiatt Institute from July 1 through mid-December, and gave me a considerable scholarship in order to attend.

There were 23 students with their families who met for the first time at Kennedy Airport before the flight directly to Israel. For the next six months we were to live, study, and travel together as a group, and we were to come to know one another very well.

For the first eight weeks we studied Hebrew intensively in a method called Ulpan, which is used to teach most immigrants the language. We had four hours of classes in the morning, about two hours of home work, and still had time to sleep during the hot afternoon and sometimes even go out at night.

I had had but one year of Hebrew study, that here at UVM, with Professor Kahn. (I counted myself fortunate to be one of two non-Jews among a group of twenty-three.) Yet I began very quickly to learn enough Hebrew to be intelligible on the street, in stores, in almost all meetings with Israelis. Within the space of eight weeks, I was able to carry on a quite reasonable conversation with my landlady over coffee and cake on a long Sabbath morning. The Ulpan really works!

Hebrew lessons continued biweekly during the remaining fifteen weeks, while the other courses were running, five weeks each of concentration in Modern Jewish History, up through the creation of the state of Israel and modern development. Israeli Social Institutions, and Politics and Government of Israel. Each course included lectures in English, outside readings, and two to four day tours, during which we touched every important aspect of the country: all major cities, the Negev, the Galilee, the development towns, the Arab villages, historical landmarks, ruins and archaeological sites. Individual weekend tours took us also to the several artist villages, the sea, kibbutzim and moshavim (cooperative farming villages) which we did not visit on academic tours.

We were fortunate to live in one of the loveliest towns in Israel, and possibly the most important, Jerusalem. We studied there, and lived with families near the little pension where we took our meals together as a group.

I try to imagine what my impressions might have been had I visited only as a tourist, rather than as a student, living like an Israeli. The question is just as important, and possibly more illustrative, when asked of the three weeks in Europe, following our departure from Israel, December 15. There I visited pen pals in Holland and Germany, and I am sure that I learned more in six days with those families, about the influences that daily work in their lives and those of their neighbors, than I could have learned in twice that time just studying, reading, and touring, visiting places rather than people.

NOTE:

I shall be more than happy to talk with anyone who is interested in Israel and especially in the Hiatt program. It is not too late to apply for the program, and I am told that there is scholarship money available. Write Jacobs Hiatt Institute as soon as possible for application forms if you are interested in the program, and call me at Ext. 524, or write to Patterson Box 72 if you would like more information.

Julian Bream

LIFE Magazine has described Julian Bream as "the successor to the great Andrés Segovia himself."
Nowhere is his brilliance more clearly displayed than in this performance on the lute of these 16th-century airs and dances by eleven composers. Such music as Dowland's Queen Elizabeth's Galliard and Besard's
Air de Cour achieves its authentic flavor in Bream's

Departure Staff Elected

DEPARTURE, the UVM literary magazine recently elected its 1967 staff. Serving as editor will be John Moriarty, '69; associate editor, Anna Clark, '68; poetry editor, Michael Minsky, '68; prose editor, Ann Proulx-Plastri, '69; secretary, Eileen Lippe, '68; business manager, Anne Zimmerman, '70; art editor, William Barry, '69; publicity, Cora Stimpson and Judith Watson, '69; corresponding secretary, Bonita Fogg. They will remain in office until the end of the fall semester, 1967.

The magazine is now considering materials for the Spring issue. Anyone who has any art, poetry, or prose of any kind is urged to submit his manuscripts and drawings at the front desk in Billings, or to give his work to any of the persons listed above.

Poetry and prose should be typed or printed very neatly, name and address attached, so that materials may be returned when decisions have been made. It is good practice, however, to retain a carbon copy of any work submitted, not only in case of loss, but also DEPARTURE should wish to consult the author or artist.

Anyone who is interested in participating with the magazine is urged to attend its regular meetings every Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. in Billings. Inquire at the main desk as to location. Freshmen and sophomores are particularly welcome.

MAIL THIS APPLICATION TODAY TO: NATIONAL COLLEGE QUEEN CONTEST COMMITTEE
P.O. Box 935, New York City, N.Y. 10023

Deadline: This newspaper application must be received in New York City within 10 days from the date of this issue.

You can win more than $5,000 in prizes and earn recognition for your school.

It's nomination time again! Colleges in all 50 states are nominating their candidates in the 13th Annual National College Queen Contest. And the time is right now—the nominations close soon.

Send in your name—nominate a friend

Lots of girls send their own names, so don't be shy! Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors—all are eligible. And anyone can make a nomination... campus groups, fraternities, sororities, friends. Just fill out the application blank.

Not a "Beauty" contest

Those who entered last year will tell you that this is neither a "glamour" nor a "genius" contest. Candidates are judged on their all-around abilities... they're questioned on current events, fashion, home economics, career goals and the like.

50 state winners

Every state elects its own College Queen in April. As a state winner, you'll come to New York City (all expenses paid) for a 10 day visit and the National Finals. You'll appear on a National Television Special, and attend a reception at the United Nations, theatre trips, backstage visits with Broadway stars, and the formal Coronation Ball.

More than $5,000 in prizes

The new National College Queen will tour Europe from London to Paris to Rome. She'll win a wardrobe of the newest styles, worth $500—and her own car, a brand new sports convertible. She'll discover America—travelling from New York City to Disneyland, including featured appearances at the Rose Bowl Game and the traditional Tournament of Roses Parade.

Enter Today

It's easy to enter, fun to nominate. Take a minute right now to fill out the application yourself. And how about your club, fraternity or sorority nominating someone? Remember, this is not a typical "Beauty Contest." It's for the real girl, the all-around girl—it's for you!

Quartetto Italiano

Mancini-Fair At Best

Henry Mancini

By K. Klonsky

Henry Mancini, his Oscars, his Grammys, and his tingle-tangle orchestra, appeared at Memorial Auditorium on Monday night, January 30, in a Red Lane Series Concert. With a big assist from The Four Preps, the night provided entertainment for a large, enthusiastic audience.

Mancini played most of his favorites including "The Pink Panther," "Moon River," "Peter Gunn," "Mr. Lucky," "Days of Wine and Roses," and "Dear Heart." The jazz pops and the sentimental stuff sounds all right with the orchestra of forty. The marches were a bit tinny, except on one occasion; "The Swing March" from "What Did You Do In The War, Daddy," which was easily the high musical note of the evening. The arrangement on a Beatles medley was sluggish and failed to do justice to Lennon and McCartney.

The Four Preps had a forty minute stint that broke up the place. Their imitations of famous song groups are still uncanny in their accuracy. Their delivery of a straight song is polished and professional.

The concert was all one could expect of Henry Mancini. He established an excellent rapport with his audience. The quality of his orchestra and some of his soloists, especially a trumpeter named Brisboy, was only fair at best.

Flicks

(NOTE: Subject to last minute changes by the theatres)

FLYNN — "Alfie" starring Michael Caine and Shelley Winters. A humorous but provocative study of a London pleasure seeker that takes on tragicomic and occasionally grotesque aspects as it develops. Michael Caine is beautifully casted as Alfie and responds well to the role.

STRONG — "Penelope" — Natalie Wood, Dick Shawn and Johnathan Winters.

STATE — The Sound of Music — proprietor has hinted that Doctor Zhivago may be opening sometime this month. Let us so pray, with apologies to Julie Andrews and all those wonderful, smiling, insipid people.

S.A. — David Niven in "Please Don't Eat the Daisies" — fairly humorous if you like that kind of stuff.

Film Series

Presents Dames

The second program in the spring half of the Fleming Museum's film series scheduled for Wednesday evening, February 8, features a Busby Berkeley production of 1934, "Dames." The musical extravaganza has Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler, Zasu Pitts and thousands of dancing dollies, all of them smiling. The film will be shown in the Arena Theatre at 8 p.m. Admission is by museum membership only.

There will always be the sound of thunder and chaos and ruin and death in the affairs of men and nations until they achieve God and enter into his tranquility.

Quartetto Italiano To Appear Here

Opening the seventh annual Lane Chamber Arts Series will be the renowned Quartetto Italiano, consisting of violinists Paolo Borciani and Elisa Pegreff, violist Piero Farulli and cellist Franco Rossi. They will perform on Tuesday, Feb. 6, in the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 p.m.

This year marks the group's twentieth anniversary. The story of the group's formation is not without problems and struggles. The violinists and cellists met in 1940 when all three won prizes at the National Competition in La Spezia. The war forced them to forget about performing music. As a consequence, the group separated and after the armistice, a long search ensued in order to find each other. After searching many cities, Borciani finally found his friend Rossi in the pit of the Teatri Fenice, one of Italy's oldest and most renowned opera houses. One month later, the Quartetto Italiano was born in Paolo Borciani's home in Reggio. Their first performance took place on November 12, 1945, in Carpi, a little town near Modena. This was the first concert put on by the newly formed Carpi Concert Society.

Appearances in other small places and, then, gradually, in major towns and music centers, ensued. By 1949, the Quartetto Italiano had made a name for itself. It was selected to present a memorial concert at the Teatro Alla Scala in Milan.

Throughout the years the quartet has toured many European Countries and have made seven American tours of over four hundred concerts, from New York to California, and from Texas to Canada.

For those who have not seen the ski lodge, go see it with the rest of your friends. They are going skiing with the Outing Club this Sunday. A bus will leave from Southwick and Waterman at 8:30 a.m. It only costs a dollar for the two way trip to Madonna Mountain.

Girls from Curry College used the lodge's facilities this past weekend. They are just a few of the many other college people who are using the lodge. Very few UVM students have used the lodge. Those from other schools are very impressed with it, and are hoping to come back. It is the hope of the Outing Club that more UVM students will take advantage of this facility. The Catamount skin above the fireplace won't bite! Just come out and stop in. It doesn't cost anything to look. After seeing the lodge everyone will want to stay the night. Why not? It's cheap and reservations aren't necessary. Besides, there are lots of people from other colleges who would like to see what UVMers look like. Use your charter membership and the lodge. They are for everyone to use.

Remember the ski bus and ski lodge this weekend. In fact, ski buses will be going most every weekend from now thru the rest of the winter. Have a fun weekend of skiing. What's studying when there's such fine ski facilities and lodge to be used.

Middlebury Conference Discusses Great Society

"The Great Society: Myth and Reality" will be the topic of a two day conference to be held February 10 and 11 at Middlebury College. The conference, sponsored by the Middlebury Liberal Forum and Civil Rights Group, will feature critiques of the administration plans and alternatives which can be substituted.

Tom Hayden, co-founder and former head of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will open the conference Friday evening at 7 p.m. with a talk entitled "The New Left Views the Great Society." Mr. Hayden has assisted with the Mississippi "Freedom Schools" and has worked as community organizer in Newark, N.J. In January of 1966, he visited North Vietnam with Yale professor Staughton Lynd and Herbert Aptheker.

Mr. Hayden's speech will be followed by Tom Kahn who will deal with "Social Democracy: Labor and Urbanization." Mr. Kahn is executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, an educational group concerned with increasing democracy in economic, political and cultural aspects of American life. Among the members of the League are Sidney Hook, Bayard Rustin, James Farmer, Norman Thomas and Michael Harrington, author of the book "The Other America."

An open discussion will follow these talks.

The second half of the conference will begin at 1 p.m. on Saturday with an address by Lincoln O. Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality. Mr. Lynch will speak on "The Negro Political Movement." Besides being an active civil rights organizer, Mr. Lynch, a critic of America's commitment in Vietnam, has called for a larger war on poverty, hunger, disease, ignorance and racism in this country.

Robert Cook will follow Mr. Lynch and will talk on "The Politics of Dissent and Insurgency." Mr. Cook received his Ph.D. degree from Princeton University in 1964 and is a sociology professor at Yale. Last fall, he ran for Congress in Connecticut's Third District as a candidate of the American Independent Movement. Although called a "Peace Candidate" Mr. Cook's campaign was not based on his opposition to the war in Vietnam. He also presented positions on civil rights, poverty and other domestic issues. Although he was defeated by the Democratic incumbent, Mr. Cook was endorsed by Oregon Senator Wayne Morse and national and local organizations.

An open panel discussion will follow the afternoon addresses. All events will be held in Dana Auditorium and are open to the public with no admission charge.

Fellowship Offer

Applications for the Corse Fellowship of $1200 will be accepted by Dean W. H. Macmillan, Graduate College, through April 15.

This fellowship, established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, '88, is awarded annually to a graduate of UVM holding the Bachelor of Arts degree, to a senior or to a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

Applicants, either young men or young women, must have majored in English, or a classical language, or two of the European languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

Application blanks may be obtained from Dean Macmillan's office, 107 Waterman Building.

Nahavandi Joins UVM Faculty

Dr. Amir N. Nahavandi, mechanical engineer and educator, joined the University of Vermont faculty about Jan. 1 as a professor and as chairman of the department of mechanical engineering, College of Technology.

He came from Pittsburgh, Pa., where for three years he has been an advisory engineer to Westinghouse Electric Corp. Atomic Power Division, specializing in the design and analysis of atomic electrical power plants.

He has taken an active role in the in-house training program at Westinghouse, as well as teaching at Carnegie Institute of Technology. It was at Carnegie that Dr. Nahavandi received his Ph.D. degree in mechanical engineering in 1960.

Dr. Nahavandi was born in Tehran, Iran, and received his B.S. degree in electromechanical engineering from Tehran University in 1947. After three years as an engineer at that university and six years as head of a design group of the National Iranian Oil Company, he came to the United States.

In 1957, he received his master's degree in mechanical engineering with honors at Carnegie Institute. From 1957 to 1960 he was an engineer to the Westinghouse large rotating apparatus department, followed by service from 1960 to 1963 as fellow engineer to the Westinghouse atomic power division.

His teaching experience has included training and supervising engineering personnel in advanced analytical and digital computer work, as well as, college-level teaching of thermodynamics and computer programming.

His engineering work has been in the fields of reactor technology, fluid dynamics, thermodynamics, heat transfer and vibration.

He is the author of numerous scientific articles and technical papers. Dr. Nahavandi is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and Phi Kappa Phi and Sigma Xi honorary societies and is a registered professional engineer in Pennsylvania. He speaks French, Persian and English.

You can judge a company by the men it keeps

Like lots of companies, we want college graduates. We offer them careers, not just jobs. In fact, a majority of the college-trained people who have come to Armstrong are still with us. One reason for our low dropout rate is our high growth rate. We need college graduates who are looking for a place where they can grow. At Armstrong, an individual has plenty of room to move ahead. We make more than 400 products, from multifunctional building components to innovations in packaging, so career opportunities are practically limitless. Young people will find a ready-made market for their thinking and an opportunity to prove themselves—to get their ideas off the ground and into use. We stick by our college graduates. Maybe that's why they stick with us. See your Armstrong representative when he is on campus soon. For more information about Armstrong now, see your placement officer or write the College Relations Department, Armstrong, Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

Hockey Team Drops Ninth Game

Tracksters To Play Host To Bowdoin

By Mick Kropsky

Coch Archie Post's cinder-men traveled to Lewiston, Maine, last weekend for a duel meet with Bates College and met with about as much success as did Sonny Liston when he fought Mohammed Ali in Lewiston. When it was all over the Cats had accumulated a scant 24 points while Bates had 89 points. Bates took 11 first places out of the 13 events held.

Outstanding for the Mules was freshman Dave Seymour who held two firsts, a second, and a third. Before leaving for Lewiston, Mr. Post had expressed the fear that Bates might have a freshman who could hurt UVM and on Saturday his worst fears were realized. Bates is allowed to have freshman on the varsity squad because of the small size of its student enrollment. Vermont's best showings came in the 35 lb. weight and broad jump events. Avery Seaman won the 35 lb. weight event with a toss of 48 ft., 8 inches, while Jack Farley leaped 21'7 3/4" to win the broad jump.

The varsity squad will participate in its second meet this Saturday against Bowdoin here in Burlington. The frosh, who were defeated by the Bates freshman 64-42 (despite Jim Wheeler's three first places), will also be at home this Saturday for a duel meet against the Bowdoin Frosh.

35 lb. weight - 1, Seaman (V); 2, Fish (B); 3, Weinstein (B). distance: 48 feet, 8 inches.

High jump - 1, Tighe (B); 2, Needles (B); 3, Johnson (B). height: 6 feet, 2 inches.

One mile run - 1, Doyle (B); 2, Geggatt (B); 3, Jones (V). time: 4 minutes, 28 seconds.

45-yard dash - 1, Higgins (B); 2, Seymour (B); 3, Kabat (V). time: 5.1 seconds.

600-yard run - 1, Pierce (B); 2, Dedman (V); 3, Nolan (V). time: 1 minute, 17.6 seconds.

High hurdles - 1, Seymour (B); 2, Williams (B); 3, Chamberlain (B). time: 5.7 seconds.

Shot put - 1, Sauer (B); 2, Ardell (V); 3, Giordano (B). distance: 46 feet.

Two-mile run - 1, Larson (B); 2, Howard (V); 3, Jones (V). time: 9 minutes, 49.3 seconds.

Pole vault - 1, Hibbard (B); 2, Mossberg (B); 3, Eggleston (B). height: 13 feet.

1000-yard run - 1, Fisher (B); 2, Harvie (B); 3, Crown (V). time: 2 minutes 22.8 seconds.

Low hurdles - 1, Seymour (B); 2, Harvie (B); 3, Williams (B). time: 3:39.0.

Broad jump - 1, Farley (V); 2, Harvie (B); 3, Seymour (B). distance 21' 7 3/4".

Luckless Skaters Must Face Two Road Contests

By Fred Schlapp

The UVM Hockey team lost its ninth game in ten starts, dropping a tight 4-2 decision to Salem State. This was a tough loss for the Cats as they outplayed the visitors all the way, but still ended up on the short end of the score. The first period saw Vermont completely dominate the action and bombard the Salem State net with shots, but still they failed to light the lamp. Late in the period Salem State scored two quick goals, the first coming at 14:35 as Coccoro took a pass from ex-Catamount Timmy Twomey and beat Jack Hynes to the lower corner. The second came 4 minutes later as Salem State's captain Russ Har-nish scored the first of his two goals with Currier assisting. The period ended with the visitors ahead 2-0.

The second period action was fast and furious with the Cats pressing the play at both ends, but again they were unable to score. Salem's goalie Dean Humphries, was outstanding as he turned away numerous Vermont shots, as was Twomey who seemed to be everywhere at once thwarting Catamount scoring efforts. The period remained scoreless and Salem State took a two goal advantage to the dressing room.

The third period started quickly as Salem State's Harwick scored at 4:05 with assists to Currier and beat Hynes cleanly from about 15 ft. out. Down 3-0 Vermont closed to within 2 goals as high scoring junior Lee Roy put the Cats on the scoreboard. Captain Chip Uihlein skated in on the right wing, centered the puck to Roy who triggered a drive that Salem's Humphries is still looking for.

Roy wasted no time in scoring again as he beat Humphries at 8:17. Showing the form that made him a sensation last year, Roy took a pass from Jack Semler, came from behind the net and slipped the puck into the corner. With the score now 3-2 the Cats really came alive and barraged Humphries with shots, but couldn't come up with the equalizer. Coach Cross pulled Hynes with 15 seconds left in an attempt to tie it up, but this backfired as Salem's Driscoll scored into an empty net at 19:53 to make the final score 4-2.

For the Cats Hynes played well in the nets, making 22 saves but his lack of experience hurt his performance. Captain Uihlein, Jack Semler, and the first defense of Schroeder and Krebs also were standouts for Vermont.

The team took on Boston State this past Wednesday night at the field house and will be on the road against Salem State on Friday and UMass on Saturday.

The University of Vermont has two father-son combinations in its athletic program. They are baseball coach Ralph Lapointe and his shortstop son Dave, and football coach Bob Clifford and his halfback son Pete.

Bob Stone's University of Vermont ski team has probably the longest training period of any college. The semester break allows for a three-week, strictly ski camp.

Semler Sparks Win

Jack Semler had an assist against Salem St. Saturday and came back Wednesday to spark UVM to its second win of the year with two goals in the 4-2 victory over Boston St.

Marksmen To Shoot At Northfield

By David A. Keenan

After a layoff of about two months, the UVM Varsity Rifle team lays its 3-1 record on the line this Saturday when it takes its rifles to Norwich University in Northfield. Led by captain James Bellino, the team will try to bring home a win over the cadet shooters, after beating Norwich in 1966 by a single point, 1282-1281. After having lost initially to Maine last semester, the Cats came back with wins over Bowdoin, Dartmouth, and Rhode Island. Averages for the first semester were:

Jim Bellino	-	258
Dick Walker	-	257
Bob Walker	-	253
Dave Keenan	-	252
Steve Curland	-	248

YC Shows Increase In Grid Crowds

Amherst - Contrary to the trend in the East where most Eastern conferences showed a drop in football attendance during the past season, figures released today indicate that attendance at Yankee Conference football games for 1966 showed an increase of 12% over that of a year ago.

The six New England land grant schools played to a total of 134,513 spectators during the past fall, an all time high during the twenty year history of the league.

J. Orlean Christian, who began his duties last fall as the first commissioner of the Yankee Conference, attributed the increase partly to the fact that some of the member schools have recently expanded their football facilities and also to the revelation that every school plays a full conference schedule.

Massachusetts, which has won the conference title three of the last four years, lead in overall attendance last fall, but Christian is quick to point out that the noticeable increases in attendance at Vermont, Rhode Island and New Hampshire have been instrumental in the recent upswing in overall attendance figures.

Gutterson Field House, the hockey arena at the University of Vermont, is named for Albert Gutterson, Vermont alumnus and the 1912 Olympic broad jump champion.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF BOSTON

Meet a group of young Boston bankers. They are executives of The First National Bank of Boston, New England's oldest and largest. They're men on the move ... sharp, talented, aggressive and making a good place in the business.

A short time ago they were doing some soul-searching, too. "Graduation, and then what?"

Quite honestly, many of these men never thought about banking. One of them majored in Spanish -- he's now a credit man with our South American operation where the language comes in handy. Another studied Geography and Geology; today, he's an Operations Officer in our highly specialized electronic data processing complex.

At The FIRST, we look for diverse educational backgrounds. Specifically, we want men of flexibility who can meet the demands of unusual and challenging situations.

If you are looking toward a career in a growth business, take a good hard look at The FIRST. We have the opportunities ... we'll even make a position for the right man.

One of our Personnel Officers will be on campus February 9th and 10th. We suggest that you contact your Placement Bureau to set up an interview. If you'd like to get a headstart, write to our Mr. Emory Mower, The First National Bank of Boston, 67 Milk Street, Boston. He'll be glad to send you a special booklet about working at The FIRST.

UVM Hosts St. Mike's Wednesday

Cats Seek 5th W in Saturday

THE INSIDER

By BOB JACOBS

With 47 seconds remaining in the game, play was marred when tempers flared. Dave Lapointe was charging U of Mass. back-court man Lisack ready to settle their little altercation in a quite decidedly physical manner. Big Tim Edwards then stepped in and settled things by wrapping his sinewy arms around Lapointe and imparting some words of advice. This is significant because Edwards took charge whenever anything was in doubt. He did everything but slice and hand out the oranges at halftime in his one-man effort that carried UMass by the Cats 65-51.

Vermont used a variety of defenses shifting from zone to man to man to befuddle a tough UMass quintet that had beaten such formidable opponents as DePaul and U. of Texas. High-flying Billy Tindell, a 6'5" greyhound, was held to 11 points, considerably below his 18 point plus average. Bob Murphy, a flashy, but erratic performer for UMass, had 12 points before he fouled out. As was previously mentioned, Edwards was the major factor in preventing an upset as he poured in 23 points and snatched 16 rebounds, although in foul trouble most of the second half.

Billy Librera twisted his way through the big UMass front line for a total of 16 points on 8 of 15 from the floor. He ripped boards for a total of 10 rebounds, a department in which the Cats are sadly deficient as a team. A 12 point and 8 rebound effort were the nights work for Alden Hale, who continued to show his improvement over last year. Back from his illness and now rounding into mid-season form is Dave Lapointe, who cut the cards 11 points.

The Cats were outshot both from the floor 45% to 42%, and from the charity stripe 53.6% to 50%. Although the visitors were at the free throw line 10 more times than UVM, our poor foul shooting seems to indicate that we wouldn't have capitalized if given the chance. The Redmen are now 5-0 in Conference play and Vermont stands at 1-7.

The Cadets of Norwich were our next opponents on Tuesday night and it was within the realm of possibility that UVM might come out victorious, if it could cut down on ball-handling misuses and improve on its foul shooting. The player to watch in this one would be Paul Stukowski, a crackerjack jump shooter and hustling defender. If he is contained, the Green and Gold will be in fine shape.

Editor's Note: Vermont's foul shooting did improve against Norwich as they made an excellent 21 of 25 attempts for 84%. Also, the Cats contained Stukowski, limiting him to four points in the first half, although he finished with 24 for the night. The result was a hard-earned 77-66 win over State Series rival Norwich.

Swimmers Defeat HC

By Mick Kropsky

Coch Les Leggett's varsity swimmers were the one bright spot in an otherwise bleak day for UVM sports. While the hockey, basketball, and indoor track teams all went down to defeat, the UVM swimmers won easily over McGill University of Montreal, 54-37.

From the beginning of the meet it was all Vermont. In the very first event, the 400-yard medley relay, UVM's Dave Striker, John Cole, Jim Harrod and Tom Mills set a pool and school record with a time of 4:01.2. In all, UVM took firsts in seven out of eleven events in winning its third straight duel meet. Outstanding for the Cats were John Cole and co-captains Tom Mills and Pete Gross. Mills and Cole, beside being part of the record breaking 400-yard medley relay foursome, both took first places - Mills in the 100-yard freestyle and Cole in the 200-yard breaststroke. Gross copped two firsts, in the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard butterfly.

The varsity swim team's next outing will be this Saturday, Feb. 4, in a meet against Plattsburgh State at the Patrick Gym. The frosh swimmers will also see action this weekend in a meet against Kimball Union.

400-yard medley relay - 1. Striker, D. 2. Cole 3. Harrod, J. 4. Mills, T. - 4:01.2, Vermont.
200-yard freestyle - 1. McGuire (M) 2. Aurph-Guire (M) 2. Sutphen, J (V) 3. Hunter, C. (V) - 1:59.0.
50-yard freestyle - 1. Campbell, D. (V) 2. Muller (M) 3. Davis, S. (V) - :24.0.

200-yard individual medley - 1. Gross, P. (V) 2. Bourne (M) 3. Barken, B. (V) -2:19.7.
Diving - 1. Gravel, R. (M) 2. Resnick, F. (V) 3. Smith, P. (M) - 205.45 pts.

200-yard butterfly - 1. Gross P. (V) 2. Harrod, J. (V) 3. Frenette (M) - 2:25.4.

100-yard freestyle - 1. Mills, T. (V) 2. McGuire (M) 3. Campbell, D. (V) - :50.8.

200-yard freestyle - 1. Striker, J. (V) 2. Waugh (M) 3. Deyona, T. (V) - 2:14.6.

500-yard freestyle - 1. Bourne (M) 2. Sutphen, J. (V) 3. Zialkowski (M) - 5:31.8.

200-yard breaststroke - 1. Cole, J. (V) 2. Kinsey, J. (V) 3. Frenette (M) 2:34.5.

Final Results: UVM 54, McGill 37.

Defense The Key

By Ted Ryan

Tuning up for its games with Springfield on Saturday and Yankee Conference foe Rhode Island on Monday, the University of Vermont basketball team finally returned to winning ways Tuesday night with a 77-66 victory over state rival Norwich University.

Big Alden Hale, whose twin brother is a star at the University of Maine, turned in one of the best performances of his collegiate career by topping Vermont with 20 points, including 16 in the first half as the Cats romped to a 17-point half time advantage.

Sparked by the uncanny shooting of Paul Stukowski, Norwich stormed back as the second half started. Stukowski bucketed seven of his first eight shots in the second half, while the Cadets sliced Vermont's lead to 54-50 at one point.

But University of Vermont coach Art Loche, whose reputation as a talented defensive coach is rapidly growing, switched sophomore sensation Dave Lapointe's defensive play sparked and the Cats gradually increased the spread between the two teams.

The showing was the second straight fine defensive play following a series of high-scoring game against Yankee Conference foes. On Saturday, Yankee Conference leader Massachusetts had a battle before overcoming the Cats, 65-51. Fourteen points is still a decisive edge but the Redmen are rapidly gaining a reputation among small colleges throughout the nation.

Despite the loss, the Vermont effort in the Massachusetts game drew praise from Loche. "Considering the team we were playing, I was very pleased. The boys have shown much improvement," the former New York University star and captain said.

Loche singled out Hale, Bill Librera and Sandy McLeod for their work off the backboards. The Cats' starting center Rusty Boardman sat out the game for disciplinary reasons.

"We had a strong defense but the breaks were against us. Those two 4-point plays definitely hurt us. The kids played a good game. We always do well against them," Loche added.

Overall, the Catamounts are 4-11. In Yankee Conference play, Vermont has only one victory (against Maine) and eight losses. Still ahead for UVM are five state series games, including Wednesday's clash with arch-rival St. Michael's at the Roy

KITTEN TALK

By Sandy Luckenbill

It was a snowy week for the freshman teams at UVM. The basketball team snowed the Norwich frosh in a fantastic exhibition of overpowering basketball, the hockey team was snowed under by a fast bunch of Canadian skaters attending St. Lawrence, and the swimming team was just plain snowed out, as their opponents failed to show because of the weather conditions.

The Freshman Hockey team travelled to Canton, New York where St. Lawrence handed them a sound beating. It was its third defeat in four starts. The St. Lawrence squad outskated the slower UVM Kittens and sliced the nets for 11 goals to UVM's 4.

John Cussen pounded the goal first for UVM in the first period for his sixth goal of the year. Later on in the first quarter Bart Frisbie tied the score at 2 apiece with his first tally of the year. From this point on it was all St. Lawrence as the first period ended 5-2. In the second period Jim Yeates put on a sparkling performance as he scored twice giving him a season total of 3. The period ended with St. Lawrence in the lead 7-4. The final period was curtains for the Kitten skaters as they were out scored, 4 to 0.

The defense couldn't contain the much quicker St. Lawrence squad. Every time they turned around the puck was flying toward the Green and Gold goal. Goalie Russ Watson put out a fantastic game as he grabbed 47 saves. He in effect was the whole defense as he relentlessly knocked away goal bound pucks.

The team will be without the services of high scoring John Cussen for discipline problems, and Geogre Kreiner as well as Dick Mullany, who are recovering from injuries recieved over the weekend. The next game for the ice Kittens is Kimball Union in New Hampshire, the only team they have beaten this year.

The Kitten basketball team made cub scouts out of the Norwich Cadets. The final score was 82-44, but the score is not a true indication of the game. The first team only played half the game, and so out classed the Norwich boys, that Coach Lapointe went with his bench for a large part of the game.

Frank Martiniuk put on an amazing scoring show as he hit for 25 points, while playing only a little over half the game. His long jump shots found the mark, and his drives to the hoop were impossible to stop.

The strong point of this team, however is not one individual, but it is the whole squad. Every man played in the game Tuesday, and the victory was a team effort. Roy Greenman called the signals and directed that team on offense, as well as scoring 12 points. Sandy Magid and Ray Bueb put forth great games on the offensive boards and Aldo Salati owned the defensive rebounds. Bob Hutton was fantastic on defense as he stuffed many a Norwich effort. The bench looks strong as Bill Laufer and Brendon Foster combined to score 13 points.

How good is this team? They have a 3 and 1 record and the only loss was to Dartmouth, a team which has only lost one game; that one to UVM in a return match. They beat St. Michael's whose record is 8 and 2. When one stops to think that the Kittens only allowed Norwich to shoot inside the foul line 4 times in the entire game, I think one has to comment that great varsity basketball teams are in the future for UVM.

Female Cagers Away

By Terrie Wurzbacher

The UVM girls' basketball team ventures to Plattsburgh, New York, tomorrow in an attempt to hustle its way to its first victory in the initial game

L. Patrick Gymnasium. Vermont, involved in two overtime games with St. Mike's a year ago, shared the state title with St. Mike's last year.

The Michaelmen, who will be favored, are one of the top college division teams in New England. Star Dick Falkenbush has been named to the ECAC team for four consecutive weeks.

of the season. The cagers will be highlighting a series of first semester practices. This contest serves as the stepping-stone for their well-filled schedule. The girls will engage in battle with several other close-by universities and colleges. In addition, they shall host a basketball sportsday late in February. To keep practice well-controlled, the basketball officiating class supervises the play. The girls in that class are striving to achieve their National Officials Rating, entitling them to officiate anywhere in the U.S.

Last night saw the beginning games in the double elimination tournament between the dorms and sororities. This is annual competition and creates a healthy rivalry for the championship. Dr. Davenport, of the Women's Physical Education Department, has taken on quite a responsibility in handling all the activities of UVM women interested in the rough and ready action of basketball.

The intercollegiate team has good potential and the girls await the results of this first match. The following Saturday, Feb. 11, the Cage-girls will receive Plattsburgh in a return meet at Patrick gym. The outcome of these first games should reflect the hard work the girls have done

Dick Gregory Co-Stars With Ramsey Lewis

Dick Gregory

The Kake Walk Directors announce the talent which will round out the Kake Walk Weekend.

Dick Gregory, the well-known Negro comedian, will entertain at the Jazz Concert on Friday afternoon at 1:00 p.m. With the intelligence, sophistication, and none of the buffoonery of Amos n' Andy, Dick became the first Negro comedian to make his way into the night club big time.

Dick has appeared at Chicago's Playboy Club, San Francisco's Hungry I, Freddie's in Minneapolis, and New York's Blue Angel.

What makes Gregory refreshing is not only that he feels secure enough to joke about the trials and triumph of his own race but that he can laugh in a sort of brotherhood of humor, with white men about their own problems.

Some of his commentary has even more insight humor, and some is farcically broad, as when he tells about three white brothers called Ku, Klux, and Klan, who once surrounded him in a restaurant saying, "You can't eat that chicken in here; whatever you do to that chicken, we're going to do to you." What did Gregory do? "I kissed the chicken."

MOTOWN GROUP ALSO TO APPEAR

Appearing with Gregory will be an additional entertainment group. Mamie Lee and the Swingmen, straight from Motown Detroit, will make a special appearance. Mamie Lee was voted Motown's Artist of the Year Award in 1966.

Greeks Present Candidates In Pops Night Skits, Friday

Janice Fucci, Alpha Chi Omega's beauty, is a native of Rutland, Vermont. A Junior with a major in Zoology, she plans to enter the field of medical research upon graduation.

Janice is kept busy with several activities. She is a S.A. representative, serving on the ceremonial committee; the chaplain in Alpha Chi Omega; she made a final showing in the 1966 Miss Vermont Pageant. Last fall she was a Greek Week candidate from Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Her favorite hobby is sewing and she designs most of her clothes. She also enjoys water sports and dancing.

Gamma Phi Beta's Queen of Hearts, Elaine Farrell, is a Junior from Burlington, Vermont. She is a Liberal Arts Student majoring in history.

Elaine has been an active member of the Student Association, is a charter member of the Model United Nations Association, and works as a Committee Chairman for the Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament. She has also done work for the Social Welfare Department as a volunteer at Mary Fletcher Hospital.

Upon graduation, Elaine plans to go into secretarial work.

Delta Delta Delta's "Fairest of Them All" is Miss Susan Fick, a senior from Wyckoff, New Jersey. Her major is Textiles and Clothing and her future plans include a career in retailing.

Susan is Vice President of her sorority, a WSGA House President and a member of the Home Economics Club. Her special interests include skiing, tennis and piano. She spent the previous summer studying at the Sorbonne and traveling throughout France.

Susan is currently on the Dean's List and was a runner-up in the 1964 Miss Vermont Pageant.

Lambda Iota Fraternity is proud to present Donald "Dutch" DeVries as their candidate for Kake Walk King 1967. Dutch is a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences from Farmingdale, L.I., majoring in Industrial Personnel Administration.

Among his activities, Dutch is a member of the Society for the Advancement of Management, a UVM male cheerleader, (the familiar racoon coat and straw hat), and a Kake Walker for two years. In addition, Dutch has served as Lambda Iota's Rush Chairman and Vice President and currently is their president.

Sigma Phi is proud to announce the candidacy of Jim Fontanella for Kake Walk King 1967. Jim has shown his leadership qualities to all in his three years on campus. He is the past president of his Freshman and Sophomore class, and is currently serving as President of the University of Vermont's Student Association and treasurer of Sigma Phi. Jim, a Civil Engineering Major, has been a member of Gold Key and Key and Serpent honoraries and plans to obtain his Masters in Business Administration following the completion of his undergraduate career.

Delta Psi presents Henry "Chip" Uihlein as its candidate for Kake Walk King. Chip is a senior Economics major from Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He is a conscientious student and has always participated in house projects, as well as being on the executive board. Leading the house in intramurals, Henry is also a co-captain of this year's hockey team. He has been a starting center and leading scorer on the hockey team for the last three years.

Acacia Fraternity is proud to present Gary Lawson as its King Candidate for Kake Walk 1967. In his sophomore year at the University of Vermont, Gary was elected to the Men's Residence Hall Assembly, joined the Madrigal and UVM choirs and became a brother of Acacia Fraternity.

In his junior year he was elected class president and was house chairman and athletic chairman for Acacia. This year Gary was elected president of the senior class and became president of the History Honorary Society. A major in political sciences, Gary's plans include Law School after finishing college.

Floor Counselor Applications Now Being Accepted

ATTENTION: UNDERGRADUATE MEN

Applications for undergraduate floor counselors in the Men's Residence Halls are now being accepted.

Information and applications for these floor counselor positions may be obtained at the Office of the Dean of Men, 125 Waterman Building. These applications will be accepted through Monday, February 20. Undergraduate counselors' appointments are from September 1, 1967 to May 19, 1968.

All floor counselors receive remission of the single room charge for their duties. Further details concerning the position will be discussed in a required general meeting which will be held on February 20 at 6:30 p.m. in the MAT Lounge.

Students Petition For New Housing Policy

Late Monday afternoon February 6, in response to the Administration's plan to rescind the temporary housing policy, students started circulating a petition urging the Administration not to take this action. As of Tuesday afternoon at least 1000 students signed. There will be a table set up in downstairs Billings on Monday and Tuesday, February 13 and 14 for the convenience of those who wish to sign. The petition appears on page 4.

Mr. & Mrs. Maurice Belair at Ski Lodge

Belairs Operate Ski Lodge

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Belair, resident managers of the UVM Outing Club Lodge, came here from a varied background of experience. Vermonters, they operated a guest house in Bradford for eight years where Belair was an insurance agent. In 1956, with their four children, they went to Rhodesia as commissioned missionaries for the United Church Board for World Ministries. Mr. Belair served as mission treasurer and business manager, and Mrs. Belair taught English and scripture in the teacher training program.

She was also commissioner for Girl Guides (Scouts) and homecraft chairman in the women's work, as well as editor of the mission newspaper. Belair served as farm manager of Mt. Silinda farms and as state superintendent.

Before they returned to the United States in 1962, they spent seven weeks camping with their children in Europe and the British Isles. They traveled to churches in New England and as far west as Ohio during the following year speaking on behalf of Christian World Missions.

For the past three years they have served as superintendent and hostess at the Walker Missionary Homes in Auburn-dale, Mass., where they had charge of seven buildings for the use of retired missionaries, nationals who are studying in the United States, and missionaries on furlough between assignments.

During that time, the Belairs traveled to Mexico, Portugal and Madeira. After seeing so much of the world, they decided they were still Vermonters at heart. On September first, they returned to become resident managers of the Lodge. They like the Madonna area so much, they have just built on the Mountain Road a log cabin which they will rent until they retire.

Belair grew up in Vermont, graduating from Woodstock High School and Rutland Business College.

Mrs. Belair, a native Vermonter, graduated from Hartford High School, and from the University of Vermont in 1937, where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega, Mortar Board, WAA and women's editor of the CYNIC.

They are both enthusiastic about the people who have used the Lodge. Everyone has been pleasant, cooperative, and fun to have there. This includes not only UVM students, but some from MIT, Wentworth, Curry, and the University of New Hampshire.

"If they are all like these," the Belairs say, "we hope they come by the dozens."

Speech Department Offers Major in Dramatics

For those students who previously rejected UVM because of its inadequate theater program, the speech department has recently added a drama major. UVM has always had some courses in dramatics, but never until this year, had it had enough to justify the claim of having a drama major. Most other state universities have such a program and UVM realized its responsibility as a state university, of offering courses in all the important areas of man's endeavors.

The courses in drama which are now offered are: Introduction to Theater, Acting, Play Directing, Development of Western Theatre, Stagecraft, Advanced Acting, Honors or Special Readings, Classical Rhetoric, General Semantics, Lighting, and Scene Design. In addition to these courses there is one in the summer, Repertory Theatre Operation, which is connected with the Champlain Shakespeare Festival.

This program, which meets with the AETA standards, is not concerned primarily with training professionals, but is rather, an academic program. However, it works hand in hand with the University Players, so ample chance is given to those who want acting experience. In addition to the University Players, there is also Upshot, made up of members of the Players, but devoted to new and avant-garde plays, and the Playtimers, a student-directed group which tours Vermont presenting one-act children's plays to various elementary schools. Also, each year the speech department, under Dr. London, and particularly the drama section of it under Mr. Feidner, put on two or more plays representative of important periods in the theatre. This year "The Recruiting Officer" by Farquhar is from the eighteenth century theater, and Pinter's "The Birthday Party," is contemporary.

At the present moment there are only six students who are actually majoring in dramatics, but with the new program and hopes of an even better one, we expect the number to increase rapidly.

Bridge Club Meeting Is Sunday, Feb. 12

The bridge club is having a problem finding people to play -- of all things -- bridge. Consequently, it is having a final "go at it," Sunday Feb. 12, at 2 p.m.

If you are interested in "that kind of endeavor" come and participate. This will be the last rise before the final fall, as it were. Death seems to be imminent; apathy -- ever present.

Engineering Career?

You can climb faster
at ACCO
...where the ACTION is Exciting opportunities are open now at American Chain & Cable... a leading manufacturer of diversified products that are serving many of today's growth industries.

Recent engineering graduates are working at ACCO now in such varied specialties as solid-state electronics... aerospace component design... metallurgy... oceanography... inertial guidance... instrumentation for utilities and process industries... data processing... sophisticated material handling systems...

Upper-rung positions can open up for you sooner... because of ACCO's unusual organization into "groups." Over-all, ACCO is big. Financially, in geographic spread, in markets served, and in scientific contributions. Yet all operating units in every ACCO group are small enough to let you establish identity fast.

Class of '67: Visit your placement office now and arrange for an interview with the ACCO recruiter. He will be on campus...

Classes of '68 to '70: We would also like to talk with you about interesting summer jobs at ACCO.

BIRTH CONTROL AND SEX THE DALHOUSIE GAZETTE

Dal's policy: Contraceptives will not be dispensed to unmarried students for other than medical disorders. However, every physician must practice medicine in a manner best suited to serve the student. In Ottawa, the Commons health committee has urged that birth control information be made legal under the supervision of the Federal Food and Drugs Act. A black market in pills is operating in London. The pills—which often do not work—are peddled to teenagers and co-eds for about $5 a month, several times the usual price of $1.85. Girls often use the threat of dealing in the black market to pry a prescription from doctors.

Quote from the senior medical officer of the National Board of Health: Which is better: for your daughter to sleep with an unknown boy in the forest under a fir tree or for your daughter to sleep with a boy known to you in your house? Robert Moskin; those who demand reform say that moralizing goes so far that it is irrelevant to young people's thinking about sexuality. They insist that the moral content has no more impact than a modern Sunday morning sermon and, because it preaches total continence, is rejected by many youngsters.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY -

The University is now in the process of preparing the proposal for a clinic which will serve 250 pregnant adolescents, most of who are unmarried. Pregnant high school girls are not allowed to continue their schooling beyond their fourth month of pregnancy. The clinic will try to prevent this stop to the girls' education by providing high school courses during pregnancy. The clinic will reduce the complications of pregnancy and incident of fetal death and premature births by offering medical aid from the fourth month to the child's birth.

THE FULCRUM, OTTAWA - LOVE IS A THREE LETTER WORD -

Sex by tens appears the startling new destiny shaping up for Western society as the pocket money of the Affluent Society's children jingles in the ear of the market strategist and sales engineer. Alice in her chaste, child's wonderland world of cats, and garden swings, summerhouse and fairytale gives way, perhaps for good, to Sally-G8-To-Market for miniskirts, padded bras, and music to love by. The word is out that sex is THE answer to everything—from existential alienation to wet palms. Everybody has forgotten that sex is the way life gets born. Love is the THING. And Love is SEX. Sex swings, swings free and easy like jazz pendulums in cool vacuums. Like two birds cruising forever on blue pot. Like skin dives into joy water.

STAMP OUT YOUNG LOVE

It happens every day. A young man goes off to college, leaving his home town sweetheart with vows of eternal love, and then he finds that he has outgrown her. What, in such cases, is the honorable thing to do?

Well sir, you can do what Crunch Sigafos did.

When Crunch left his home in Cut and Shoot, Pa., to go off to a prominent midwestern university (Florida State) he said to his sweetheart, a wholesome country lass named Mildred Bovine, "My dear, though I am far away in college, I will love you always. I take a mighty oath I will never look at another girl. If I do, may my eyeballs parch and wither, may my viscera writhe like adders, may my ever-press slacks go baggy!"

Then he clutched Mildred to his bosom, flicked some hayseed from her hair, planted a final kiss upon her fragrant young skull, and went away, meaning with all his heart to be faithful.

But on the very first day of college he met a coed named Irmgard Champerty who was studded with culture like a ham with cloves. She knew verbatim the complete works of Franz Kafka, she sang solos in stereo, she wore a black leather jacket with an original Goya on the back.

Well sir, Crunch took one look and his jaw dropped and his nostrils pulsed like a bellows and his kneecaps turned to sorghum. Never had he beheld such sophistication, such intellect, such savoir faire. Not, mind you, that Crunch was a dolt. He was, to be sure, a country boy, but he had a head on his shoulders, believe you me! Take, for instance, his choice of razor blades. Crunch always shaved with Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and if that doesn't show good sense, I am Rex the Wonder Horse. No other blade shaves you so comfortably so often. No other blade brings you such facial felicity, such epidermal elan. Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades take the travail out of shaving, scrap the scrape, negate the nick, peel the pull, oust the ouch. Furthermore, Personnas are available both in double-edge style and in injector style. If you're smart—and I'm sure you are, or how'd you get out of high school—you'll get a pack of Personnas before another sun has set.

But I digress. Crunch, as we have seen, was instantly smitten with Irmgard Champerty. All day he followed her around campus and listened to her talk about Franz Kafka and like that, and then he went back to his dormitory and found this letter from his home town sweetheart Mildred:

Dear Crunch:

Us kids had a keen time yesterday. We went down to the pond and caught some frogs. I caught the most of anybody. Then we hitched rides on trucks and did lots of nutsy stuff like that. Well, I must close now because I got to whitewash the fence.

Your friend,
Mildred

P.S.... I know how to ride backwards on my skateboard.

Well sir, Crunch thought about Mildred and then he thought about Irmgard and then a great sadness fell upon him. Suddenly he knew he had outgrown young, innocent Mildred; his heart now belonged to smart, sophisticated Irmgard.

Being above all things honorable, he returned forthwith to Cut and Shoot, Pa., and looked Mildred straight in the eye and said manlyly, "I do not love you any more. I love another. You can hit me in the stomach all your might if you want to."

"That's okay, hey," said Mildred amiably. "I don't love you neither. I found a new boy."

"What is his name?" asked Crunch.

"Franz Kafka," said Mildred.

"I hope you will be very happy," said Crunch and shook Mildred's hand and they have remained good friends to this day. In fact, Crunch and Irmgard often double-date with Franz and Mildred and have barrels of fun. Franz knows how to ride backwards on his skateboard one-legged.

The Vermont Cynic

VOLUME 84 NUMBER 24 FEBRUARY 10, 1967

EDITORIAL...

At the risk of sounding repetitious, we refer all students to the Vermont Student Movement petition in favor of a more liberal policy on off-campus housing. Incorporating both overcrowded dormitory conditions and changing social attitudes into their argument, the VSM offers a formidable protest against administrative control of student privacy.

Their petition represents the first spark of life in a campus atmosphere which has previously been characterized by a spirit of hopelessness in the face of administrative regulation.

If there are still those who doubt that university regulations can be changed, we urge you to sign this petition. Put 3000 names on Dean Patzer's desk. Then wait. You won't have to wait long. Dean Patzer is a very smart man. And he has very influential friends.

R.B.

In view of the present housing conditions and bearing in mind that the projected housing conditions for 1967-68 will be worse than at present (i.e. beyond capacity) we, the undersigned students submit our appeal to the Administration of the University of Vermont to re-establish its waiver on the present housing policy for the following reasons:

First: We believe that any student above the freshman level with his parents' consent should be granted the opportunity for off campus living. We further maintain that individual maturity can come only through freedom of experience, rather than under the present regulated living system (as in relation to female curfew in particular).

Second: By allowing students to seek off campus housing the pressure on students in the dormitories would be somewhat relaxed, particularly in the case of freshmen - who will have to reside under emergency housing conditions. The first year of University life is the most important year and to handicap the new student body would be, to say the least, unfair.

Finally: We wish to express to the Administration of the University of Vermont that the supposition that this institution shall always be a residential University should be carefully weighed. Encouragement of private housing on University leased land would seem to be the only answer in realistic terms for expanding college enrollment. This, in fact, must be the ultimate answer because the University has no room for satisfactory expansion.

PROFESSORES...

No one not insane still believes the hoary American myth that college students lust after knowledge for the sake of acquiring an education. The notion that a college education is a valuable thing worth any amount of sacrifice, because it broadens and deepens the recipient's understanding of his world, emanated from the New England Puritan tradition.

Today's realists are more frankly mercenary. A college degree is worth hard cash and other less tangible usufructs and emoluments. It is a ticket to the great unorganized union of professional workers who turn out the hardware for the space age in our technocratic rolling mills, such as IBM and GE, and live in Babbitty suburban homes — the little boxes on the hill —, rear totally uninteresting children and never undergo the parturitional pain of having an original idea during the entire trajectory of their lives.

Some of our college students, it is true, are full of shooting pains and fevers for "higher" education. With considerable encouragement from department chairmen, who need someone to "teach" elementary classes, they enter the never-never land of graduate school. There they are brainwashed of all originality, lose their sense of humor and come out as peas-in-the-pod technicians stamped from a master die. The successful among them will publish as rapidly as possible in order to get a position where they can teach as little as possible and research as much as possible. They will become "known in the field," grow old, die and 99.9% will be rapidly forgotten. Few will have known the joy and despair of a life-long struggle to be an educated man.

And so in the United States we have the failure of the intellectuals as the most conspicuous aspect of life in the twentieth century. The merchants of erudition have nothing to offer the young except rehashes of the works of creative minds, nearly all of whom work outside the halls of academe. In the humanities old slogans are offered up; the same old bones are reboiled. The sciences race ahead like psychotic engines out of control, with the scientists urging: Faith in the text of modern man; that science knoweth all, it maketh for the good life.

The bearded young rebels without a cause whose spiritual home is Berkeley and those few professors who labor to "expose" the fraud going on in our graduate schools by writing up their findings in the "Atlantic" or "Harper's", naively believe that a revolution is slowly in the makings which will eventually effect a rapprochement between a college degree and an education for life. This is also the intent of the starry-eyed long hairs who found anti-universities. But they are all mistaken. The population explosion, already congesting colleges, will go on apace. More and more young men and women will acquire the bland and harmless veneer of a college education. Our society will become increasingly concerned with fundamental moral and philosophical issues. The key to the future lies in psychology — the psychology of operant conditioning with hard, cold cash as the reinforcement. And should the technocratic economy falter, the power elite can, no doubt, arrange a war with the Blackmoors of Africa. In such a society a true education would be a disadvantage. Oremus.

PLACEMENT BAROMETER

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Office

CAREERS IN COLLEGE STUDENT PERSONNEL WORK. The opportunities for a challenging career in student personnel work in higher education have never been greater. Not only is the need for qualified persons increasing rapidly as colleges and universities expand, but the types of jobs being offered are such that a variety of backgrounds and talents are in demand. The need and opportunities exist for both men and women:

WHAT IS STUDENT PERSONNEL WORK? The college student personnel worker helps students, individually and in groups, to take full advantage of the many opportunities offered in the academic community of the university, college or junior college. Emphasis is on the student's needs and aspirations, intellectual, personal, psychological, social and physical growth so that the student may achieve his/her own goals and the goals of society as reflected by the particular institution the student attends. The student personnel worker may act as an informal teacher advising students as they participate in college life and activities; the worker may function as a professional counselor to students seeking solutions to personal problems; or may operate as an administrator in planning, organizing and supervising programs and facilities providing service to students. College student personnel work allows both the liberal arts graduate and the specialist to make use of their talents. The degree of specialization varies according to the size and philosophy of the institution and the interests of the individual entering the field. There is no simple model program for college student personnel work. This variety provides many different and challenging openings for people with differing backgrounds and interests.

This column gives the individual schools an opportunity to recognize publicly, their outstanding campus leaders.

For the near future the Council plans an expansion of the activities and events directed by the group.

SCHOLARSHIPS OFFERED

The Political Science Department has announced that there are available, for senior pre-law students, two full tuition scholarships. These scholarships are for the Chicago School of Law and the Boston College Law School.

All interested students should contact the Political Science Department before February 15, 1967.

M. Wortman

Wortman Joins Peace Corps

Miles Wortman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Wortman, 3601 Jonsson Avenue, Bronx, New York has been named a Peace Corps Volunteer after completing 8 weeks of training at Texas Technological University in Lubbock and 4 weeks of field work in Puerto Rico.

He is one of 40 Volunteers trained this fall in Texas to expand Peace Corps work in Costa Rica's community development program. The group which left for Costa Rica on December 26, is working with families in newly-built low income housing projects, helping organize and strengthen credit unions. They are assigned to large cities and a few rural communities.

During training in Texas, the new Volunteers received intensive Spanish language training, Central America history and culture, U.S. history and world affairs. Puerto Rican training added practical experience in community development and organizing cooperatives.

With this group's arrival 217 Volunteers are at work in Costa Rica in education and community development programs.

ICC Elects New Officers

Election of the 1967-68 officers of the Inter-Collegiate Council of Burlington, Vt. was held on Wednesday January 25, 1967. Topping the list of the new officers is Douglas Knibelauch '69 of St. Michael's College who was elected President. The vice-president's spot went to Louise Maltezas '69 of Trinity College. Cheryl Burrus '68 and Bob Williams '68 of the University of Vermont were chosen secretary and treasurer respectively.

The brain child of a St. Michael's Alumnus, Frank Geleir '64 the Inter-Collegiate Council was founded in September of 1963. The organization is patterned of a similar group of collegians who operate in the tri-city area of Albany, Schenectady and Troy, N.Y.

Members of the I.C.C. represent the interest of five area schools: the University of Vermont, St. Michael's College, Champlain College, Trinity College and Jean Mance School of Nursing.

The purpose of the organization according to the preamble of its newly drafted constitution is to promote "a better understanding among the colleges and universities of the Council area. The field of cooperation shall be intellectual, social and cultural activities that would require or suggest intercollegiate coordination, and good will."

Council meetings are rotated among the various member schools. Each College has the same number of representatives: 2 Seniors, 2 Juniors, 2 Sophomores and a Freshman elected in January.

Projects that the I.C.C. supports include lectures and the publishing of the Inter-Collegiate calendar, which serves as a list of events which are of collegian interest and pertain to members of all the schools. It also sponsors the 'Student of the Week' column in the local newspaper.

PEOPLE INTERESTED IN THE BUSINESS ASPECT OF THE VERMONT CYNIC (Advertising, Business)

Contact: G. Josephson - 2-4069 or leave Name and Number in the Business Box at The CYNIC Office

"Business is for the birds!"

Who says so?

Lots of people do. Some right on your campus. And for rationale, they point an accusing finger at business and say it lacks "social commitment."

Social commitment? We wish they could visit our Kearny, N. J. plant, where we make cable and apparatus for your Bell telephone company. But we have time for other thoughts, other talents.

Like the situation in nearby Newark.

With civic and business leaders, we began buzzing with ideas. "Let's teach higher skills to some of the un-employed and under-employed. Say, machine shop practice. They could qualify for jobs that are going begging - and help themselves as well."

We lent our tool-and-die shop, evenings. We found volunteer instructors. A community group screened applicants. Another supplied hand tools. The Boys

Club donated classroom facilities. Another company sent more instructors.

Some 70 trainees enrolled. Their incentive? Self-improvement. Results to date? New people at better jobs. Happier.

And this is only one of dozens of social-minded projects at Western Electric plants across the country, where our first job is making communications equipment for the Bell System.

So, you don't give up ideals when you graduate. If anything, at a company like, say, Western Electric, you add to them. And it's not just a theory. It's practice. Satisfying. Come on and find out. And watch a feathered cliché fly out the window.

MANUFACTURING & SUPPLY UNIT OF THE BELL SYSTEM

Perception - The Cynic

By Jan Quackenbush

By accident, I found myself one day last week among three young men and one young lady having an informal discussion. In a similar manner, quite by accident, they soon found themselves in the midst of a debate. And, as has been known to happen, quite by accident, they were soon arguing bitterly. "Such is the way wars begin," I thought to myself as I eagerly observed each neat accusation.

And then, long before the terms for peace had even been considered, sober discussion began again - accidentally, of course; and I left the room thinking: accidents will happen.

But what they were arguing about is what interested me the most. Apparently, it was over the CYNIC, its staff and its value as a newspaper. It seems two of the group were in a position to vote funds, while one was in a position to receive them (the fourth being that all important - link!)

The first two were concerned; the CYNIC is a cliché! The CYNIC is biased! The CYNIC is opinionated; it is worthless!

The third was aggravated; he writes for the CYNIC! He does his best! He writes what he believes! If that isn't good enough, he will gladly allow the other two to use his column to write what they believe! (They declined.)

The fourth, remained cool.

But I want to say this; and it's what I believe: a newspaper does two things: report the news accurately and commentate upon it. Now in my opinion (hang on to that word) the CYNIC is faultless (except, perhaps, for typographical errors) if the first case. We know all about President McCune, Bobby Mitchell and Lester Lanin.

In my opinion, the CYNIC is faultless in the second, too. That is to say, it advances just as many opinions (commentaries) as any respectable newspaper for its size should.

So the REAL issue, when all the fat is boiled off the bone, is only this: should a guy or two or the group they represent, support something, in this case the CYNIC, whose opinions they disagree with? And I'll say honestly, I'm referring to the Student Association through whose funds the CYNIC is. Knowing it's a matter of personal subjectivity, and realizing his is one of 5,000; the objective student will say: "Yes, on one condition; that being that something good is coming out of it."

And THAT can only be answered by the paper's reading public; not by two out of 5,000.

So when you guys call for an investigation, I suggest with no sarcasm intended, that you first investigate the public; remembering, of course, that it's all a matter of opinion - public opinion at that, the same public which elected you to represent its viewpoint.

Red Lane Series

Royal Winnipeg Ballet Returns to UVM

By Judy Beeber

Highlighting the next Red Lane Series will be the Royal Winnipeg Ballet which will perform on Saturday, Feb. 11 in Memorial auditorium at 8:30 p.m. The company appeared in Burlington once before, in the summer of 1964.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is the oldest company in Canada and is now its twenty-seventh season. There are only four ballet companies which have the privilege to use "Royal" in their names. The Winnipeg Ballet was granted permission to use "Royal" in its corporate name by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in 1953. Thus, the troupe became Canada's first royal ballet.

Many of the dancers from the troupe are from different parts of the world. Several are from the United States, Great Britain, Finland, Australia, Germany, Switzerland and Spain. The company's leading prima ballerina, Christine Hennessy, is a native of Connecticut and has previously danced leading roles with the Ballet de Russe de Monte Carlo, the Bremen Opera Ballet and the Robert Joffrey Ballet. Along with Miss Hennessy is another leading dancer new to the company, Leo Ahonen. He has previously been a member of the Russian Bolshoi Ballet and the Finnish National Ballet.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is under the direction of Arnold Spohr. He originally started his career as a dancer and, in 1945, came from Saskatchewan to audition. He rose from the corps de ballet to become a principal dancer. His career was at its apex when he partnered Alicia Markova. Today, the great tradition of ballet does not confine Spohr. He is interested in all dancing that is meaningful to people anywhere in the world. To study dance, he has visited countries on every continent. Spohr has searched many cultures for all the kinds of dancing known, from the most primitive to the

to the general public at the door. For the evening, the company will perform "Napoli, Act III," "Out of Lesbos," "Pas d'Action," "Corsaire Pas De Deux," and "Les Whoops-De-Doo."

Christine Hennessy and James Clouser, principal dancers with Canada's Royal Winnipeg Ballet are seen at the 1966 Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival during the week of August 16th to 20th. Two original works by Clouser, "Bagatella" and "Out of Lesbos" will be danced by the pair.

more sophisticated, from Bushman to Balinese to Ballet.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet has several choreographers. Official choreographer for the company is Brian Macdonald, a Canadian who also directs the Royal Swedish Ballet in Stockholm. Agnes de Mille and Ruthanna Boris have also created several ballets for the company. James Clouser is the ballet master, assistant director and leading dancer of the company. He has choreographed seven ballets, composed the music for some of these and designed costumes for several others as well.

In Burlington, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet will give two performances, a youth concert in the afternoon and another concert at night. Three ballets will be performed for the afternoon concert and tickets will be available

Arnott Presents Greek Plays With Marionettes

Dr. Peter Arnott will be on the campus this Tuesday and Wednesday presenting two one-man productions of Greek plays.

Dr. Arnott is a member of the classics and drama departments at the University of Iowa, and is well-known translator of many Classical dramas. As a part of his Eastern tour Dr. Arnott will make his first Vermont appearance here with a production of "Oedipus," Tues. at 8:30 p.m. and of "Medea," Wed., at 3:30 p.m.

Both productions will be in the Arena Theatre and are free and open to the public. These are not children's puppet shows, but are sophisticated dramas in their own right.

Dr. Arnott does all the building, manipulation, and voices for his marionettes. His wife does the costumes.

Chamber Arts Series

Met Star to Appear Feb. 12

By Judy Beeber

Appearing on the next Chamber Arts Series will be Sherrill Milnes, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He will sing on Monday, Feb. 12 in the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 p.m. Last year, Milnes made history in Burlington when he sang the role of Figaro in the New York City Opera production of "The Barber of Seville."

Milnes grew up on a farm in Chicago where his life was filled with music. His mother was a professional musician and taught Milnes how to read music. His first professional singing job was with Margaret Hillis' choir in Chicago. In 1961, he sang Gerard in "Andrea Chenier" in Baltimore, coached by Rosa Ponselle. As a winner of the American Opera Auditions, he sang "Figaro" in Milan and Florence. In 1962, Milnes was one of the winners of the Ford Foundation Awards. The prize included Foundation sponsored appearances with designated U.S. opera companies. In addition to working under the maestro Boris Goldovsky, Milnes sang with the Pittsburgh, San Antonio, Houston, Central City and Cincinnati Opera companies.

In 1964, Milnes joined the New York Opera and in 1965, he auditioned for Rudolf Bing in Atlanta during the Metropolitan Opera Spring Tour. Thus, he made his Metropolitan debut in December, 1965 as Valentin in "Faust."

Milnes spends his summers in Cincinnati, at Chicago's Grant Park and other festivals. This year, he will do Renato during the spring tour and the Lincoln Center Festival in June, then record "La Traviata" and perhaps "Così Fan Tutte" for RCA Victor.

For his Lane concert of Feb. 12, Milnes will sing the arias from the operas "Daniel Webster," "Prince Igor," and "Faust." Other pieces to be sung will be Stradella's "Col Mio Sangue Compreni," Dougherty's "Shennadoah," Janoski's "Ovinu Malketnu" among many others. Jan Behr will accompany Milnes at the piano.

Art Exhibit By Davies Open

Recent work by Hanlyn Davies, the art department's new instructor in design and painting, is featured in an exhibition that opens Feb. 11.

The show includes ten paintings, number of drawings, silk-screen and intaglio prints, plus an environmental painting built into the corner of the museum's main gallery. Davies' work is immaculately hard-edge and while not meant as "op," deals with the interaction of color and space illusions in carefully calculated geometric patterns.

Davies will discuss his work and ideas in a gallery talk Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. A reception will follow. The exhibition will continue through March 5.

Davies, who joined the department this fall, is from Wales and studied at the Swansea College of Art and the University of Wales. He came to this country to do graduate work in the School of Art at Yale where he got his M.F.A. in 1966.

He has exhibited in the Collectors Gallery at Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford and was represented in a British Arts Council traveling exhibition of art from Wales, as well as group shows at Dillwyn Gallery in Swansea and the Howard Roberts Gallery in Cardiff.

Cats Visit Larries Saturday

THE INSIDER

By BOB JACOBS

Frustration was the only fruit the Cats were to taste for their efforts after slipping by Norwich last Wednesday. After battling tooth and nail with Springfield, the Green and Gold succumbed, losing a three point ballgame. Yet, perhaps the most bitter defeat the UVM basketball club will experience this year came last Monday night at the Patrick gym.

Rhode Island came into the contest having played some of the toughest teams in the nation. The triumvirate of Larry Johnson, Art Stephenson, and former schoolboy sensation from New York City, Tommy Hoyle, has beaten teams the likes of Northwestern (the leading scoring team in the nation), St. Bonaventure, and St. John's. To the incognoscenti of basketball, this team represents a big time basketball school in its incipience. The players are young and capable, and the schedule is easily of the caliber of most big time basketball schools.

At 6-1, Larry Johnson resembles NYU star Mal Graham as he stops short to unerringly launch his soft, twirling jumper into the twine. Art Stephenson is a 6-5, 220 lb. Brahma bull who thrives on contact and intimidates all those who come into his domain under the boards. The youngster of the big three is Hoyle, who, like Stephenson, is a New York City boy, but is a lithe 6-5 leaper who figured to hurt us off the boards. He gets most of his points underneath.

The Rams seemed a bit blasé about the whole affair in the beginning, and the Cats responded by hitting eight out of their first nine shots from the floor. By playing steady patterned ball the UVM quintet was able to hit consistently on short jumpers, and particularly on reverses. We cut down on the number of turnovers (ball-handling errors) and played our combination defense almost to perfection. Bill Librera in particular was impressive showing continued improvement offensively while doing yeoman work off the boards. While Librera was brilliant from the floor (14 points on 7 completions out of 12 attempts), Dave Lapointe was adding to his 21 points by hitting 11 of 13 from the foul line. Alden Hale continued his torrid shooting, but was not shooting enough, as he only put the ball up six times during the fracas. Mention must be made also of Terry O'Leary's fine contribution, as he came off the bench to hit on all four of his field goal attempts.

Despite all the personal triumphs in this game, the fact is not altered that we lost the game. At half time we trailed 37-35, but came out to fight them right down to the wire. For instance, with five minutes left we were still up by four, 62-58. But the statistics are revealing—Stephenson and Hoyle began hitting the boards in earnest while Johnson continued his long ranged bombing (10 for 15 from the field) and the Rams wore us down.

This attrition was most in evidence on the boards where Hoyle had 15 rebounds and Stephenson 17 while UVM had no one with more than 6 in this vital department. With 2:04 left, Lapointe fouled out with us 4 points down and the Rams were virtually assured of a victory. They held the ball and we were forced to foul, giving them a 77-64 victory. Also illuminating is the fact that while we outshot them from both the foul line and the field, they outrebounded us by more than 20.

GIRL SKIERS VICTORIOUS

The UVM girls' Ski Team captured all the trophies at the annual Green Mountain Junior Carnival held Saturday at Birdseye Mountain. Led by Peggy Nutt, who was the top individual winner with the first in the giant slalom, a second in the slalom, and unofficial skimeister for the carnival.

The Catamount team took first in both events, and therefore won the combined title over five other teams which participated. In the giant slalom, UVM placed first, third, and fifth with sophomore Peggy Nutt and freshmen Lynn Bertram and Katie Dillman finishing in that order.

In the afternoon slalom, Miss Nutt finished second, Miss Dillman fourth, and Valerie Greene, another freshman, fifth, to assure victory in that event. The next meet will be at Colby Junior College February 16-17.

SHOOTERS OFF

By David A. Keenan

High scoring sophomore Bob Walker led the Catamount riflemen Saturday as the rifle team bowed to Norwich University in a low scoring match at Northfield. Most individual averages tumbled as both teams fired poorer than expected. Nevertheless, outstanding performances were turned in by John Rothwell for Norwich with a 270 and Bob Walker of Vermont with a 264.

Having gotten the bad match for the year out of their blood, the Cats have high hopes for the match this Saturday as they fire against the varsity team from Nassau College at the UVM range.

The final score of the Norwich match, 1252-1217, shows how poorly each team fared.

There will be a Frosh Baseball meeting on Monday, February 20, 1967 in Room 118 in the Patrick Gym at 4:30 p.m.

Alden Hale scores two underneath against as Russ Boardman and Dave Lapointe look on with three Springfield opponents in last Saturday's tilt won by the Maroons, 62-59.

Good Defensive Showings

By Ted Ryan

Pleased with his team's showings, but, disappointed by the narrow losses, University of Vermont basketball coach, Art Loche, is anxiously awaiting the next game.

The defensive minded Catamounts opened the season with eight straight fine defensive games. Then the defensive fell apart as the Cats hit the suicide part of their schedule. Opponents' scores rocketed up and the Burlington boys managed only one win in six road games against the tall and talented Yankee Conference foes.

But the defensive magic has returned in the past few games. Springfield nipped the Cats Saturday, 61-58, in a game never separated by more than a few points.

"We played a good basketball team. But, we weren't ready for their defensive tactics. They kept changing defenses and we just didn't adjust."

Following the Springfield game was a game much closer than the 75-62 final score indicates. Vermont led for nearly 80 per cent of the game but Rhode Island snatched the lead in the final four minutes. Forced to go after the ball, the Cats committed numerous fouls and the Rams calmly converted them to win going away.

The turning point of the Rhode Island game came with about four minutes remaining. Vermont's big Alden Hale, alone underneath the Vermont basket, missed the layup. A hoop would have increased the Vermont lead to three points. Running to the other end after missing the layup, Hale committed a foul and the Rams jumped into the lead.

Hale, though, was praised by Loche for his work. "Hale has played good basketball. He had been rebounding well. I think he has finally reached his potential. He works hard and he is as strong a competitor as (Russ) Boardman," said Loche.

Vermont plays St. Lawrence away Saturday.

Bill Librera vainly attempts to block St. Michael's Bobby Joyce's shot in last Wednesday's traditional game. The favored Michaelmen came out on top, 96-78, despite an outstanding 23 point effort from Vermont's Dave Lapointe. The Knights now stand 16-3 on the year and 5-0 in State Series play. Vermont is now 4-14 on the season and 1-1 against state opposition.

Hockey Team Nips Boston State, 4-2

By Fred Schlapp

In the midst of darkness there is sometimes a ray of light. The Vermont light shined briefly last Wednesday night as the Cats pinned a 4-2 defeat on Boston State. The Cats started shakily and let State get on the scoreboard first when Kelly slipped the puck past Jack Hynes during a scramble in front of the net.

The goal seemed to bring the Cats out of their lethargy, for two minutes later, at 4:44, captain Chip Uihlein tied it up at 1-1. Chip took a pass from Lee Roy just before the blue line, skated through the defense, made a fake, and flipped the puck over the sprawling goalie.

Not to be outdone, Jack Semler rapped home a Roy rebound and Vermont led 2-1. At this juncture, State started pressing, and only some great defense by Bob Schroeder and Doug Krebs, and some key stops by Hynes kept them off the scoreboard. The Cats really climbed into the driver's seat at 14:24 when Semler notched his second goal of the night after taking a pass from Uihlein. The score stood at 3-1 at the end of the first period, one of the first times this year that Vermont had taken a lead to the dressing room.

The Cats came out for the second period with fire in their eyes and wasted no time increasing their lead. Uihlein started down the ice, skated in on the left, burst past the defense, and scored unassisted. Chip's second goal of the night came with 7:59 gone in the period and gave UVM a comfortable 4-1 lead. Boston State got one goal back on a partial breakaway just before the buzzer. This was perhaps Vermont's best period of the night, even though they only scored once. The Cats checked well, passed well, and took so many shots at the Boston State goal that the goalie Michaels must have felt like a target.

The third stanza was a scoreless defensive battle. Boston State started strong, but the rugged forechecking of Pete Meyer, Ed Danks, and Paul Dorsey held them at bay. Hynes was definitely the star in this period as he came up with many brilliant saves to keep State off the scoreboard.

Fresh from their victory over Boston State, the Catamounts took on the viking of Salem State at Lynn arena in Salem, Mass. The result of this encounter was a heartbreaking 3-2 loss. Vermont goals were scored by Roy and Semler, with Semler's score assisted by Uihlein and Roy. Hynes played his finest game of the year, turning aside 47 Salem shots.

Having dropped the first of their weekend road encounters, the Vermont team traveled to Amherst to face a rugged UMass sextet. The game was a wide open affair with many goals and penalties. Junior sensation Roy quickly upped the count by scoring two goals within the space of three minutes after defenseman Jim Brock found the range, and the Cats left the ice at the end of the first period with a 3-1 advantage. The second period, however, was all UMass as the Redmen tallied three times to take the lead. The final twenty minutes saw hustling Jack Semler tie the score barely after it had begun. UMass retaliated with two quick goals to go ahead 6-4. The Cats weren't finished, though, as they climbed to within one goal on Semler's twelfth tally of the season at 15:48. The rest of the period saw Vermont dominate the play, but as usual, they couldn't finish off their plays when they needed to.

Tom Mills Sets Two Marks

By Mick Kropsky

Despite the fact that co-captain Tom Mills set two UVM swimming records in Saturday's duel meet with Plattsburgh State, the Cats were edged 51-44. It was Les Leggett's swimmers first duel meet loss of the current season. In the end, it was Plattsburgh's depth which made the difference as the swimmers from across Lake Champlain picked up numerous first and second place finishes.

Mills, a senior from Burlington, set both UVM marks in the two free style events. Tom went the 50 yard distance in 22.8 seconds and the 100 yards in a fast 50.4 seconds. Below is a list of all events, winners and winning times.

UVM's next meet will be this Saturday, Feb. 11, at Massachusetts. The Frosh swimmers, after nipping Kimball Union this past Saturday, 49-46, will also see action against the Mass. freshmen swimmers.

400-Yard Medley Relay - Vermont, Striker, Cole, Harrod, Davis. Time 4:07.3.

200-Yard Freestyle - 1. DeYoung, Platt; 2. Lang, Platt; 3. Sulphen UVM. Time 1:59.2 (pool record).

50-Yard Freestyle - 1. Mills, UVM; 2. Campbell, UVM; 3. Flexman, Platt. Time :22.8 (UVM record).

200 Individual Medley - 1. Stone, Platt; 2. Gross, UVM; 3. Leizer, Platt. Time 2:14.6.

Diving - 1. Steward, Platt; 2. Hawkins, Platt; 3. Resnick, UVM.

200-Yard Butterfly - 1. Stone, Platt; 2. DeYoung, Platt; 3. Gross, UVM. Time 2:13.9.

100-Yard Freestyle - 1. Mills, UVM; 2. Campbell, UVM; 3. Lang, Platt. Time :50.4 (UVM record).

200-Yard Breaststroke - 1. Cole, UVM; 2. Homestead, Platt; 3. Kinsey, UVM. Time 2:34.6.

400-Yard Freestyle Relay - Plattsburgh, Flexman, Leizer, Lang, DeYoung. Time 3:29.6 (pool record).

KITTEN TALK

It was another good week for the UVM Kittens. The frosh basketball squad led the victory parade with four big wins, and they were followed by both the swimming squad and the track team, who piled up impressive wins.

The b-ballers had a long week, going on the road three times, and playing before the home crowd once. They traveled to Plattsburgh first, and handed the New Yorkers a solid 102 to 45 thrashing. UVM had defense problems early in the game, but settled down and drew ahead. The starting line up only went half the game, but Ray Bueb and Frank Martinuk both hit for 18 points. Aldo Salati scored 14, but completely controlled the boards with the help of high jumping Bob Hutton and Sandy Magid.

The hoopsters then packed their bags and headed south to Middlebury where they had to beat both the baby panthers as well as the refs. The Kittens only won 85 to 78, and they trailed at half by 4. The officials almost cost UVM the game as they thought Aldo Salati had fouled out, when in actuality, he only had 4 fouls. Ray Bueb and Frank Martinuk again led the scoring as they combined for a total of 44 points. Magid and Hutton played a powerful game under the boards.

Monday night the tall Kittens returned home against near-by Champlain College, and routed them 99 to 58. It was a bad first half, for UVM couldn't get into gear, but Frank Martinuk kept things rolling as he hit for 16 points in the first half; add 4 in the second, for a game total of 20. Needless to say Bueb was right behind with a game total of 19. The bench got plenty of use in the second half, as it often has in the past few weeks.

The Purple Knights were the next foes for the Green and Gold as they traveled out to the fort. And what a game it turned out to be. UVM finally pulled it out at the end of the fourth overtime period 82 to 80. Michael's was out to punish the Kittens for an early season defeat, but the scoring of Martinuk, the hustle of Greenman, the board work of Salati and Magid, the defense of Hutton, and the ability of Bueb and a strong bench proved too much.

There is not one player on this basketball team who stands above the rest. This is a solid unit which depends on the effort and ability of each and every member. It is a team that lacks nothing. They have tall high scoring guards who have that extra ability to think on the court. They have tall and rough forwards who are capable of rebounding, scoring, and playing defense. They have two sky scrapers for centers, and a bench which is improving with each outing. It is a complete team, and a great one at that.

Moving on to the pool we find the wet Kittens beating Kimball Union in a splasher, 49 to 46. The small, 7 men, but great swimming team traveled to Meriden, N.H. and won its third meet of the year. First place finishers were: Dave Edsall in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle, Bob Castle in both the 200 yard individual medley and 100 yard breast stroke, Joe Lovett in the 100 yard butterfly, and Doug Arnold in the 100 yard backstroke. UVM also won the 200 yard medley relay with Arnold, Phillipson, Lovett and Baker.

The freshman hockey squad also moved over the mountains to Kimball Union, but they met with a little bad luck. The team was without powerful defenseman George Kreiner and high scoring John Cussen. Without these two the Kittens were no match for the preps. The final score was 9 and 1. The only bright moment was when Dick Mullany split the posts for a third period score. The icemen's next game is against Norwich and there is no word on Cussen's vacation, and it seems doubtful if Kreiner will be

by Mick Kropsky

Bowdoin and host UVM each won a victory in track competition this past weekend as the Bowdoin varsity nipped the Cats 58-55, while the UVM Kittens easily defeated the Bowdoin frosh 75-34. The varsity contest literally went down to the wire. With four events remaining in the meet, UVM had a 43-38 lead and it looked like Coach Archie Post's runners were on their way to their first meet victory. However, Bowdoin took three of the four events to get the victory.

UVM took five firsts in the 13-event meet. Bowdoin had seven first places along with a win in the last event of the day, the mile relay which clinched the victory for the Maine cindermen. Vermont's wins came in the 16 pound shot (Paul Ardell-45 feet), the 600 yard run (Jim Dedman - 1:16.3), the two mile run (Will Howard - 10:12.5), the high jump (Ed Childs - 6'1"), and Dick Kabat the 55-yard low hurdles.

The UVM freshmen runners were once again led by Jimmy Wheeler who won the 50-yard dash, the 55-yard high hurdles and the 55-yard low hurdles. The frosh are now 1-1 on the season.

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN?

Let's Go Back To 1909 Inebriated With Spirit

By Mike Furst

Two weeks ago I hopped on the CYNIC telephone-time machine and placed a call back through the ages. Destination: the oldest living Kake Walker, Thomas Mulcare, '09; Cambridge, Mass.

Although I expected an old, senile alumnus, I was pleasantly surprised. The voice wasn't Tom Mulcare, a Kake Walker for two years (1908 and 1909) and a 1909 director.

The result was a letter, which brings us down through the decades to a firsthand account of the old Kake Walk. It was different, then again.

"Walkin' fo' de cake" - That time is at hand again. It was a lot of work practicing for it but also a lot of fun.

The idea was to imitate the style as much as possible as was done "way, way down South" in some Mississippi River town while waitin' on de levee, yes waitin' on de levee for that stamboat, Robert E. Lee.

The "gemman" had an easy time of it. His chief worry was the second hand silk hat and some vintage full dress suit with tie and tails. The lady partner had a really tough time with her costume; high heel dancing slippers, long black stockings, corsets, authentic from Saul's Second Hand Emporium and a good fitting and hot black wig. That comprised her impedimenta.

The burnt cork was with us, at least traces of it, for a good 2 weeks.

The cake was awarded one half to Masters '08 and Perley '08 and one half to Mulcare '09 and Shaw '09. What did we do with the cake? We ate it!

By Dick Matheson

"A large number of students were present and social hilarity was indulged in until a late hour." This droll comment on the first Kake Walk by an 1893 CYNIC writer is humorously applicable to today's super-weekend.

"There's no rhyme nor reason why it is as exciting as it is!" said Director of Student Activities David Bain last week.

Oh, no? Well, to indulge in some All-American, Davy Crockett-style braggadocio, Kake Walk can be described as a cross between: a Broadway musical, the Olympic games, a Roman bacchanalia, Queen for a Day, Mardi Gras, the Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey Circus (until Kake Walk, the Greatest Show on Earth), New Year's Eve in Times Square, and a World's Fair or two thrown in for seasoning.

...More Complex Today

By Jon Schechtman

One thousand people attended the twelfth annual Kake Walk of 1909 which was then termed "the biggest, and grandest ever." In those days, the festivities were local, with attendance coming from the greater Burlington area.

Because the demand was more limited than today, there was little publicity and few posters. In fact, the 25, 50 and 75 cent tickets were purchased on the morning of the walking.

That year, the Kake Walk committee was headed by Ray Collins, '09, and consisted of 12 members; one of whom, Tom Mulcare, walked. As is the case at present, the KW committee was a rather independent group, and ran the proceedings with little faculty supervision.

Seven fraternities presented slap-stick skits or "stunt" with Phi Delta Theta capturing the coveted Briggs Cup (the only cup offered). In those days, there was no quota in the number of skits to be presented, and no rules governing the products, except a ten dollar limit on costumes.

Following the awarding of cakes and the cup, the gym's floor was cleared and there was dancing until 1 a.m. Music was supplied by the University Band. Mr. Collins commented that in every respect, the present Kake Walk is a professional show and a tremendous undertaking. Today walkers practice from early fall. Skits begin to be written the year before. A far cry from the casual attitude of 1909.

Financially too, Kake Walk of today is radically different, with several thousand dollars spent on entertainment, cups, and cakes; and $5 tickets for seats. But of course, the 1967 Kake Walk will also be termed "the biggest and grandest ever."

More modestly, the new Dean of Women called Kake Walk "a great fun-time." Dean Gribbons first heard about Kake Walk in Ohio before she came to UVM; maybe that's what attracted her. "I'm looking forward to it," she said. "To know what Kake Walk really is, you just have to wait and see it."

One of the KW Directors, Pete Ambrose, called the weekend "a major departure from studies," an escape.

On the other hand, Mr. Hewitt, the new Dean of Men, thinks that "the total involvement in Kake Walk is a tremendous learning experience ... a major educational experience supplementing the academic side of learning." (Maybe we should have it more often?)

Students indulging in KW do seem to strive for "total involvement." Pete Ambrose estimates that at least 70% of those who go to KW participate competitively.

"It's not so much an opportunity to become inebriated with liquor," Pete believes, "as a chance to become inebriated with spirit."

A junior in a fraternity boasts, "People just can't appreciate Kake Walk until they've friz to death the entire night before judging, helping their brothers finish the snow sculpture."

A millionaire lounging in some mansion might scoff at the amount of work UVMers do to have fun. The KW Directors and their assistants assume a heavy burden.

"Most of the directors have over-extended themselves," Pete Ambrose noted. "I'm tired. You just have to try to make up in the rest of the year what you missed before Kake Walk."

But the work of these and hundred of other students has paid off.

"This is an amazing display of organizational ability by directors and assistants," says Mr. Bain. "They're terribly well-organized and need little assistance from me."

Dean Gribbons finds that the "very cohesive effort of students, staff, and administration generates a great deal of school spirit."

No longer can it be said, as it was of the first Kake Walk in 1893, that "The faculty and ladies were conspicuous by their absence."

The President's Message

I appreciate the opportunity the CYNIC has extended me to welcome the alumni and friends once more to the campus at this festive occasion of the Kake Walk Weekend. I am particularly glad to do this because in this period during which many institutions are involved in a variety of problems of administration, educational standards and student morality, I am pleased to have them see the campus of the University of Vermont where these problems are at a minimum.

Our student body has addressed itself to their academic work to the extent that the drop-out rate at midyears was the lowest of all time. Our faculty is pursuing a vigorous program of teaching and research. The combination of these has made this a stimulating year.

I hope everyone thoroughly enjoys this pleasant interlude, and I wish them well after we settle down to the academic work of the second semester.

President Rowell

Campus Security Cops arrive. They have come to report on the traffic situation.

EDITORIAL...

By now the emotional catharsis that is Kake Walk is well under way. As we frolic through the weekend on the wings of an organic compound, let us not forget the gentlemen who have made it all possible, and even probable: The Kake Walk directors, and their assistants.

All universities have their time-honored traditions. At some it is intellectual commitment; at the University of Vermont it is Kake Walk. The members of the Kake Walk Committee have added new dimension to the concept of dedication in their efforts to further this tradition. Among other things, they have gathered a slate of talent unparalleled in the history of Kake Walk entertainment.

It is the devotion of the Kake Walk Committee which has provided us with a weekend of memories, memories sufficient to sustain us even as we limp through the blackest of all Mondays which follows.

Blood Drive Sponsored

Ethan Allen Rifles will sponsor its annual Spring blood drive February 28 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., March 1 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and March 2 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Fall blood drive saw a 685 pint total, breaking the regional record by some 44 pints. Over 40% of the donors had given blood for the first time, so the members of E.A.R. are hoping that this increase in participation, along with the old timers, will continue to produce a record-breaking total for the three-day drive.

This semester the fraternity and sorority with the highest percentage of donating members will receive trophies. Sigma Phi and Kappa Alpha Theta had lead last semester's drive with 55% and 24% respectively. Fraternity men and sorority women had donated over 50% of all the blood given.

Permission slips for those under 21 years of age may be picked up at the Military Science Department, the desk at Billings, or the bulletin board in downstairs Waterman.

Prof Views Kake Walk

By Dr. M.W. Perrine

"Kake Walk is a blast!" "KW is a sinful waste of time!" "KW is for kids!" "KW is too trite to bother with!" "KW is phun!"

KW — whether the Walking itself, the skits, snow sculpture, parties, or general mania — apparently means different things to different people, which is no surprise to any student of social behavior. How you perceive KW, or any complex situation, is enormously influenced by your actual and vicarious experiences with it, as well as your "personality," assumptions, needs, etc. Psychologists have also established that we perceive selectively or "see what we want to see." Thus, KW — as beauty — lies in the eye of the beholder, whether he is participant or observer. The more frequent views of UVM non-student observers are presented here and briefly examined.

1. "KW must be tolerated and not changed because it has such a long tradition." Some observers find it rewarding to be identified with traditions, thereby apparently achieving an aura of being established and accepted. The underlying assumption seems to be: that which can pass the test of years must somehow be "right" or "good." Although chronologically old, UVM has relatively few unique traditions, which no doubt leads to a certain protectionism regarding KW. But, in point of fact, KW has been gradually modified over the years (e.g., male-female teams; black face) and most surely will continue to respond to changing values and needs.

2. "KW is a dangerously organic rite." Although instances of Dionysian behavior are not unknown at KW, its categorical rejection as a lascivious occasion would seem to be too easy, and therefore rather suspect. In fact, the greater danger comes from precisely those self-styled critics and defenders of morality who over-react and over-simplify such events as KW, probably due to insecurity stemming from their own inadequacies and to unresolved guilt arising from their own frailties. Many adults who would chastize youth for its perceived foibles are simply projecting their own needs and the unfulfilled fantasies from their own youth. If some of our more historically oriented colleagues were to conduct a scholarly examination of similarities and differences in actual behavior at KW over the last 70 years, they would probably not find any significant differences in basic patterns of behavior.

3. "KW is an unjustifiable waste of academic time." If KW were eliminated, some faculty assume that students would use this "wasted" time to better (i.e., academic) advantage. This assumption is fallacious to the extent that students will "waste" a great amount of time on non-academic matters in any case.

4. "KW is a sand-box learning experience for the students." Although KW might seem contrived and artificial, it is probably no more so than many other student events; it simply happens on a larger, more noticeable scale. Because the various KW tasks are essentially self-imposed, it provides a very real opportunity for students to interact and work together in a limited, but meaningful context. It serves as a tangible focus for many of their energies, creative efforts, and emotions. These factors, in addition to a certain element of hedonism, account for the fact that KW is one of the few campus events not dominated by apathy.

The Well-Equipped Student Sand Box should therefore contain: traditions (some movable, some rigid), situations (some fun, some absurd, some "dangerous"), institutionalized time wasters (some mundane, some exotic), a mini-sand box (to learn about sand-box learning), and freedoms (to explore, experiment, err, choose, improve, change, cope, "waste" time, etc.) For those who will still maintain that KW is trite and meaningless, let them build a better sand box, one full of really real challenges and really real life.

FLYNN — Arvederci, Baby — Tony Curtis — unusually good for a film of this type. Hilarious beginning.

STRONG — Ingmar Bergman's "Through A Glass Darkly" — reported to be one of Bergman's best. Academy award winner. Plus "Two Way Stretch" with the great Peter Sellers. Absolutely great comedy about British prison problems. Sunday — Sidney Poitier in "A Patch of Blue." Good sentimental story about a blind girl.

STATE — Guess?

History of Independents

The beginning of Kake Walk, not only included fraternities, but also Independents (those not affiliated with a fraternity or sorority).

The Independents dominated the weekend through the early 1900's, and scooped up most of the "kake" which was awarded to the best pair of walkers. They, also, won first place in most of the skits.

The year 1905 was a big one for the Greeks. For the first time, they tied the Independents for the top spot. From then on the Independents won less frequently as Kake Walk gained prominence.

Fraternities took over most of Kake Walk from the snow sculpture, to walking, to the skits as the Independents faded from the scene with only a brief reappearance. In 1944-45, they took first place and then promptly abandoned all efforts.

Kake Walk remained entirely a fraternity function until 1964, when a few dedicated students gathered together and attempted to compete with the fraternities. They succeeded in entering a fine pair of walkers, had their own party, and, until the event was cancelled for lack of snow, had planned to enter a snow sculpture.

In its third year, the Independent Kake Walk Association has grown to include nearly 300 members and participates in all aspects of the weekend. Although they don't have the fraternities' discipline, they do have a much larger group to call upon for walkers and to help with the sculpture.

If enthusiasm continues to grow, the Independents have the potential to eventually overtake the fraternities and once again assume their earlier dominance of Kake Walk Weekend.

Has Kake Walk outlived its usefulness?

This question appears as early as 1900. The justification for keeping it is profit because it was needed as a money-raiser for athletics. Also, it was a suggestion for curing evils, such as more varsity in program, wider participation, better production and geared to entertain townspeople whose support it needs.

Today, it is a tradition, still striving toward the achievement of unification upon the Vermont Campus.

Engineer's Week

As an era of unmatched progress generates new problems for society, man's demand for an environment tailored to his needs grows even more intense. To meet this demand will require all of the engineering talent we can possibly mobilize.

Many of the tasks we face are those we ourselves have created -- in our cities, in the air about us, in the water which sustains us.

Before the end of the century the engineer will combine with each segment of our national life to rebuild a new and far better urban America. And more than ever, the quality of his contribution will depend not only upon his technical abilities. It will be measured as well by his sensitivity to the people's needs.

"Engineering...for the Human Environment" thus becomes more than a theme for National Engineers' Week in 1967. It is the very essence of the challenge that lies before us. I am confident that we shall prevail.

Continued expansion of our military and commercial business provides openings for virtually every technical talent.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, we suggest you consider career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Like most everyone else, we offer all of the usual "fringe" benefits, including our Corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. But, far more important to you and your future, is the wide-open opportunity for professional growth with a company that enjoys an enviable record of stability in the dynamic atmosphere of aerospace technology.

And make no mistake about it... you'll get a solid feeling of satisfaction from your contribution to our nation's economic growth and to its national defense as well.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL, AERONAUTICAL, CHEMICAL, CIVIL (structures oriented), ELECTRICAL, MARINE, and METALLURGICAL ENGINEERING • ENGINEERING MECHANICS, APPLIED MATHEMATICS, CERAMICS, PHYSICS and ENGINEERING PHYSICS.

Lookin' Back O'er Cotton Fields

By Emil R. Spees

The early history of Kake Walk is one of change and organizational growth. The first Kake Walk was held in December of 1893. It was a spontaneous "hells-a-popping" gala stag affair which seems to have been well received by the men students but not so well received by the administration.

Kake Walk reappeared in '94 but then "was closed down" until '97 when it was put on as a public program by students for townspeople.

KAKE WALK BECOMES OFFICIAL

1897, then, saw the first public, profit-motivated, somewhat structured Kake Walk. The Kake Walk Programs of today might well be said to date from that evening. The program consisted of (1) the "peerade," (2) stunts or "Specialties," (3) "Walkin' for de kake," and (4) dancing.

The "peerade" has disappeared, the dancing has become a formal ball which opens a three-day holiday, and the Kake Walking has expanded to two nights, centered around fraternity stunts, and walkers. Both the stunts and the walking have come in for a good deal of criticism from time to time.

College "skits" - "stunts" - "specialties" are seldom highly polished, universally appealing productions. When they are, they are usually criticized for having lost their spark of spontaneity and real fun. When they aren't, they are criticized for being ill prepared, and dependent on slapstick humor. Such has been the pendulum swing in regards to Kake Walk stunts. As early as 1900, critics were demanding the utopia of good skits at no cost of time from the academic for their planning, rehearsing, and presentation.

For the most part the Kake Walk stunt has been fraternity contribution. To put on even a loose-knit, rather unrehearsed performance demands a group which has some self-identity. To present elaborately staged and minutely timed skits necessitates group-cohesion, cohesion and continuity. As Kake Walk became more and more organized and more and more the event of the year, the fraternities became not only willing, but also expected to put their best foot forward on that night "for the good of the University."

Kake Walk since 1897 has been profit-motivated and each year it is expected to be "bigger and better" than before. In the early days of the University, intercollegiate sports were sponsored by student subscriptions. As that aspect of the extra curricular grew and thereby became more expensive, students turned to "money-making" events to supplement their subscriptions.

The Kake Walk quickly became the major revenue source as it had the appeal of the then very popular minstrel show yet was unique unto itself. The proceeds at first were ear-marked for football, later for baseball and finally for athletics in general. With profits much counted on and "success," therefore, a must; it became the duty of each and which one must follow to "walk fo de kake." From the dialectic phraseology, early pictures, and the blackface, it can be assumed that kake-walking was copied from the southern Negro.

STYLE IS THE THING

Although by 1916 costuming had become secondary to technique, up through 1917 the couples - ie, two fellows but one dressed as a woman - wore a rather elaborate costumes. Judging from the pictures of 1913 and 1916 walkers, it would seem that kake walking, as done today, would have been impossible. Certainly every student to do his share in this undertaking.

"PEERADE" LIVES ON

The "peerade" lived on for several years as a means of individual participation but finally this bit of tomfoolery lost its appeal to participants. The same might well have been the case for "de walkin' for de kake" had not the enterprising directors of 1917 come up with the ruling that in order for a fraternity to compete for the Briggs Cup - the award for the best stunt - it must also supply a couple to walk. Such was the way in which the event received its name and became the symbol of a gala mid-winter college festival.

It is of interest to note that the origin of Kake Walking, how it came to The University of Vermont, and how it is "correctly" done, are all rather vague. The account of the 1893 program infers either that how to kake walk was known to all or that there was no classical pattern the "woman" would have had a most difficult task in the long skirts shown. However, an emphasis on technique certainly dates from this era.

Whatever the walking technique of that day, obviously the costumes and publicity sketches of the walkers reflect the white American view of the negro as a happy-go-lucky, "step and fetch-it" character. That this view should be unquestioned prior to World War I is of no surprise.

UVM'S UNIQUE HOLIDAY

It can be said that by 1917, Kake Walk had become a formally organized event with set terminology. It depended on student group participation to provide entertainment which would attract the townspeople in order that a profit could be realized to support the athletic program. Although by then it had become UVM's unique winter holiday, it had not yet become the climax of the winter season for undergraduates nor the alumni focal point which it is today.

Letter From A Kake Walk Founder

The writer well remembers the first Kake Walk . . . Sometime during the winter of '93-'94, my classmate, Frederick T. Sharp, after due conference with a few of us in No. 6, South College, wrote a poster inviting all those who might be interested, to partake in a "Kake Walk" to be held in the old drill hall under the chapel the next evening. . . Very little was done in the way of preparation of the hall; lanterns and lamps were produced to help out the illumination; the floor was swept; a goodly cake - not withstanding it was an issue of the "Hash-House" - was provided.

At the appointed hour the dancers began to arrive. The ingenuity displayed in the various costumes presented was surprising, considering the impromptu nature of the party, and all seemed to have tried to produce something unique.

The music began its unearthly noise, and to its inspiring (?) strains the dance was on. There were quadrilles, lancers, round dances and a Virginia Reel.

The "Kake Walk" itself was the concluding event, and was conducted along the usual lines of such functions. A procession of couples marched around the hall several times, and then each couple separately, doing their grotesque best. The conclusion of the affair should have been the award of the cake, but I have no recollection of its being won, and my impression is that the whole company fell upon it and incontinently devoured it. Thus ended the first "Kake Walk."

Dr. Edward G. Randall, '95

Students Tell How Kake Walk Could Be Improved

By Stephen A. Berman

Opinions ranging from a Kake Walk conducted by the entire student body, instead of only fraternities, to later hours for the girls were expressed in interviews at the UVM campus.

One student opposed the system used in choosing the Kake Walk directors while another wanted to see the ball made strictly a masquerade.

Several individuals expressed opinions on the lack of organized activities during the Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Question: What improvements would you like to see in Kake Walk weekend?

Al Hay, '51, Longmeadow, Mass. - Later hours for the girls - that's all I want.

Carol Farmer, last year's queen, '50, Fair Haven - Excepting for the basketball game Friday or Saturday, there is little doing in the afternoons. Also I think the girls should have later hours, both Friday and Saturday nights. I would like to see all the fraternities get a chance, since all of them made up the tradition.

William Logan, '49, Burlington - As I see it, the Kake Walk skits pertain too much to university life and thus make it difficult if not impossible, for townspeople and alumni to understand. Furthermore, I think most of the skits are too raw and should be more polished for college material.

Beverly Adams, '50, Rutland - They should provide something more for Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Danny Burke, '50, Wellesley, Mass. - The present system of choosing the Kake Walk directors is undemocratic and should be changed. I suggest it be put on an election basis, rather than a hand-down, which effects only the "big three."

Elwyn Hayslip, '50, Flushing, N.Y. - The length of the fraternity skits should be brought back to what they used to be - that is, much longer. I also think the girls should be allowed to stay out later than 12:30 on Friday and Saturday.

Harold White, '51, New London, Conn. - Judging from the Kake Walk I witnessed last year, I think the skits were too long and thus lost a lot of their potential humor.

Francis Keough, '51, North Bennington - Kake Walk should be opened to the entire school and not just the fraternities and sororities. The way it is now, those who do not have a part in Kake Walk go home. Every student should be given an active part to play.

Ruth Frink, '49, Charlotte - I would like to see some improvement made so that those in the skits can be better understood. It is very difficult to judge a skit correctly. One is bound to favor a skit which is mostly action, to one spoken and not understood.

Jim Rooney, '50, Newport - The Kake Walk ball should be made strictly masquerade as it was at one time. This would add much to the thrill and excitement of the big weekend. Along with this, I suggest that the hours at night for the girls be lengthened.

Editor's Note: This article appeared in a local newspaper, Feb. 20, 1949.

Disputed Kake Walk Springs Cynic Rival

By Ed Willard

This all started innocently enough when I received a call from the CYNIC's Miss Marion Robinson. She asked, "Were you one of the people that started the SKEPTIC, the newspaper behind the current 'Skeptic' column in the CYNIC?" Was I? Well, I was one of the founders of SKEPTIC, the short-lived newspaper sensation of the UVM campus for several weeks following the 1954 Kake Walk. I don't know if the SKEPTIC served as a source of inspiration for the current "Skeptic" column in the CYNIC, but believe me, I know how the SKEPTIC happened, how I felt about it then, and how I see it now, looking at it with the objectivity one has when he is looking at something with which he is no longer emotionally involved and that happened (alas) many years ago.

How did the SKEPTIC start? SKEPTIC was born when a group of UVM students from all segments of the campus population got angry at the CYNIC for what they regarded as a very subjective slanting of the news of the 1954 Kake Walk, and an even more subjective slanting toward the then-current campus "hot button," black-face.

Let's now review the black-face issue here. The subject is a dead horse that has been beaten from here to Sunday on many occasions before and since. We were, simply, an angry group of students. Most of us were writers or fancied ourselves as writers and several of us had written for the CYNIC. We'd give the CYNIC a "lesson in objectivity," we said. And we really tried. The first issue of SKEPTIC covered all Kake Walk events and gave credit to all involved. There were a few barbs aimed at the CYNIC on the editorial page, including an indictment of the CYNIC for its Kake Walk coverage and asking students to "agit" through your Student Association for withdrawal of financial support" if the CYNIC continued along what we regarded to be its rather narrow path.

We got support, lots of it, from the student body and student leaders. A petition to withdraw funds was circulated and had a sufficient number of signatures to be valid. Unfortunately, the petition had to be withdrawn because of some rather fuzzy terminology. The petition before SA was the "high water mark" of the SKEPTIC. We had campus opinion pretty solidly behind us and, if the petition had been allowed, I believe even today that financial support would have been withdrawn from the CYNIC and the University might have had a new "official" student voice.

After one more issue, a full-sized paper this time, the SKEPTIC quietly died. Downtown newspaper reports said it was due to "lack of ad revenue," but the fact is, we let the SKEPTIC die. It had made its point, and pretty well, we thought.

How do I look on SKEPTIC now, as an alumnus of eleven years? It's strange how the years can change your perspective. First of all, in reviewing the two issues of the SKEPTIC and all the campus and local downtown newspaper furore it started, I can see where the CYNIC was a little more objective than we had thought at the time. The banner headline, "Phi Sig Kake Walkers Smash 57-Year Black Face Tradition of the '54 Kake Walk. The trouble was, most of the student body at the time didn't like that news. The rest of the source of our anger still seems valid. The CYNIC had indeed been emotional and slanted in its news. But, the funny part is, the SKEPTIC had been very little less slanted than the CYNIC. In plain fact, all of us on both sides had personal points of view. This included strongly different points of view on the parts of individual members of the SKEPTIC staff.

I don't want to end this story with a lecture, but the situation launched their own careers, the coffee shop in Waterman would have been deadly dull, the downtown newspapers wouldn't have had good local copy for a couple of weeks, George Little, the printer, would be $200 richer (he never did get his final payment), and an elderly alumnus named Ed Willard would never have had an opportunity to look back 13 years and see that at the time he really wasn't any more "right" than the other side. I learned something in 1954 and probably got an even more valuable lesson in objectivity now in reviewing the background of this article.

Thanks, Miss Robinson, and current CYNIC staff. And remember the lesson, whatever it was!

does seem to lend itself to some kind of judgment. First, it once again shows that anyone who spends his four-or-more years at college alone with his books and professors is missing some of the most valuable opportunity for education the university environment can afford. Second, isn't it too bad that we can't be as objective at the moment of stress as we can be 13 years later? But wait a minute! That wouldn't be so good either. If a lot of UVM students hadn't gotten steamed up at each other in 1954, the CYNIC probably wouldn't have received the stern rebuke it needed at the time, a group of would-be writers would never have

Insight

The Kake Walk Weekend is a culmination of many long months of arduous work. Committee meetings begin early in October in order to plan and prepare for the nation's oldest winter carnival. The Committee of eight consists of three directors, four assistants, and a secretary. Two members of the faculty oversee the Committee and serve in an advisory capacity. Committee members are carefully chosen on the basis of scholarship, responsibility, leadership and willingness to expend a continual stream of energy essential to a successful Weekend. Every member is given a particular phase to work in and exerts a great degree of freedom within that area.

Those associated with the Kake Walk Committee have expressed a tremendous amount of satisfaction out of working for such a worthwhile organization. The experience gained through the close coordination and the fulfillment of our final objective serves as an invaluable asset for any future career objective.

The Weekend serves many purposes aside from being an academic break. Students and faculty participate directly to ensure its success. Students walk for the "kake," enter royalty campaigns, build snow sculptures, and present skits. The faculty participates as advisers and judges, ready and willing to voice constructive criticism and to offer assistance. The Weekend serves as a means for taking the edge off existing fraternity rivalries and for bringing all University constituents together, anticipating the stimulating rhythm of "Cotton Babes" and the drop of the handkerchief.

A chemistry major from 49 Robinson Parkway is the Assistant Director of Production. William Cyrus Machanic, Phi Sigma Delta, is a junior who plans to attend Medical School. The active Burlingtonian has been treasurer of his fraternity, treasurer of SCOPE, Editor of Freshmen Review, Chairman of Homecoming Ball, a member of Gold Key and the Key and Serpent.

Advisors

DOCTOR IZZO

This is the fourth year Joseph Izzo, professor of mathematics, has served as advisor to the Kake Walk Committee.

Dr. Izzo feels this year's Kake Walk has been planned by an excellent group of student directors. They have, he says, been especially able to work cooperatively in the face of challenging problems.

Incidentally, since the gift of a new sound system for the gym was presented by last year's Committee, Dr. Izzo feels confident this will solve the sound problems the skits have previously had.

With this advantage and the excellent group of directors, Dr. Izzo says he expects Kake Walk '67 "to be one of the best, if not best yet!"

MR. CHARLES WOLF

Serving this year's Kake Walk festivities as Financial Advisor is Charles L. Wolf, Assistant Auditor of the University. Mr. Wolf, who was Financial Advisor for last year's Kake Walk, advises the Kake Walk Financial Director on budgetary matters, assists in the preparation of the Kake Walk Financial Report, and also authorizes expenditures. Having attended all the Committee meetings, Mr. Wolf reports that "the boys worked hard and did a good job."

NOTE

The Committee hopes that people attending will remember that the program for both evenings begins at 7:30.

Selection of the Committee Chairman: The first mention of the process is November, 1900; at that time, the Chairman was elected at a "college meeting" after a vote which decided if they would have the gala function. In 1904, the Chairman - Committee was appointed by the Senior Class President (this continued up through 1917). In 1915, the KW Directors became official titles.

Essentials Of Walking

1. Head and Shoulders
 - a. Head should be to rear forming arch with shoulders.
2. Kick
 - a. Thighs should be brought up parallel to the ground before rest of leg is extended.
 - b. Leg should be straight.
 - c. Toes should be pointed.
3. Teamwork and Smoothness
 - a. Walkers should display high degree of coordination.
 - b. Rapidity of movement ought not necessarily be considered desirable over less rapid and more decisive actions.
 - c. Hands when raised in air above head should have fingers extended and separated.

Head is to rear forming arch with shoulders. Leg and knee are straight and toe is pointed.

JUDGING SYSTEM

This year each of the four judges will be responsible for the major areas of judging. In this way, the judges will be able to more critically evaluate the performances of each team.

The Color "Peerade"

Being one of the top college weekends in the country, the University of Vermont's Kake Walk must have something to offer. Although the jazz concert, the ball, and the skits are all an important part, nothing has been able to match the excitement of "Walkin' Fo De Kake." The competition of the fraternities for the coveted Kake, denoting excellence in performing the intricate and precise routines of Walking, is a tradition that no other college can boast of.

The walkers all wear silks and satins of different colors to identify them with their respective fraternities. The following list should be of great help to you both Friday and Saturday nights in determining who is who.

- Delta Psi - black and white vertical stripes.
- Kappa Sigma - green pants and tails with red vest.
- Lambda Iota - white pants, red vest, red and white stripe vest.
- Phi Delta Theta - blue costume with silver trim.
- Phi Mu Delta - orange and black.
- Phi Sigma Delta - violet costume with white lapels and white stripe down side.
- Sigma Alpha Epsilon - kelly green costume with silver sequins.

Trophies Unite 70 Years of Tradition

One of the highlights of Kake Walk weekend is the awarding of the trophies. It is through these trophies that the winning groups in each category receive recognition.

The MARSTON CUP, which replaced the Borgman Trophy last year, will be presented to the fraternity which gives the best skit. It is awarded on both Friday and Saturday nights. The skits are based on some humorous aspect of UVM life. The cup was named for the late Professor Fredrick C. Marston, who was faculty advisor to the Kake Walk Committee for nine years. Dr. Marston died in Nov. 1965. The Saturday night winners will keep the trophy for the first half of the year and then will relinquish it to Friday night's winners.

The PRESTON CUP is awarded for the best performance in walking for the kake. Like the Marston Trophy, it is awarded to the winners of both Friday and Saturday night.

Two coveted awards are given on Saturday night. The ELDRIDGE TROPHY is "presented each year to the team of walkers who display the most spirit, determination, and effort." Originated in 1966, the Trophy is in memoriam to Thomas F. Eldridge, '62, who was killed in action in Vietnam in Dec. 1965. Eldridge was a walker for Kappa Sigma Fraternity for three years.

Even more desirable, from the fraternities view, than the Eldridge Trophy is the LECHNYR TROPHY. "Given each year to the fraternity which exemplifies the ideal spirit of Kake Walk." It is named in honor of Joseph Lechnyr who rewrote the Kake Walk theme, "Cotton Babes" from memory when the original copy was lost in the flames when the Hayward Building burned down.

Other awards, given on Saturday night, include the SNOW SCULPTURE AWARD, which is self-explanatory, and the POSTER AWARD.

By Lee Clark

Every year as Kake Walk approaches, Percy Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" becomes the biggest hit on campus. Ever since 1913 "Cotton Babes" has been the theme song for Kake Walk.

At the time "Cotton Babes" was popular, it was a favorite Kake Walking melody. Today its popularity seems undimmed, and almost every UVM student finds himself humming the tune as Kake Walk approaches.

Few people here in Vermont realize that the composer of "Cotton Babes" was one of the best known and most productive songwriters of the 1910's and 20's. Percy Wenrich is still remembered for songs like "Moonlight Bay," "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose."

When "Cotton Babes" became the UVM theme song for Kake Walk, the music was first played by the Burlington Military Band, under the direction of George D. Sherman. Since 1921, Joseph Lechnyr was the only one who performed "Cotton Babes." When the Hayward Building burned down in 1929, Lechnyr rewrote Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" from memory, thus saving the song for posterity.

Percy Wenrich was born in Joplin, Missouri in 1887. His father loved to write music for political conventions and rallies in which he was usually involved. His mother, an accomplished musician, taught him to play the piano and the organ. Showing his musical talent in his youth, Wenrich used to perform his compositions with the aid of his glee club at political rallies. At the age of twenty-one, Wenrich was sent to the Chicago Musical College to study the organ. However, once he had been removed from the watchful eyes of his parents he broke away from his interest in the organ and began writing popular songs. As is the way with many young artists, Wenrich's first attempts were unsuccessful. His first break came when Frank Buck of Buck and Carney Music Publishers gave Wenrich the opportunity to write a song about Africa. Buck, having just returned from Africa, thought there might be potential in such a song and even supplied the young writer with the title, "Ashy Africa." Along with this publication was another song, "Just Because I'm From Missouri." His immediate success from these songs established Wenrich in the songwriting business.

WROTE SONGS ADVERTISING GIMBEL'S DEPT. STORE

When his profession was on the downgrade and Wenrich was about to return home to Joplin, he landed a job plugging songs in the music department of Gimbel's Milwaukee department store. It was then that another of his songs became a local hit - "Under The Tropical Moon." This provided Wenrich with enough confidence and money to get to New York. The road from here was not all clear sailing, but in the following years several other songs, such as "Rainbow" which established him as a professional composer, led him to success. One of his songs, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," became President Wilson's favorite song. In the fruitful years that followed, Percy Wenrich composed such greats as Percy Wenrich, composer of "Cotton Babes," lives again on the UVM campus.

"Moonlight Bay," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." Wenrich produced "Castles in the Sky," an operetta (in collaboration with Ray Peck) and "The

After he retired from vaudeville, the composer lived in Hollywood until he was stricken with tuberculosis. He and his wife moved to Saranac Lake, where she too became ill. During her hospitalization, which lasted for the rest of her life, Wenrich became an enthusiastic member of the Lambs.

In 1948, he wrote "Missouri, My State." His last musical effort was in 1952 when the Civil Air Patrol asked Wenrich to compose an official song. The completion and acceptance of his work, "Cadets of the Civil Air Patrol," was too much for the elated composer and several days later he died, in March of 1952.

"Cotton Babes" has come to mean many things. To the walkers, it is a final challenge and a climax to months of work. To the spectators, it is capsuled excitement. But one thing is certain — each Kake Walk, Percy Wenrich lives again on our campus.

Soccer Team Yan-Con Champs

The 1966 Soccer Team, Yankee Conference Champions.

By Ted Ryan

Desire, determination and surprising depth—these were the qualities which gave the soccer Catamounts of the University of Vermont their second, straight Yankee Conference title in two years.

The Cats, the Cinderella team of 1965 when they tied the University of Massachusetts for the title, were only rated a dark horse contenders in pre-season listing. UMass and the University of Connecticut were picked to battle it out for the crown while Vermont was expected to make only a token run at the stakes.

Coach Hal Greig, the Yankee Conference Coach of the Year in 1965, was hopeful but not extremely optimistic as the season opened. The Cats looked rough in two pre-season scrimmages and Greig could only hope his boys could find the scoring range before the season began.

At the end of the season, Greig said, "I was very pleased with the results, partly from the standpoint of our 5-0 Yankee Conference record and from our narrow win over UMass in the last game for the title."

"We didn't have great depth. About 12-14 boys played a lot of soccer. Yet, while we lacked the depth, we had to toss the reserves into the fray when we were hit with key injuries and they did a good job.

The reserves Greig was applauding were Theron Webster, Gary Smith and Dave Cronin. It was these boys who won the title with spectacular reserve play when a rash of injuries sidelined several starters.

Vermont concluded the regular season with an 8-1 record, the only loss was a 1-0 decision to Middlebury. The Yankee Conference title and the record were good enough to draw a bid from the NCAA Atlantic Coast Tourney. After dropping a 2-0 game to Elizabethtown, Pa., in the opening round, the Cats nipped Lynchburg 2-1 for the consolation title.

Throughout the season, Vermont was involved in close decisions. Yet the scores did not truly indicate the domination of the games which the Cats displayed.

Captain Uihlein Shines

CHIP UIHLEIN

By Fred Schlapp

Henry "Chip" Uihlein, a 5-10, 180 pound senior from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has been playing varsity hockey for Vermont for four years now, and yet has never really received the recognition he deserves. Chip scored six goals as a freshman, and six more as a sophomore, but last year as a junior he found the net for thirteen goals in leading Vermont to its best record since intercollegiate hockey was resumed in the 1962-63 season.

This season, as captain of the UVM icemen, Uihlein has proved just how valuable he is. With the Catamounts in the midst of a disastrous season, Chip has been the mainstay of the team playing both defense and center. In the words of Coach Jim Gross, "This boy is tops. He's played wherever I asked him to, thus jeopardizing any chance he might have had of making the division all-star team. He's our best checker, a good scorer, and most of all, he hustles every minute he's on the ice."

Chip started the season as a defenseman in an attempt to tighten up Vermont's porous defense, but in the first few games, although Vermont's defensive game was good, the offense sputtered. Thus, Coach Gross put him back on a line with Lee Roy and Jack Semler. Uihlein's return to his center position seemed to improve the play of his linemate's Roy and Semler as they have regained the touch that made them Vermont's leading scorers last year. To truly appreciate Uihlein's talents, one might have noticed his play against Boston State recently. Chip scored two goals in this game, and assisted on another. His tallies were both "picture play" goals as he burst through the defense and faked out the goalie. Perhaps even more important than the two goals was Uihlein's fine checking and passing exhibition. He was all over the ice checking hard, stealing the puck, scoring, and setting up Semler and Roy.

In the words of his team mates and Coach, "Chip is the guy who makes the team go. His fine play and leadership have been inspirational to all people connected with the team." It's about time he got some recognition for his efforts.

The biggest problem Vermont had was simply putting the ball into the nets. The defense, keyed by Tom Bitter and Donny Carlson, squelched many an opponent's drive. Constantly the Cats set up the shots but no one could boot the ball home.

After the season, honors were headed the Cats way. No one was named to the All-America team ("We were sadly neglected," Greig said), but Jeff Taft and Pete Baldwin were selected for the first team in the Yankee Conference while Jack Semler, Bob Schroeder and goalie John Hilton were named to the second team.

In All-State, Taft was named the Most Valuable Player while Hilton, Schroeder, Semler and Baldwin were also chosen for the team.

"The All-State selections were particularly deserving because all the teams were good," Stated Greig. Vermont was 9-2, Norwich, 7-1, Middlebury 5-2-1, and Castleton 9-4.

"Business is for the birds!"

Who says so?

Lots of people do. Some right on your campus. And for rationale, they point an accusing finger at business and say it lacks "social commitment."

Social commitment? We wish they could visit our Kearny, N. J. plant, where we make cable and apparatus for your Bell telephone company. But we have time for other thoughts, other talents.

Like the situation in nearby Newark. With civic and business leaders, we began buzzing with ideas. "Let's teach higher skills to some of the un-employed and under-employed. Say, machine shop practice. They could qualify for jobs that are going begging — and help themselves as well."

We lent our tool-and-die shop, evenings. We found volunteer instructors. A community group screened applicants. Another supplied hand tools. The Boys

Club donated classroom facilities. Another company sent more instructors.

Some 70 trainees enrolled. Their incentive? Self-improvement. Results to date? New people at better jobs. Happier.

And this is only one of dozens of social-minded projects at Western Electric plants across the country, where our first job is making communications equipment for the Bell System.

So, you don't give up ideals when you graduate. If anything, at a company like, say, Western Electric, you add to them. And it's not just a theory. It's practice. Satisfying. Come on and find out. And watch a feathered cliché fly out the window.

FOOTBALL SEASON IN REVIEW

The 1966 football season is over and to most people who followed the Cats, the memories remain a blur. A summary of the season, then, may help focus this blur so that it will not be completely forgotten.

The A.I.C. game has turned into merely a warmup game to many. Judging by the scores of the last 2 years. But does anybody remember what predictions said of A.I.C. before the season started? Both the last two years they expected to have good seasons and wanted desperately to get off on the right foot against Vermont, and both years their visions of grandeur ended in a nightmare. Getting A.I.C. off on the right foot the Cats did not, and they never really recovered from either game. Therefore, it will not be mentioned that they won only 1 game the rest of both campaigns and things do not look much brighter ahead. Nice future.

Vermont 35 - A.I.C. 12

The Connecticut game, it was felt, was the moment of truth, telling whether Vermont really had the team that was expected. The Huskies scoffed at Vermont, the Connecticut fans yelled, "Hey, where are you guys from?", and reporters called the Cats a soft spot on the Connecticut schedule, the abuse basically stemming from the fact that this was the first meeting between the two teams. The fierce pride of the Cats that people have heard so much about was a prime factor in Vermont's offense dominating the first half and the tremendous defensive effort in the second half to salvage the contest. The beaten Huskies limped into their locker room after the game and licked their wounds while they Cats, in their locker room, had their cake and ate it too.

Vermont 14 - Connecticut 10

The Catamounts were in good spirits going into the University of Rhode Island game, and perhaps even a little overconfident. The U.R.I. coach openly stated that Vermont was the toughest opponent on his power studded schedule which included U Mass., Temple, Brown, and Bucknell. It was their Homecoming and it looked the Cats were caught with their pants down looking at the queen candidates when Rhode Island struck first in the opening quarter. This, however, woke the Cats up and they decided to stop looking and start playing. The Cats were just too good for the Rams.

Vermont 21 - U.R.I. 7

Homecoming Weekend was next with New Hampshire visiting. They had freshly come off an upset win over Maine and promised to give the Cats a good fight. Well, the half time score was 26-0 with a beautiful T.D. run of an intercepted pass called back. It was, perhaps, the best half of UVM football ever played. The second half rolled around and the Cats, figuring they had the game sewed up, started looking at the girls in the stands again. The amazing thing was that Vermont never really back on the track again and the fired-up Wildcats turned a rout into a comeback thriller.

Vermont's second team Little-All-America and record smashing half-back, Bob Mitchell. Mitchell will be back for an encore next year.

Vermont 32 - U.N.H. 24

The Norwich Cadets were next. They sobbed in their locker room when they lost a heartbreaker last year 7-6 and vowed they would get revenge. They point their whole season for Vermont and came out on the field with all the determination and fury they had. They hit hard, they tackled viciously. They remembered their vow of last year and used every trick in the book against the Cats. It was a hot day and most of the Cats only played half the game. The Norwich backs ran well, their game strategy was superb. The fans were going wild - Vermont fans, that is.

Vermont 43 - Norwich 0

The reason Vermont played so well in the Norwich game was because they were getting ready for the biggest game in the Northeast the following week, a game which would undoubtedly decide the Yankee Conference Championship. The fact that Vermont lost the game 27-21 was a lowpoint in the campaign, but it also showed signs of encouragement. Massachusetts is a team that gives out over twice as many football scholarships and does not demand so much of its players academically. It is in the hub, of a football area, overflowing with talent, as compared to Burlington, which is, one could say, just the opposite. U Mass. had outscored Vermont 110-13 over the past 3 seasons, and the fact that the Cats outplayed

Taft, Baldwin and Semler handled most of the scoring throughout the season and Jimmy Woods and the reserves notched important goals. Bitter, Carlson and Schroeder anchored the defense but the most surprising player on the team was the goalie, Hilton.

The redheaded junior had never played a game of soccer in his life before he went out for the team. He was, in short, fantastic. He displayed exceptionally fine hands, agility and desire. As a result, he turned in four shutouts and the most spectacular play of the season.

Playing UMass for the YanCon title, Vermont lead by a 1-0 count. UMass received the ball on a penalty kick but Hilton batted away the penalty smash with a diving block to preserve the Vermont win.

Only two starters won't be back for the 1967 season, seniors Carlson and Bitter. Reserve goalie Jerry Abbot, who filled in well, reserve win Bill Burling who proved valuable when the injury jinx came, and George Wrightson, a senior who never played in a game but whose hustle and determination kept the starters scrambling for their jobs, will also leave via the graduation route.

Next fall's season is bright. The freshmen posted a 6-1 record but Greig still regards the season with his characteristic restraint "With hard work and some breaks, we hope to be in the thick of it again," he concluded.

Vermont must be favored to repeat in the Yankee Conference next fall but the Cats will be the targets of all opponents.

TOURNAMENT REVIEW

Game 1 - This was the opening round of the NCAA Atlantic Coast Tourney and the Cats played well but the results was a disappointing 2-0 loss to Elizabethtown, the Middle Atlantic Conference powerhouse. It was the inability to put the ball into the nets which lost the game. Vermont dominated the second, third and early parts of the fourth periods. The Cats outshot the victors, 20-14.

Game 2 - Vermont was anxious to score at least one win in the tourney and nipped Lynchburg, Va., 2-1 in the consolation match. Baldwin and Smith notched the goals as Vermont again repeatedly blew shots.

By Bob Bloomenthal

The recent decision of both Norwich and Middlebury to drop Vermont from their football schedules in two years raises some questions about the future intentions of the UVM athletic department, and in particular, the destiny of our football team. Apparently, Norwich and Middlebury see no sense in continuing their traditional rivalries with the Catamounts (in football, at any rate) since the UVM staff has decided to join the never-ending rat race of "big time" football.

Admittedly, the so-called "purely amateur" football played by Middlebury is not the best solution to keeping the alumni, the spectators, and the press happy. But, neither is an attempt to keep the pace of bigger Yankee Conference schools such as Massachusetts and Connecticut. If this is the hope of the athletic department, it had better think twice. Vermont may reach the present level of UConn or UMass (in financial aid, etc.) in a couple of years, but those two schools will no longer be at that level by then -- they are also constantly improving (economically, that is) their athletic programs.

Thus, the only way in which Vermont can hope to keep pace with these schools, as we see it, is to de-emphasize all other sports, as is done by a hockey school like St. Lawrence, or, on a larger scale, a football school like Alabama. We are quite certain that this would not be the most popular suggestion to basketball coach Art Loche, baseball mentor Ralph LaPointe, or even to the coaches of the sports of the future, Hal Greig, Jim Cross, and Bob Stone. Neither would the majority of the fans ambitiously support such a plan. If anyone from the football staff would care to inform us clearly of their exact intentions in accelerating their program (tougher teams must be scheduled to replace the two state opponents), and its effects on the rest of the UVM athletic program, we would be glad to listen.

Cat-Tracks ... One can't help but look forward to a possible starting lineup for next year's hoop sport squad ... A front line of 6-6 Ray Bueb, 6-7 Aldo Salati, and 6-3 Bill Librera, plus the marvelous back court team of 6-3 Dave Lapointe and 6-2 Frank Martiniuk, with 6-0 Roy Greenman and 6-4 Bob Hutton as backup men seems like almost too much to believe ... Nevertheless, URI returns four of their five starters (and a 6-7 sixth man) and must already be considered the favorite for Yankee Conference honors ... Unless St. Michael's can come up with a couple transfers of the caliber of former Dick Tarrant or even present star Tom McKenna, UVM may start to dominate the State Series again ... Catamount fans may have a real treat in store this spring in watching the baseball team perform ... Despite the loss (through grades) of Tom Suchanek, a top-notch pitching prospect, coach Ralph Lapointe cannot help but be optimistic about his pitching staff, and the team in general ... With the addition of son Dave to play short-stop (the only position through graduation), the squad could be in for a trip to Omaha, Nebraska, for the College World Series - if everything goes right ... The esprit de corps of the baseball team is without a doubt the highest of any UVM athletic squad, which is a fine tribute to coach Lapointe.

the Redmen the last 3 quarters of the game are indication enough that Vermont is no longer the University of Massachusetts' cup of tea.

The next week was taken very lightly by the Cats so the team decided to spend it in bed and miss practice. Consequently half the team came down with the flu. Against a Middlebury team determined to stay in the game, the Cats were a little too lax at first and Middlebury opened with a long bomb and a field goal. This startled the Cats and reminded them they were no longer in bed. Despite two T.D.'s being called back, the Cats romped.

Vermont 27 - Middlebury 3

With a win over the Maine Black Bears, Vermont was a prime candidate for the Tangerine Bowl in Florida. All they had to do was win. The Cats thundered out on the field, keeping the Bowl bid in mind. They hit hard and tackled viciously and ... awww, whatsa use. You know the rest.

Maine 52 - Vermont 7

Here are some interesting statistics. Last year the record was 6-2 and it was the same this year. However, the total offense this year netted 2,611 yards whereas last year it was 1,937. Last year's Catamounts averaged 19.9 points per game and this year's team averaged 25 a game. The Cats set a new first down record with 133. The Cats got 112 last year. Rushing yardage went up from 1112 to 1571 and passing yardage went up from 825 to 1040. The Cats played before 53,800 people this past year.

SPALTER

This Saturday afternoon at 1:30 the 1966-67 Catamount basketball team will try to prove to a group "has-beens" that they are not as bad as their record indicates, when they play the Alumni in an exhibition game at the Patrick Gym. The Alumni will be coached by Former long-time UVM basketball coach, John "Fuzzy" Evans.

Evans compiled an excellent 261-195 record in his 23 years of coaching, a feat which is magnified when it is recalled he never had a player taller than 6-5 on any of his teams. His best season was 1946-47 when he guided his team to a 19-3 mark. Both Evans and track and cross-country coach Archie Post will be awarded certificates for being elected to the Helms Foundation Hall of Fame at half time of the game.

GOGGANS

Heading the roster for the Alumni will be three former second team All-Yankee Conference selections. They are 6-3 Ralph D'Altilla (1964-65), 6-2 Charlie Isles (1959-60), and 5-9 Bobby Kuchar (1958-59, 1957-58). D'Altilla holds the single game scoring mark for a Vermont player with a 42 point effort against New Hampshire in the 1964-65 season. In that game Ralph also set one game records for field goals (16) and points in one half (27).

Isles was also an excellent baseball prowess, and has been a minor league player. Kuchar, the third leading career scorer in Catamount history with 1091 points for a 16.9 average in 67 games, was a member of the last Vermont team to defeat Connecticut.

Also slated to appear for the Alumni is Jack Shabel, the fourth highest scorer in UVM annals. Shabel was a teammate of the best rebounder and second leading scorer ever for the Catamounts, Benny Becton. The oldest player to appear will be Skip Burkhardt who is a 1957 alumnus.

Other players anticipated for the game include Bobby Nurse, John Stahler, and Dave Strassburg from the teams of 1960-63, and the three graduated stars of last year's squad, Milt Goggans, Layne Higgs, and Kenny Spalter.

Coach Art Loche is expected to counter with his usual starting five of Bill Librera, Russ Boardman, Alden Hale, sophomore sensation Dave Lapointe, and captain Bruce Hanna. The 1966-67 Catamounts have been suffering through a dismal season and hope to take out their frustrations on the visiting group of stars from the past.

Kake Walk Ball Called 'Bizarre'

By Laura Cahners

The Kake Walk Ball, Thursday, February 16th, held in Patrick Gymnasium proved to be quite a bizarre exhibition.

Upon entering the crowded gym, one was struck by the display of dresses ranging from Paraphernalia's latest to long evening gowns. Since this was the only time of the year for co-eds to dress formally, the majority looked their best. The fact that so many girls actually enjoyed buying gowns and getting ready for the whole affair seems to indicate that more formal dances should be held at UVM.

The males, on the other hand, had a general attitude of disdain toward the Ball and brought their dates only to see Mitch Ryder. Although they were well-groomed, many of them wore blazers, or sports jackets, thus there were a noticeable discrepancy between their clothes and those of the girls.

Lest Lanin must be commended not only for an exhibition of musical excellence, but also for his endurance as he was forced to play approximately two hours overtime due to a rash act by a UVM student.

The "Chicago Loop" appeared before Ryder as part of his act. They were a good group with a distinctly original style.

Due to the restless waiting and mounting anticipation for Ryder, an unidentified person threw an empty "pint bottle" at the performers. The group was rushed off stage to safety and a long wait ensued before Mitch came on to perform for barely a half hour.

Although this action can not be completely condoned, the failure of Mitch Ryder to live up to his contract did not especially endear him in the eyes of the students.

Apply NOW For Cynic Staff

The Senior Staff of the Vermont CYNIC is now accepting applications for the 1967-68 Staff. All applications must be placed in the mailbox - Billings desk addressed to the Editors - by Tuesday, Feb. 28 at 4:00.

For those who are applying for an editorship or news and feature position, please submit with your application a sample of your writing ability. This may be a class assignment, a previously assigned article for the newspaper, or a topic of your own choice. Applications will be accepted both from present staff members and from other interested persons.

The positions are as follows:

Editor-in-Chief	Reprints Editor
Assistant Editor	Business Manager
Managing Editor	Advertising Manager
Asst. Managing Editor	Sports Editor
News & Feature Editor	Circulation Manager
Asst. News & Feature Editor	Student Advisor

The letter of application must include name, year, position desired, experience and reasons for supposed eligibility.

Memorial Held for Dr. Charles Bond

On Wednesday evening, February 15, the family and friends of the late Dr. Charles Bond gathered at the Ira Allen Chapel for a memorial service.

After an invocation, eulogies were delivered by members of the UVM and South Burlington communities. A benediction concluded the simple service.

President Lyman S. Rowell spoke of Dr. Bond's position in the university community as a dedicated teacher and a respected scholar.

The sentiments of the students who knew Dr. Bond were expressed by Terry Mathews, a senior Zoology major. Terry stressed the fact that Dr. Bond was a friend, guiding students and giving them a working knowledge of his subject. He said that Bond expected much, but gave even more.

Dr. Bond's many contributions to South Burlington were praised by a member of that community. She spoke of his varied interests which led to involvement in town politics, education and the Green Mountain Audubon Society, and concern for the preservation and conservation of natural resources.

Dr. Paul A. Moody of the Zoology department, spoke of his friend as a scientist whose "forward-looking" optimism inspired his students and enabled him to attain the excellence that he did. Bond placed great faith in his students' capabilities and enjoyed following their post-graduate accomplishments.

As Dr. Bond's students we feel that the images presented by those who knew Dr. Bond in various aspects of his life reflect our memory of him. His abilities, intellect and achievements, embodied in a modest manner, commanded our respect.

TO QUOTE DR. MOODY, "WE ARE HIS IMMORTALITY...MAY WE BE WORTHY OF THE TRUST."

Kappa Sig & AGR Win Walkin Phi Sig Awarded Lechnyr Trophy

By Marion Robinson

In front of thousands of spectators, the 70th annual Kake Walk began and ended with uproarious applause and a mass exit for the parties that were scheduled to follow the festivities.

Immediately after the directors were introduced, King Gary

Lawson and Queen Janice Fucci with her court entered, crossed the floor and seated themselves in the place of honor.

After the formalities, the horn sounded, marking the beginning of Alpha Tau Omega's skit. This skit primarily concerned last summer's change in the Administrative Department. Although it was difficult to hear every word, the skit accomplished its purpose which was "to shed some light" on the entire situation.

Tau Epsilon Phi received second-place both nights for its brilliant presentation of the problems in using computerized teaching aids and tape recording devices. Even though it was entitled "The Future of Education," the skit, itself, showed very well some of the present problems and methods in classrooms and on campus at UVM.

Again the unifying voices of Phi Sigma Delta lead by Bob Price captivated the audience as they sang a lasting tribute to UVM. "How the University Became the Green and Gold" told the real story about the discovery of America. Its originality and choreography certainly played a prime role in the decision which granted Phi Sig the Marston Trophy for one year.

After a brief pause, all eyes watched the spotlight focus on two men dressed in brilliantly colored suits and followed them as they "walked" on to the floor. Each team presented themselves to the King and Queen with the traditional bow and placement of their hats and canes at the foot of the thrones. Another spotlight immediately fell upon a lone man holding a handkerchief as the walkers turned to face the band. Simultaneously, the call of "ready," the handkerchief fell and the band struck up the mighty chords of "Cotton Babes." This procedure with minor changes in the entrance of each team was repeated 17 times each night. The only major difference was when Team 12 (Friday night) or 15 (Saturday night) entered and came before the royal couple. King Gary stood and walked down to his fraternity brothers extending a hand and smile for good luck.

As a grand finale for both nights, each team came back, forming a "Peerade" of their walking abilities.

The presentation of awards closed the first night of walking. They were as follows:

To Phi Sigma Delta - Marston Trophy

To Sigma Phi Epsilon - 3rd place trophy

Special Committee Studies Change In Kake Walk Date

In response to questions raised earlier concerning changes in the Date of Kake Walk, Dr. Edward Miles, chairman of the geography department, has made available information derived from his work as chairman of the "Ad Hoc Committee to Determine the Dates of Kake Walk."

Appointed by the University Senate last spring, the committee was delegated to study any possible changes which would better "fit the needs of the students first and the desires of the alumni and others second."

The committee, representing a wide cross section of the people most concerned with Kake Walk and its production, includes Fred Brown, president of Interfraternity Council, Harold Clarke, registrar and administration, Irving Lisman, president, Alumni Interfraternity Council; Dr. Miles, chairman; University Senate; David Modzelewski, Student Association representative; Dr. M.W. Perrine, faculty advisor to Interfraternity Council; Theodore Rowen, Kake Walk Committee; and Albert Spaulding, alumni representative.

Time did not allow any change in the schedule 1967 date for Kake Walk, and the University calendar has been adopted by the University Senate through 1969, with the exception of the Kake walk dates.

The committee has been looking into various suggestions, trying to find a weekend that will not interfere with the midterm exams, which many professors give and which now fall the week before and the week after Kake Walk. Also taken into consideration is sufficient time for the fraternities to practice their skits following the semester break.

The alumni were asked if they had any objection to a change, through the article in the "UVM Alumni Magazine," which prompted no alumni response. The administration has been very agreeable concerning any change which might be brought about, and it is felt the University Senate will abide by the committee's recommendations.

Thus, the administration, faculty, IFC and alumni are working together for a change in the date of Kake Walk which will be beneficial to the students and will, in all probability, not be greater than one or two weeks earlier than the traditional date.

Three UVM Trustees Retire

Three Board of Trustees member's terms expired Saturday, February 18. The outgoing members, all elected to the Board by the Legislature in March, 1961, were: Harold C. Billings of Springfield; Mrs. Mildred J. Burbank of Waitsfield; both present today. Dr. James N. Kennedy, Island Pond, sent regrets.

Billings, a 1918 Vermont alumnus, is a retired engineer and former high school principal. He is now serving his fifth term in the House of Representatives.

Mrs. Burbank is also a Vermont alumna and was a member of the House in 1959 and 1961. Dr. Kennedy, a dentist, has a long record of service to the State that includes a 1965 term in the Senate for Essex County and membership in the House, 1959 and 1961, and as Secretary of Civil and Military Affairs to Governor Hoff.

Reps. Peter Giuliani of Montpelier; George D. Sloan of Rutland; and Ellwyn Miller of Putney, elected this week to succeed the outgoing trio, were present at today's session.

A History of Vermont Conference

Because progress and education are mutually reinforcing ideals, and because the student body at the University of Vermont found that their education outside the classroom was lacking in many areas, Vermont Conference was created in 1951 by the Student Association with the express purpose of bringing to the University campus distinguished and qualified authorities to speak on topics of national and international import in a three-day seminar.

Vermont Conference has been plagued with problems and blessed with success since its inception. It is one matter to create such an organization, yet another to choose a topic, find speakers, and present the program in a manner that one might call "ordered and coherent." When the program presented an interesting or provocative subject with wide appeal, it was highly attended and termed a success. A brief history of the Conference seems to substantiate this general feeling. There were years in which Conference was not held, but this was not due to external circumstances but to internal problems that were beyond the control of the committee members.

"What is the greatest threat to American Liberty?" was the question asked in 1954. The general conclusion was that Senator Joe McCarthy was American liberty's greatest threat. The three lectures seemed to reach this conclusion after their three-day study; they were Thurman Arnold, Past Assistant Secretary of State; Henry Hazlitt, editor of "Newsweek"; and James O'Neil, author of "Catholicism and American Freedom." Reverend Robert Brown, professor of theology at Auburn, concluded that McCarthy was a man out to "make the big lie or the little lie the mode of action in political life."

The following year a topic of more import to students than to the community in the immediate terms, but more significant to all society in the final view, was presented—and accepted widely throughout the nation. "The University Student—Educated for What?" received critical acclaim for analytically discussing the area of education and American youth.

"New directions" was the topic chosen for 1959 and that year's Conference deviated from the established precedent of presenting an objective program explaining the probable direction of the future in theology, music, psychology and business.

The 1960 Vermont Conference presented "This Pendent World," a moral, political, and philosophical discussion of man and his world. The speakers represented an imposing list of dissidents and defenders of contemporary life. Mr. Nicholas Christofilos concerned himself with science and civilization; Nirmal Chaudhuri, a very impressive orator, spoke on "A Light in Asia," and finally Mr. Lawrence Forlinghetti, non-conforming as usual, diverted from the traditional concept of speaking a lecture, "poet-ed," for one and a half hours, explaining his views in iambic pentameter. The response to this program was overwhelming; students rose in protest, the mass media editorialized, and the people, in general were moved to take a stand—yet no one was sure what they were doing. Vermont Conference succeeded in 1960 in the ultimate goal that previous Conferences had not reached: active interest and discussion was stimulated.

1962 Conference was entitled "It's Anyone's Guess" and the breadth of the Conference seemed to confirm it. Oscar Lewis, Professor of Anthropology at University of Illinois, spoke of "The Culture of Poverty." Jules Feiffer, internationally recognized cartoonist and satirist, accepted an invitation to speak and addressed the campus on the "Psychology of Laughter."

The 1964 Vermont Conference Committee, picked a topic that exploded only a few months before the presentation, and was featured nationally as a representative program discussing a vital issue. "Pride and Prejudice: The Negro Struggle for Civil Rights" seemed to come at the right time, at the right place, and with the right people. It has been estimated that as many as 85% of the student body attended at least one session of the Conference.

Conference 1965, was presented with the goal of involving the interest of every student of the campus. Called "Genesis Revisited: The Scientific, Social and Ethical Implications of Man-made Man," the Conference made an attempt to understand the scientific revolution in the area of the DNA molecule and its meaning for men.

"Is God Dead?" comprised the theme of the 1966 Conference. The topic came out of an awareness that most modern men, question the existence, past or present, of God.

The first speaker was Paul Van Buren, an Episcopal priest. He is known as one of the "God is Dead" theologians. His talk compared God and religion to a city; although buildings and whole sections must be replaced, if we totally demolish some building (concepts such as God, etc.) the essence if the city would be destroyed.

Dr. Shicbert Ogden, Vermont Conference's second speaker, looked at religion in a different light. He stated that History and Science disprove the existence of God. What is needed is a neo-classic theology on which would be acceptable to modern man.

The final speaker, John McQuarra stated that belief in God is faith in the "Holy Being," that is faith that there is meaning and value beyond human experience.

Did Rowell Ban Nude Painting?

By Dick Matheson

Last week a UVM student's painting of a nude was removed from the display outside President Rowell's Office. All over campus people wanted to know why the work had been replaced and by whom.

Some of the original paintings in the display had been taken down to be displayed in another exhibit at Montpelier. Dr. Richard Janson, Director of the Fleming Museum and responsible for the Waterman display, requested Hanlyn Davies, an art instructor, to hang new paintings in the display to replace the others.

Among the new paintings put up was a painting of a nude by Stephen Carlson '67, a student in one of Mr. Davies' classes.

While Mrs. Holzinger, curator at Fleming Museum, was rearranging some of the paintings in the Waterman gallery, Pres. Rowell apparently expressed disapproval of the painting of the nude, and another painting was substituted for it.

According to Mrs. Holzinger the conversation was as follows:

Rowell: "If it was a good painting, I would have no objection to a nude, but this is not a good painting."

Mrs. Holzinger: "We're going to hang it."

Rowell: "No, don't do that."

A secretary in Mr. Rowell's office, in saying that the President was not available for comment, stated, "I felt quite sure that he did not ask to have it taken down." She admitted that she did not know, as she was not there at the time.

Mr. Janson said that there was some confusion, but that the art department did not want to make a big issue out of the affair. "I didn't think it particularly suited to be exhibited there," he commented.

Stephen Carlson, the painter, believes that the administration thinks that our art department is concerned with arts and crafts rather than with serious art. He thought the removal of the painting was "very nasty" though he confessed the work was "one of my poorer efforts."

"I fail to understand the whole situation," said Mr. Davies. "In terms of student work it was quite a competent piece of painting. I assume it was removed because the subject matter was considered pornographic. It's not. The painting was produced in all sincerity with no intention of pornography or sensationalism."

Mr. Davies said his main concern was for the student. "The removal of the painting may raise doubts of sincerity," he thought. "The students is concerned with developing a certain awareness in visual response. It is a thinking situation. It would be morally wrong to dictate the subject matter."

Mr. Janson stressed that selections of works for the display was up to the art department. "I would be disappointed if the President didn't have any feelings about the paintings," he said. "It's not a terrible picture. It has some interesting things in

Children Enjoy Walking

Twenty children and their houseparents from the Josephine B. Baird Children's Center and its Group Home received a special Valentine's Day treat Tuesday.

They were guests of the University of Vermont at a rehearsal of Kake Walk Weekend walking at the UVM Patrick Gym. The entertainment was especially meaningful for the children as many of them have few outside diversions from Center activity.

The Children's Center on Pine Street, Burlington, is a residential treatment center, offering specialized services for emotionally disturbed children.

it. Obviously the figure caused conversation. I don't feel that art is something done to make an issue out of it."

WHAT IS G.C.C.?

1. G.C.C. (General Cable Corporation) is the largest independent producer of electrical wire and cable. A rapidly growing Corporation with a work force of over 18,000 employees more than 45 manufacturing locations, including operations in Canada, Venezuela, Colombia and Spain.
2. General Cable Corporation is a young Corporation founded less than forty years ago, it has grown so rapidly that in the past 10 years it has increased its manufacturing operations eightfold. It has burgeoned from a small number of independent electrical wire fabricators to a nationwide industrial complex with current sales volume over $400,000,000.
3. General Cable Corporation is a young Corporation in another sense. Looking through its organization you will find young ideas. Men holding key management positions are there because they have been evaluated on the basis of ability - what they can contribute.
4. One of the major reasons for G.C.C.'s success and rapid growth is the flexibility of its management to anticipate and respond to the needs of an ever-expanding market.
5. G.C.C. is a diversified corporation with a broad operating base. It manufactures a complete line of electrical wire and cable products, machinery for use in the wire and cable industry and ancillary products related to wire and cable. G.C.C. wire and cable products are found in substantially every application for the transmission of electric current, from the hair fine wires used in delicate instrumentation to power cables capable of transmitting 345,000 volts.
6. G.C.C. has and maintains a reputation for excellence in its industry. It is the leading wire and cable corporation in the United States.
7. We are constantly searching for bright young people who have the capability, imagination and drive to move ahead with us.

Do you have this capability, imagination and drive? If so CONTACT MR. DOUGLAS HANAU, UVM PLACEMENT DIRECTOR, for more information and an interview time.

The Vermont Cynic

EDITORIAL...

We can't quite believe that the end of our free and basically irresponsible days is so close. We are about to leave the pinnacle of collegiate success and transcend into the real world. It may seem early in the semester to be having such reveries, but we have learned, after four years of indoctrination, that the UVM New Year starts at Kake Walk time. Student elections in almost every organization are held at this time and the seniors who have been active now have a chance to sit back and take a good look at what has been "home."

We see many changes in both the physical structure of the campus as well as the operation of the University. What senior can forget the one-time campus eyesore, East Hall, which was so kindly replaced by an arena of formidable machines surrounded by half and little, almost windowless rooms? Just because the fronts of all the new buildings are indistinguishable there is no reason to fight progress and an attempt at beautification and expansion.

The aspect of change which truthfully affects us, however, is the increased laxity in many of the regulations in the areas of housing, pink cards, curfews, drinking and, believe it or not, an even more liberal happening.

We've always thought that our University was rather Victorian, and yet the new strides in all the above areas indicate a new trend. Surely an old-time school would hardly have the near-highest tuition. One needs to be acutely aware of the outside world in order to know how to spend all the money which comes pouring in.

In spite of all this, we are frightened by one thought. In our industrialized society, something becomes vitally important - this is communications. The most widely acquired medium for communicating ideas is a newspaper. It's disgraceful that an institution of higher learning such as UVM has no training ground in the technicalities of producing a top-rate or even a mediocre paper. Courses and eventually a major in Journalism must precede an effective student newspaper. With all of the advances which have been made in the past four years, this problem has hardly been touched upon. It's time that we were given the opportunity to advance along with the rest of our modern world.

Letters to the Editors

Disturbed By Housing Furor

To the Editors:

I am a bit disturbed by the present furor and outcry against the administration's policy concerning off-campus housing.

This is not to say that I am satisfied with the administration's policy in this regard; I would, very much, like to be given the privilege of living in my own apartment, and furthermore, I think that the abolishment of these regulations would, in the long run, benefit both the university and its students.

However, I start to get uncomfortable whenever I hear one of the advocates of the VSM petition, or anyone else, for that matter, hotly declaring that our civil rights and our dignity as human beings are being trampled into the ground, and that we should, perhaps, take some more drastic action if the administration bureaucrats are not swayed from their oppressive and/or archaic position.

It is becoming nearly as dangerous nowadays to speak disrespectfully about somebody's rights as it was to speak disrespectfully about motherhood twenty years ago, so I suppose that I take my life into my hands, or at least, risk being called a filthy reactionary, in saying this, but I fail to see any reason why a student should feel that he has any of the "rights" that are supposedly being suppressed.

It seems to me that when a student comes voluntarily to the university, he implicitly agrees to follow the regulations of that institution, in much the same way that he agrees to pay tuition, and, in fact, to fulfill certain academic requirements. These are simply the conditions, which are made quite plain by the catalogue and other literature, to which we agree in exchange for the privilege of attendance.

Therefore, I see no "right" to live off campus (or to drink in the dorms, or to be free of curfews). It seems to me that the logical thing for a student who finds that he cannot live with the regulations to do is to go in search of an institution with regulations more compatible with his opinions.

I hope that no one will conclude that I feel that the present rule is a good one, or that I do not wish the students who are presently campaigning for a change success; I simply hope that they will refrain from talking about our so-called "rights" in the course of their campaign.

Sincerely,

Michael Patterson, '69

Revisions For Kake Walk

To the Editors,

This weekend I saw Kake Walk for the first time in my sporadic career at UVM. However, I did not see it as a spectator, but as a participant. I was a member of the lighting crew. It was because of my participation in this capacity that my perception of the weekend was colored. As a lighting man I think of myself as a dramatic artist. And there is the rub. I was an artist running lights for a sporting event. Kake Walk is not Art; it is competition. That is the cause of my dilemma. I looked at Kake-Walk as potential Art. It could be very good Art, but because it is competition it fails as Art. Of course it could never be changed because the competitive force is the motivation for the whole weekend. Thus the walkers walk for the Kake (the prize) and not for the beauty of the walking. I submit that Kake Walk would be a better event if it was based on co-operation and not on competition.

Sincerely,

Jeff Kent

Student Complains About Bailey

To the Editor,

As an undergraduate at UVM I have been repeatedly frustrated, annoyed, amused and, occasionally, driven to the point of despair by what should be the prime support of education on this campus. I am referring to Bailey Library.

My complaints are specific and drawn from first-hand experience.

1. THE LOANSYSTEM. Armed with a list of books suggested as excellent and pertinent to a course I am taking by the Professor, I went to Bailey Library. A long, tedious search conducted in the jostling throngs in the too-small card-index area revealed the fact that four of the seven books on my list were not in the library. Experience with public libraries throughout the state had left me with the knowledge that if the library were too poor to have the needed books on its shelves, they could be borrowed from another library fairly swiftly and for a small postage-charge. With confidence I explained my problem to the gentleman at the desk, and filled out four request slips for the needed books. As I handed them back to the gentleman he glanced at the corner titled STATUS which I had filled out as "undergraduate" and blandly told me that the loan service was only for graduate students and faculty! In short, I could not get the books I was interested in from Bailey Library. A bothersome and tedious way around this problem was to enlist the aid of a faculty member or a graduate student. When I made incredulous complaint, the gentleman smoothly told me that the loan system discriminated against undergraduates in order to keep the volume of borrowed books down! If Bailey Library is working actively in this specific area to keep the volume of books down, then what in heaven's name does it conceive the function of a library to be? I, as a student, am not concerned with Bailey Library's understaffed condition or inability to handle a flow of books; these are problems they must solve themselves. I am interested in getting the books I need and want, and I feel strongly that Bailey Library has a responsibility to me to secure those books.

2. THE RESERVE SYSTEM. At a later date, armed with yet another list of books for a research paper in an English course, I went to the shelves. Nothing there. Emptiness. I went down to the reserve desk where I found the books and a rigid system of rules stating that the books were only to be taken out one at a time, for a period of only two hours, and that the book could not be renewed for a period immediately following the first check-out time. Since I

PROFESSORES...

Clark Kerr has been a scholar in the past. It is likely he will be a scholar again in the future.

When Clark Kerr was fired by a majority vote of the Regents of the University of California he was serving as an administrator rather than as a scholar. A fair-minded observer could have concluded that, as President of the University of California, Kerr had proven beyond a reasonable doubt that he was incapable of handling his complex administrative duties and should be replaced without further delay.

It seems to me inaccurate to paint the action of the Regents as an issue involving academic freedom. It wasn't even a clear-cut example of political interference in university affairs.

California's new Governor approached the Clark Kerr problem with previous administrative experience limited to duty as a labor union president. My own administrative experience comes from a military career. Given the opportunity I would have tried to replace Kerr more quietly than was done by the Regents, but replacing him would have been high on my list of administrative priorities.

This viewpoint hardly arises from my extra-faculty role as a former Republican member of the New Hampshire Legislature. I concurred at the time with the action by President Truman in relieving General Douglas MacArthur from command. I still think that in his place I would have taken action to relieve a field commander who had grown insubordinate.

One of the main duties of a university president is to provide an environment which permits orderly study.

Some of my younger friends advance the claim that a University ought also to be an arena in which students can become involved and in which they can become concerned about the human condition. While I doubt the need for faculty members to help push along such involvement, I would agree on the need for tolerance of protests which may seem strange to older members of the academic community.

If student demonstrations take place from time to time, so be it. Higher education has survived occasional outbursts by past generations of students. (My own days at UCLA were when Berkeley was the conservative campus and UCLA bore the label of being "a hotbed of communism.")

Despite this approval of tolerance for student movements, student demonstrations should not be permitted to conflict substantially with scheduled academic work.

Clark Kerr failed dismally to keep student demonstrations from interfering with scheduled classroom teaching. For that and related failures the Regents finally decided to replace him with someone who can maintain reasonable academic routine.

There is ample time during each 168 hour week for any student to do all the rioting he wants and still keep up with his studies.

It is up to the administrators to see that students join only those riots which they can attend without cutting class.

By M. Minsky

The reformist Vermont Student Movement (VSM's contribution to the pseudo-left) plans not only to fight curfew policies, but also the administration's rescinding of the temporary housing policy. At first one might suppose these programs are to say the least desirable - the curfew and housing policy of this university seem hopelessly out of date. It is my belief, however, that the VSM seriously misunderstands both the administration and the needs of the typical UVM student.

The administration, it must be remembered, consists mainly of members of the over-forty generation, and it is this generation which possesses the power of ruling this nation. Their accomplishments and sobriety are not to be doubted. They elected twice a sober, respectable general rather than the all too inquisitive Stevenson and proved that the most average citizen can make a beloved president. They narrowly missed electing Nixon, but this error was tragically rectified by an assassination. In the last presidential election the "over-forties" provided us with two sterling candidates. In state politics they have provided us with Ronald Reagan; my regard for him matches the regard he would have for me. In Alabama they honored American womanhood.

It is the over-forty generation which took upon itself the responsibility of forcing the world to be safe for democracy and then humbly stepped aside to let the younger generation prove its virility on the battle field. The UVM student is doing his share of the fighting. Even the most stupid patriotic student on campus works long into the night so he can help his country by staying in school. Fewer students are leaving school because they realize the important advantages education brings during a time of war.

The over-forty generation has made this campus what it is today. They are responsible for the distinctive architecture of Lafayette and Voley Halls as well as the library and the gym. Wisely they spent three million dollars on a physical culture plant and slightly less for a storehouse of books. They have provided this campus with the sound of a hundred typists busily, merrily, and efficiently typing at all sorts of things. Their only interests are the students. They are all honorable men, these administrators. None of them have that lean and hungry look. And it must be remembered that when they make a new rule they don't do it because of a mere whim or a desire. They do it because they have to. They are honorable men. They know that every rule causes new problems which can only be solved by new rules and so.

The typical UVM co-ed will hardly approve of VSM intervention on their behalf. The typical UVM co-ed, that sweet minded, dimpled, candy coated, one hundred and fifty pound piece of fun is mature enough to recognize her own immaturity. Extension of curfew would mean extension of responsibility. If the UVM co-ed really wanted to end curfew she could have done so long ago. If a large majority of co-eds simply refuse to obey the rules what could the university do? Expell them all and lose all that money? Wisely our precious co-eds have seen fit not to indulge in any such anarchistic activities - they might catch cold. What's worse she might gain freedom. Herded through high school like little sheep, so cute and innocent, any freedom at this point would spoil them and make them unsuitable and unmanagable as darling little housewives. All the administration wants is to make sure we kids don't get into any trouble and go around doing things we shouldn't. They want to protect us and we as dutiful children should respect our elders and desire their protection. I do not mean to criticize the administration and I hope I do not offend any of them in making a few petty suggestions. If the administration really wants to aid us it should make a few minor reforms.

First of all, there should be a curfew for male students to keep them out of trouble. Male students should also be made to fill out pink cards so the administration will know where they are "in case of an emergency." These boys should not be allowed to sign out to a single woman's apartment. By the way don't you think it strange that the university allows girls to sleep in the apartment of married men? Does the administration realize what it is encouraging? I will make no remark concerning the fact that it allows co-eds to sleep in women's apartments. The university might also consider the banning of the dangerous nicotine drug from campus. If it can ban the sale of no-doze, it can ban the sale of cigarettes.

The administration might also enforce daily church attendance as well as compulsory bible reading. Each class should begin with readings of inspirational "Rowell-thought." An all out campaign must begin to create student morality. For us Ronald Reagan said, education "must be founded on accepted social and ethical patterns." There is no question what these patterns are. All one has to do is read a high school history text. I trust the administrators have not forgotten what they, in all probability, learned in high school.

"needed a formidable mass of material, and cannot afford to have entire books zeroxed, I saw what seemed to be a happy solution to the problem. Enquiring the whereabouts of the typing rooms which most University Libraries possess, where one can sit with a portable typewriter and the book on reserve, and quickly type out the material needed, I was told that Bailey Library had no such typing rooms. An alternative was to walk ten minutes back to my apartment and type there, and then walk back ten minutes to the library to get the book in on time. Insufficient time to do much work. The process had to be repeated over and over again with about fifteen books until I amassed the necessary material for the paper. Every time I made that ten minute walk back to Bailey with the undigested, incompletely-noted book under my arm, I grew angry all over again.

In despair, I asked when these particular books went off reserve so I could possibly get hold of them from the shelves. I was quietly told that these, and another great chunk of books NEVER WENT OFF RESERVE FROM ONE YEAR TO ANOTHER! To my question, "Why doesn't the library buy several copies of these books that are in such great demand?" I received a quiet, "I'm sure I don't know." Another alternative to running back and forth to my apartment in the absence of typing rooms, was sitting amidst the din and uproar of the library proper and copying out the needed passages by hand. Slow, tedious, tiring hand-copying in an atmosphere only a little quieter than the den.

3. NOISE LEVEL: Bailey Library's interior must have been planned by a diabolical fiend.

...And More Letters

Great areas of glass, hard, polished wood, walls of glittering green tiles and echoing stairs reflect and amplify the slightest noises. The turning of a page crackles across a room. Twenty or thirty people turning pages sounds like a storm of wind in the October tree-tops. Add to this the gabbling of the multitudes of people there to pick up friends or strangers, the thumping, tossing, wriggling gyrations of people reading Playboy, or dozing uneasily, or tossing wads of paper at buddies, or planning parties, etc., etc. ad nauseam, and you have an atmosphere that makes studying extraordinarily difficult. Among the many stringent rules, there seem to be none whatsoever about maintaining silence, and the library staff itself is a prime offender insofar as noise-level is concerned. Sitting on the far side of the room from the main desk, I have overheard intimate conversations among the staff of a highly distracting nature ranging in topics from sex problems to office gossip.

In conclusion, I would like to remark that by my criteria, Bailey Library does not meet many of the obligations of a University Library. It is a noisy place, and on many levels it frustrates learning, acquisition of knowledge and a student's interest in his courses. It creates dull, apathetic students. There are a number of groups around UVM who claim interest in reform and progress. Rather than ineffectually mulling over anarchy, the social effects of miniskirts, and Kake Walk, why not a little agitation to let University officials and Bailey Library know that the students want a library which will fulfill its innate responsibilities? I have made a beginning with this letter. Anybody else interested?

Most Sincerely,

Ann Proulx-Plastrik '69

Investigation Of Cynic Unfounded

To The Editor:

The idea of an investigation of the CYNIC, however well intended, is quite misdirected. Although it may come as a surprise to some, this is not the first time in America that there has been widespread dis-satisfaction over the Student Newspaper!

There are a number of standard cures which have proved effective around the country. First, if you want an effective student newspaper, you must pay the top editors -- real money. (This frees them from part-time work, and also helps them to take their job seriously.) Second, you must educate the students who write for the paper.

This is best done in a credit course in Journalism offered as part of the curriculum. (Such courses must be elective, with no direct control over the newspaper itself, however.)

Other suggestions could be offered, but it is doubtful that UVM really wants a good student newspaper. A good student newspaper would be something more than a publicity organ for Kake Walk Committees and who in Student Politics wants that? A good student newspaper would be something more than a passive supporter of the status quo, and who in Administration wants that? After all, freedom of the press can be a dangerous influence in a democratic society. Suppose that the Emperor really is naked? John D. Perry, Jr., Chaplain, University Christian Association, University of Vermont

John D. Perry, Jr.

(Editor's Note: Mr. Perry was an Editor of the Connecticut Daily Campus while an undergraduate at UConn, and has worked as a newspaper reporter and photographer in Connecticut.)

SOPHOMORE MEN:

Want to be a leader and double your chances for success in life? You can, by earning both a degree and an Army officer's commission at the same time... even though you may not have taken ROTC training in your first two years!

Through a new program, you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant after taking two years of Army ROTC training while you complete your studies for a college degree. You can qualify for this program by attending a special six-week summer training camp after your sophomore year and then completing the ROTC Advanced Course in your junior and senior years of college.

Here's what ROTC training and an officer's commission will do for you:

- It will qualify you to fulfill your military obligation as an officer.
- You will learn to organize, motivate, and lead others.
- You will develop leadership qualities that many college men miss—self-discipline, physical stamina, poise, bearing, the acceptance of responsibility and other qualities that contribute to success in either a civilian or military career.
- You will receive $40 per month during your junior and senior years, plus pay and mileage for summer training.

The training and experience you will receive through Army ROTC will pay off for the rest of your life. A decision to take advantage of this new program could be one of the most important you will ever make.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this new important opportunity.

For complete information on the new Two-Year Army ROTC Program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Service

CLASS OF 1966 IN REVIEW. In welcoming many of our Alumni back to the campus for Kake Walk, I think it is only fitting to talk about the year in review. In reporting on the 1965-1966 Placement Program, 503 Seniors, or 67% of the Graduating Class, registered and made some use of the Placement Office. What is particularly gratifying is that in four years the number of Seniors has more than doubled. To be a little more graphic, 82% of all our senior women registered as against 30% in 1962! A total of 2,064 individual interviews were held with 113 employers representing companies, hospitals, and organizations, as well as, 15 Federal Agencies, 7 State Agencies, 10 Graduate Schools and 34 School Systems. In addition, the Placement Office coordinated team visitations by the various branches of the military, Peace Corps, Vista, and International Voluntary Services.

STARTING SALARIES. The following figures represent, in some of the curricula, the yearly average of all offers accepted:

Agriculture and Home Economics	Men	Women
Agricultural Economics	$6,440

UVM Board OKs $50,000 'Doghouse'

Dr. Robert O'Brien of Wincooski, reporting for the buildings and grounds committee, Saturday asked and received UVM Board of Trustees authorization to hire an architect for a new building to house research animals.

He said such a building is an important need, and that the College of Medicine has gifts of $7,000 and pledges of $24,000 toward the estimated $35,000 to $50,000 cost of such a unit.

The college hopes to raise the additional funds needed from interested individuals and organizations, he said. The board authorized construction when funds are in hand.

Murder Trial Lawyer Speaks Here Feb. 28

Attorney John B. Harrington will speak on the practice of law in Vermont at a lecture presented by the Student Law Association, Feb. 28, in Billings Center, Conference Room "C" from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

Harrington will briefly discuss Vermont practice in general, and highlight some of his more spectacular cases. Harrington is defense counsel in the Bishop murder trial.

It's trade-in time for tired old myths.

Like the one about business. Especially big business. That it is beyond the rugged individualist's wildest daydream to enter this holy of holies because he'll lose something that's very sacred — like his independence.

Sure, it can happen. If a guy or gal wants to hide, or just get by, or not accept responsibility, or challenges.

We're not omniscient enough or stupid enough to speak for all business, but at a company like Western Electric, bright ideas are not only welcome, they are encouraged. And no door is shut. Create a little stir, go ahead, upset an old applecart (we replace shibboleths at a terrific pace — we have to as manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System — in order to provide your Bell telephone company with equipment it needs to serve you.)

There's an excitement in business. True, we're in it to make a profit, but working to find new and better ways to make things that help people communicate is very rewarding and satisfying. Did you ever hear these wry words of Oliver Wendell Holmes? "Never trust a generality — not even this one."

That's how we feel about the generality that claims you'll just become a little cog in a company like Western Electric. You might, of course, but if you consider yourself an individual now, odds are 10 to 1 that you'll keep your individuality. And cherish it. And watch it grow. Even at big, big Western Electric.

You know, that's the only way we'd want you to feel. If you feel like coming in with us.

Sergeant Major Desmarais (left) receives Bronze Star Medal and certificate from Colonel D. R. Longacre, PMS.

Sgt. Maj. Desmaris Joins ROTC Staff

Sergeant Major Theodore C. Desmarais has been assigned to the UVM ROTC Instructor Group as the unit's top enlisted man. SGM Desmarais, a native of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, is a veteran of 18 years service with the Army.

Prior to joining UVM, he served as Operations Sergeant of the 3rd Brigade, 25th Infantry Division in Pleiku, Vietnam. For his performance of duty while in Vietnam, he received the Bronze Star Medal "for distinguishing himself by outstanding meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam during the period October 1965 to November 1966". Presenting SGM Desmarais with the Bronze Star was Colonel D.R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science.

SGM Desmarais also saw combat service in Korea with the 7th Infantry Division. While in Vietnam, he received the second award of the Combat Infantryman's Badge. He now resides at Fort Ethan Allen with his wife Jean and their seven children.

Language Study Program Offered

The University of Vermont Summer Session and the Experiment in International Living of Putney, Vt., have joined to create a language-study program for beginning students of Spanish, Italian, German and French. Students at any four-year U.S. or Canadian college are eligible to participate.

The Summer Session will accept Experimenters in the special programs as students. Six hours of academic credit will be granted for their work at three-week intensive language study periods at the Experiment's School for International Training in Brattleboro or at an Experiment site in Texas, followed by eight weeks of home stays and travel in Belgium, Germany, Mexico or Spain.

At the end of the eleven-week total period students in the program will take standard language tests of the Modern Language Association, and credit will be granted according to their achievement on the tests.

For further information, contact the language department.

PLEASE--Give Blood

As Roger regained consciousness, his eyes began to focus on the white walls and sterilized sheets. All he could remember was the light turning red as he tried to make it through the intersection.

He turned his head to find the nurse smiling down at him. He listened to her soft voice as she told him what had happened. The immediate problem she mentioned last - they had found that he had a rare type of blood - AB Negative. And at the moment the hospital had none on hand. She assured him that the emergency calls on radio and TV would turn up someone in a matter of minutes.

The doctor motioned to the nurse from the door and she left. The thoughts raced through Roger's brain. He had gotten to the hospital, hadn't he? And hospitals always had blood, didn't they. They could get some in a matter of minutes - it was just there. He could feel the throbbing beneath the knee bandage. The ribs on the left side continued to ache; he was feeling groggy again. Maybe if he just lay back and rested a few minutes...

Rog Garrison was one of many people who had never given blood. If he had, he might have known his blood type within a month and the doctor might have found it in his wallet with his other identification. He had the chance; he never took it. That sort of thing always happens to other people. Chances are you'll never be in Roger's shoes - let's hope not. But it might be nice to think just a little ahead about the type of guy like Roger. Unfortunately, he's like most of us. Maybe when the blood drive comes around next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday there might be a need for the flood that you can give; a very immediate need. You may give blood because you need a better grade in ROTC or the fraternity is going after the trophy. Or maybe it just seems like the thing to do and you kind of like wearing one of those pins. But sitting right next to you in the line will probably be someone who knows what it really means to give blood. He may have seen an auto accident or a parent who needed blood on the spur of the moment. Or if he's been in the military he may have seen his best friend die because they just couldn't stop the bleeding. Sure it's a sobering thought, and maybe we will be lucky enough to never see that sort of thing happen. But if it ever does, we will want to at least have given some blood ourselves.

Next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday the Ethan Allen Rifles will sponsor its annual Spring Blood drive at the Billings Student Center. We hope to see you there too.

Examining produce in an open-air marketplace in Lisbon is one way to broaden one's knowledge of the ways of the Portuguese people. These girls found exploring the markets of cities around the world a relaxing change from studies undertaken during a semester at sea on Chapman College's floating campus - now called World Campus Afloat.

Alzada Knickerbocker of Knoxville, Tennessee, - in the plaid dress - returned from the study-travel semester to complete her senior year in English at Radcliffe College.

Jan Knippers of Lawrenceburg, Tennessee, a graduate of the University of Tennessee, and a former Peace Corps Volunteer, first pursued graduate studies in International Relations and returned a second semester as a teaching assistant in Spanish on the world-circling campus.

Students live and attend regular classes aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, owned by the ECL Shipping Co. of Bremen for which the Holland-America Line acts as general passenger agent. In-port activities are arranged to supplement courses taught aboard ship.

As you read this, the spring semester voyage of discovery is carrying 450 undergraduate and graduate students through the Panama Canal to call at ports in Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Morocco, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark and Great Britain, returning to New York May 25.

Next fall World Campus Afloat - Chapman College will take another 500 students around the world from New York to Los Angeles and in the spring a new student body will journey from Los Angeles to ports on both west and east coasts of South America, in western and northern Europe and as far east as Leningrad before returning to New York.

For a catalog describing how you can include a semester aboard the RYNDAM in your educational plans, fill in the information below and mail.

America Recreated At Film Festival

By John Kyper

Of all the films at the recent Humphrey Bogart Festival, perhaps "The Black Legion" was the most relevant, in content if not in the acting. The story is familiar, of frustrated men who believe pathologically that "the furriners" are threatening the security of "us 100% Americans." Thus they join the terrorist Black Legion, an obvious characture of the KKK, which eventually ruins their lives. The production was at times clumsy and even artificial, and the message is heavily didactic if not even somewhat hackneyed; but it is worth hearing again because we who call ourselves Americans have forgotten it too often.

Throughout our history as a nation the bitter spectacle of intolerance has repeatedly presented itself as the paranoid savior for those who felt persecuted. The Know-Nothings of the 1840's attempted to expel the Irish and the Catholics. In the First World War anyone with a German name was suspected of being an enemy agent. During World War II, 180,000 innocent civilians were herded from the west coast into concentration camps; because they were of Japanese ancestry, apparently, they could not be trusted to be Americans. Today, one tenth of our population, the Negroes, are often denied the rights of citizens, a fact which the selfish cries of "White Power" and "Black Power" conveniently becloud.

It is also evident that once an ethnic group has been absorbed into the general population it would not necessarily be immune to the bigotry of which it was once a victim. Thus, in a heavily Polish Chicago neighborhood, Martin Luther King and his marchers were taunted and even stoned, ironically with the help of Nazis; the oppressed had become the oppressor.

America is effectively undermined, both domestically and internationally, by such bigotry, that selfish attempt to exclude individuals from our society by the superficial ethnic, religious, and racial barriers, which do little to define individual character. It is a blatant betrayal of all that America means, compounded by the insistence of many of us to view it as the problem of "other people," certainly never our own; and our smug refusal to change is the consequence. It is infantile, the work of an immature people; it must stop if we are to be worthy of a great nation.

Fleming Museum Plans Trip

The Fleming Museum has arranged a charter bus trip to the "Age of Rembrandt" exhibition at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Thursday, March 2. The excursion is open to museum members, faculty, students, and staff. Dr. Margaret Roland, Assistant Professor of Art, will serve as guide. In connection with the Boston trip, she will also give a lecture at the Fleming Museum on Rembrandt and Dutch seventeenth century painting, Wednesday, March 1 at 8 p.m. in the Main gallery. The lecture is open to the public. The Boston exhibition which includes 107 works and took 4 years to arrange, covers the whole range of seventeenth century Dutch painting.

There are a few seats vacant for the trip. The bus leaves the museum parking lot at 8 a.m. and should be back by 11 p.m. The fare is $8.50 round trip. Passengers should take sandwiches for lunch on board, but the bus will stop for dinner on the return trip. Anyone interested in joining the group should call Mrs. Coppage at the museum, ext. 225.

Lane Chamber Arts Carlos Montoya; Patons Featured

By Judy Beeber

The Lane Chamber Arts Series was set up in 1961 in order to present specialized and unusual artists, who's performances are better in a small hall than in the large Memorial Auditorium. This year's Chamber Art Series, in its seventh consecutive season, features four artists who will perform in Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 p.m. on designated nights. The last two include:

Carlos Montoya, on March 10 a Flamenco guitarist from Madrid making his second Lane Series appearance. He is one of the most widely heard performers and has brought his music to virtually every outpost of the free world, from the U.S. and Canada, to Europe and the Orient. Here, Montoya will perform a program of his own arrangements and original compositions, based on the Spanish gypsy tradition.

Last to highlight the series on March 18 will be Sandy and Caroline Paton, folk song interpreters from Vermont. Their most recent record, a Folk-Legacy album, was produced in Huntington, Vermont, and released last fall.

Tickets for the Lane Chamber Arts Series may be obtained in the Lane Office, Room 54 Waterman. Patrons may subscribe on a season basis for $6.50 or on an individual basis, $2.00 for each concert.

Philharmonic To Perform Tonight

The Vermont Philharmonic Orchestra will make its first appearance in Burlington on February 24th, at Burlington High School Auditorium at 8 pm. The concert has many features of interest to people in the Greater Burlington area, both in terms of program and performers. About one-third of the orchestra's more than 60 members come from the Burlington area, and many of them are associated with the University of Vermont.

The program includes excerpts from Haydn's Symphony 104 and Berlioz' Damnation of Faust, but the two important pieces are the second performance of Dr. David Racusen's First Symphony, and the Brahms Violin Concerto with Mrs. Sadah Colodny as soloist.

Puppets Tangle To Music

By Elizabeth Clark

Puppetry is an art which is too often relegated to second-rate children's shows. Within a span of four days we were visited by two well-known puppeteers, Daniel Llorde and Peter Arnott, both of whom are trying to dispel this unfortunate impression.

Daniel Llorde, who performed at Trinity College on February 12, uses his marionettes to interpret various musical compositions. Mr. Llorde's first number, a pantomime to Gounod's ballet music from Faust, was disappointing. The manipulation of the figures was generally inferior, especially as Mephistopheles conjures up three temptresses, who looked frankly clumsy. Although the final moments of Faust's damnation were powerfully played, they could not dispel the generally static quality of the act.

The second and third parts, which consisted of shorter variety numbers, were extremely well done. My favorites were the inept soprano and the Russian dancers. During these parts Mr. Llorde also demonstrated his ability as a singer as he skillfully provided voices for the puppets.

The final number, done to Rimsky-Korsakov's Capriccio Espagnol, represented a day in a small Spanish village as seen by a "typical" American tourist. The mood passed from the reverence of a religious procession to the gaiety of the marketplace, the bull fight, and the fiesta. It was a superb selection, well conceived and beautifully executed.

Peter Arnott, who performed here at UVM on February 14 and 15, is definitely more an actor than a puppeteer. He uses puppets

"The Recruiting Officer"

Players Tell How To Beat the Draft

If you happen to be one of those who thinks the draft system now is insidious, conniving, outrageous, and could never be equalled, then you should attend the University Players production of "The Recruiting Officer," by George Farquhar for the system apparently did not work any better in the eighteenth century than it does now. The play will be presented March 2, 3, and 4 at 8:30 PM in the Arena Theater in Fleming Museum.

The play is under the direction of Mr. R. S. Thomsen, assistant professor of speech. The assistant director is Esther Sundell, a senior, who has previously directed the Playtime's tour in the spring. She has also performed in various plays at the University. Dana Emmons is the stage manager.

The play is a comedy concerning the early eighteenth century draft laws, with modern implications, for as Mr. Thomsen stated, "The rich and the intelligent stay home while the poor slob go off to Europe to fight." Mr. Thomsen further stated that Mr. Farquhar is not saying the system is wrong and he is not even protesting against it; he is merely portraying a funny view of the situations. The play is an "encyclopedia" of how to trick or force men into the Army. Every known gimmick is effectively used; booze, money, women, or just plain chicanery.

The author was the last of the restoration writers. He led a brief, though busy, life and wrote this play when he was quite young. The plays of this period are frank and far more robust than the plays of today, as can be seen in "The Recruiting Officer."

Mr. William Schenk, the technical director, has created sets very much like those of the eighteenth century. Mr. Thomsen regarded his work as "a unique use of the Arena Theater." This is a first rate way of becoming better acquainted with the theater of that period.

The Arena Theater produces plays of various types. It gives the student an opportunity to "see all he has read about." The players gladly welcome suggestions and if any student is interested in having a personal or favorite play produced, he is urged to contact the Player's office in the Arena Theater.

Mr. Thomsen said "The Recruiting Officer" is going along well and that progress is normal inspite of Kake Walk week." Before opening the sale of tickets to the general public there will be a special sale of tickets for the students in Billings Center. This is so the student body may obtain the best seats. Tickets are $1.50.

There is no better way to learn or become more aware of the theater than attending it. So come, enjoy, laugh, and appreciate the Players newest production depicting the typical experiences of a lad and the draft in "The Recruiting Officer."

Shorter & Shorter

By Kathy Watt

As the hemline continues to rise and skirts become shorter and shorter, the question as to the life span of this current fashion phase can't help but be asked. Much controversy has arisen over the subject, some staunchly arguing that the hemline is destined to drop below the knee in an extreme answer to today's style, and others that the skirt will become shorter yet. Today's leading fashion designers seem to agree with the latter in believing that the short skirt is not about ready to make its exit.

Fashion designer, Norman Norell, predicts that, "Skirts will get a lot shorter before they get longer." He stressed his point by stating, "Of course some nut may come along and try to drop skirts, but I don't think it will work unless the kids start it."

An argument in favor of the shorter skirt is its comfort and freedom of movement. In Paris, women are already wearing their skirts much shorter than in the U.S. They are considered even smarter when worn with the above-knee Paris boots from Mancini.

Unfortunately some of the teams fell under the minimum time limit, Saturday night, thus the judges were extremely careful, causing a short delay, in deciding the final winners. After a few minutes, Pete Ambrose walked to the microphone and began the presentation of awards.

Dr. Racusen, Associate Professor of Agricultural Biochemistry at UVM, is a fine musician. He plays the French Horn, both in chamber groups and as first chair in the Philharmonic. He is also a composer of chamber music for wind instruments, and now of a symphony.

Mrs. Colodny, formerly Mrs. Sadah Start, is a well-known and beloved violinist for Burlingtonians; during the period of her life when she was concert mistress for the University orchestra, and often soloist. Last year, she was a soloist in the Lane Series.

as a medium with which to perform plays which are frequently neglected by the live theatre today.

The verbal interpretations for both Oedipus and Medea were excellent. The dialogue carried the shows quite well, and for the most part compensated for their technical deficiencies.

Mr. Arnott's use of puppetry is a new experience for me. I would definitely like to see more of his productions to find out if I would continue to judge his work by the same standards and as harshly as I have done here.

Although the styles of puppetry which these two puppeteers use are almost diametrically opposite, both present excellent shows geared to the adult mind.

The Northern Mountain Range of Ishigaki at Ryukyu Islands.

From the Manila Desk Of Shannon McCune

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

Living on the Island of Ishigaki in the Ryukyu Islands is a graduate of the University of Vermont, Mario Barberi of the Class of 1950. As a member of a Navy mine assembly unit, he was stationed on Okinawa for some months at the close of World War II. Now he is back, an agricultural missionary, beginning his twelfth year of service to the people of the Ryukyus. He has organized a small Rural Christian Center which carries on both agricultural and evangelistic missionary work. I had visited the Center three or four years ago and was glad to see the progress which had been made in the interval. Mario, his wife, Joy and his three children, Stephen in school in Japan, Susan who studies by correspondence and Margaret in the third grade of a Japanese school, are Christian witnesses in an area which sees little of the religious side of America. Barre and the University of Vermont may take pride in this native son.

The island of Ishigaki, a hundred square miles in size, and with a population of 41,000 people, is the most densely populated of the Yaeyama group of the Ryukyus. Ishigaki literally means 'Stone Walls', and these are a distinctive feature of the villages on the island. It has been in recent decades somewhat of a pioneer land for the over-crowded Ryukyu Islands. The malaria that for many years curtailed the spread of population has now been controlled through combined American and Ryukyuan efforts. New farming villages have been developed along with northern coasts. In the south the city of Ishigaki now has a new harbor for ocean going ships which permits more efficient and less expensive export of sugar and canned pineapples, the major products. These go to Japan at a price now subsidized by the Japanese government. Because of this economic uncertainty, efforts are being made to develop the livestock industry and to diversify agricultural production. Some tourist industry may be developed in the years to come, for Ishigaki is a beautiful island.

On a bright and sunny January day we drove around the island with Mario as our guide. He knew the history of every village and all the beauty spots. Parts of the island are of limestone formation making underground drainage channels and caves which he has enjoyed exploring. He pointed out one village which was virtually wiped out in a tidal wave in 1771; of its population of 1500 only 28 survived. New settlers came in from one of the neighboring islands. As a consequence even today, the dialect used in this village is different from that of neighboring villages. Migration from over-crowded Okinawa and Miyako or from small islands with limited water supply has been fostered by the government which has also built roads, schools, village halls and water supply systems.

Mario Barberi examining the roots of a Banyan tree.

Mario works particularly with the poorer farmers and with those on isolated off-shore islands. He has helped them improve their stock of hogs, goats and chickens and is initiating a program of artificial insemination for cattle. His methods of operation are simple. With fluent and colloquial Japanese, he can talk to the farmers in practical terms about their problems. He will loan a farmer a young pig which has been bred, provided the farmer builds a modern pig pen and exercise yard and promises to give it good care. The farmer is obligated to return to him two females from the litter. These in turn are bred and loaned to other farmers. At present there are 100 farm families in 20 villages on 7 islands which have pigs on loan. Seventy more are on the waiting list.

Four or five years ago, the farmers on one off-shore island asked for help to improve their goats which, through inbreeding, had degenerated. Mario made a deal with them that if they would permit him and his veterinary assistant to first castrate all rams on the island, some fifty in number, then he would bring over his pure-bred rams and breed the island goats. This was agreed to and done. Thus in one breeding season the stock was dramatically up-graded.

Such actions may seem simple, but they are the kind of things that neither the American nor Ryukyuan government can do effectively. There would have had to be various surveys and some large scale programs, complete with red tape and bureaucracy. Mario just goes and gets it done.

The Rural Christian Center has a number of simple buildings; clean pens for pigs, an improved brooder house for chickens, a laboratory building - half of which is used for housing goats and the other half for the cattle insemination laboratory. Compared to UVM's new barns it is strikingly simple, but it also is most effective in showing farmers the latest techniques of farming. The

SA Election Rules Set

The following offices are open: president, 1st vice president, 2nd vice president, secretary, sub-secretary, Treasurer, two sub-treasurers. All positions are open to the general student body except largest building is one that can be used for many purposes. A reading and study room where farmers may gather can quickly be converted to a simple chapel for religious services. Though almost devoid of religious symbols the atmosphere is religious. One gets the firm impression that this is a Christian center - one aimed at service to all the rural people, not just the handful of Christian farmers, not highly dramatic but greatly effective.

On a January Sunday we went with the Barberis to the church in the neighboring village of Hrai. Methodists in creed, they join with other Protestant missionaries in the work that is carried on by the United Church of Christ in Japan. The pastor had only recently been ordained after years of correspondence study. He had been a political leader on the island, considered left of center, but he had given up his political life to enter the ministry and to build largely with his own funds and with faith this simple church. All around the church were local religious shrines, some in disrepair. However, the church though still unfinished was obviously being planned and built for growth. And growth will come as more and more Ryukyuan people see and experience and Christian witness of missionaries such as Mario and Joy Barberi.

There will be bulletin boards in Billings Lower Lobby and Waterman Lower Lobby from Tue., March 7 to Thur., March 9th. Use only string for putting poster on trees. Campaign posters should not go up before 2 p.m. March 7 and must be down by 9 p.m., March 9.

Pictures will be taken by the Student Photography Service on Sunday, March 5, from 1:30 p.m., in their office in Billings.

Voting is on Friday, March 10, and winners will be notified by phone as soon as votes are tallied.

All interested students please report to March Lounge, Billings Center, 4:15 p.m., Wed., March 1 for petitions and information concerning election rules.

The Air Force doesn't want to waste your college education any more than you do.

Are you afraid of becoming part of the woodwork on a job? Your career stunted by boredom? Few promotions in sight?

You didn't go to college for that. And it needn't happen, either. Because you can pick the United States Air Force as your employer. Career opportunities are so vast... you'll get a better chance to specialize where you want... in the forefront of modern science and technology.

Suppose, just for example, you wanted to be involved in Electronics. This area alone includes Communications-Electronics, Missile Electronics, Avionics, and others. And these, in turn, involve administrative, research, and other technical aspects.

That's just a tiny part of the whole Air Force picture. Just one brilliant opportunity area among many.

You'll enjoy good pay, promotions, chance to travel, active social life, fine retirement benefits. And you'll be serving your country, too. Or maybe you want to fly? That's great. The Air Force is certainly the place to do it.

As a college graduate you want something extra out of life—to aim at an exciting goal. So send in this coupon.

Make sure you don't get stuck where nothing much is happening.

HOCKEY TEAM WINS THIRD

By Fred Schlapp

After beating Amherst 5-4 on a stellar two-goal performance by Ed Danks, the UVM Catamounts dropped a tough 7-4 decision to the Wildcats of UNH. Now standing 3-12 on the season, the Cats took on the University of Connecticut in a Kake Walk encounter. Playing in front of a packed house, sophomore Peter Meyer and junior Doug Krebs put on an amazing display of skating and stickhandling to lead UVM past the Huskies. Krebs got the Cats away quickly as his pass to Roy was perfect and the high-scoring junior tallied at the 36 mark. Then it was Meyer's turn. The brilliant sophomore from Summit, N.J., scored on a beautiful tip-in of Dick Katron's blazing shot. At 7:56, Krebs notched UVM's third goal of the period as he scored on a 30-foot screamer from the blue line. The Cats left the ice with a 3-0 advantage. The second period, however, was entirely different story. The Huskies came out with fire in their eyes and UConn's hustle combined with Vermont's sloppy play allowed the visitors to net the only goal of the period. Only the hard checking of Meyer and Krebs kept Connecticut from typing it up, and at the end of the second period, Vermont lead 3-1. The beginning of the third period was much the same story as the second period as Vermont's sloppy play enabled Connecticut to gain a tie. But the Vermont skaters, inspired by the play of Meyer, were just too much for the Huskies. With 9:19 gone in the period, Bobby Schroeder scored with Semler assisting. Less than two minutes later, Curt Tobey hit the net with "Hoot" Squire and Jim Brock getting the assist. The final goal was scored by Captain Chip Uihlein, his fifth of the season. For UConn, defenseman Dick Ralston played a good game, scoring all three Connecticut goals, as did Sprague, Connecticut's diminutive goalie.

TRACKSTERS LOSE

By Mick Kropsky

The UVM varsity indoor track team continued to have its troubles as it dropped a 61-52 decision to Boston State. It was the Cindermen's third straight dual meet loss, but all was not rotten in the state of UVM track. For one thing, UVM's Dick Kabat took two firsts in the meet. He won the pole vault (12'6") and the 55 yard low hurdles (6.7 sec.). two firsts, UVM took five other first places in the 13 event meet once again it as a lack of depth that proved to be the downfall for Coach Archie Post's cinder-men. If the varsity was in trouble, it shouldn't last too long as the Frosh runners once again showed that they will be sending a lot of good material up to the varsity next year. Coach Post's Freshmen team won their third consecutive meet against the Boston State frosh as Jimmy Wheeler won three events for the third straight time this season. Despite the frosh's impressive showing, Coach Post indicated that the team only has two sprinters on the entire squad as well as a few other weak spots. MR. POST THEREFORE URGES ALL FRESHMEN INTERESTED IN TRACK TO CONTACT HIM AT THE PATRICK GYM: Broad jump - 1. Farley (V) 2. Season's End Approaching

THE INSIDER

By BOB JACOBS

Out of chaos the seeds of destruction are sown, and indeed it seemed that the ragged play which was the dominant theme of Monday night's tilt might lead to a Middlebury win. The Panthers switched defenses, shot surprisingly well, and hit the boards with uncharacteristic ferocity. Dave Vanier launched 30 foot set shots while Dick Minton bombed line drives from the corners to lead the Middlebury offense. Blonde haired, ruddy-faced Jack Freshman was scraping the backboard bare as he began picking off rebounds at an alarming rate right from the opening gun.

On the UVM side of the ledger things were going dimly. The Cats would no sooner start a break than a pass would be fired out of bounds, or the ball dribbled off someone's foot. In light of recent good showings, it was disappointing to see the motley crew from Middlebury make UVM look like the local J.V. at its first work-out. Alarming, Rusty Boardman, who had begun to crash boards effectively, picked up his third foul and had to sit down just before the half. With the score 37-36, the Cats retired to their lair at half-time a sorry looking bunch.

The second half began in much the same fashion, but then Vermont began to play as if something were at stake. Librera started hitting, Lapointe engineered a few fast breaks, and Titus Hale made his presence felt. Donny Katz filled in admirably when called upon, and teamed with Boardman to get the ball off the boards more often for us. Statistically we beat them because of balanced scoring and our continued improvement from the foul line (75%). Librera and Lapointe led the Cats' scoring 16 points each with Librera pacing the club with 12 rebounds also. All in all, it was a pretty unexciting game, and it seemed the most colorful part of the evening's event was the referees' choice of footwear. To the spectators (a capacity crowd of 4 kids and a dog) it must have been reminiscent of numerous school-yard games they have seen or participated in.

In looking ahead to Wednesday's confrontation with St. Mike's, I feel Dick Falkenbush will probably score more, but, Tom McKenna and "Spider" Coleman, two pressure performers, can be contained a bit more than in the last fiasco. Look for a closer game than before if jumping Jack Coleman and the sweet shooting McKenna are prevented from getting the ball or are stopped once they do get the pill.

In action typical of last Wednesday night's play, St. Michael's 6-6 Tom McKenna reaches out to block Vermont's attempt at the basket by Billy Librera. Looking on for Vermont are Russ Boardman and Don Katz while the Michaelmen's Little All America candidate Dick Falkenbush also stands by prepared. The Knights, 19-3 on the year and NCAA tourney-bound, clinched the State Series title outright with a big 95-70 victory.

Cats Sport 6-15 Record

Sophomore star Dave Lapointe shows his smooth shooting form on this jump shot. The 6-3 Winoski native has given Catamount opponents fair warning for the next two years as he has averaged 22.0 over the last five games and sports a 16.6 norm on the year.

Middlebury Tumbles, 91-75

The action was fast and loose as the Panthers of Middlebury gave the University of Vermont a tussle before the Cats exploded to a 91-75 decision Monday night in state series action.

Vermont continued state series play Wednesday night as the Knights of St. Michael's wrapped up the state crown with a 95-70 victory. Leading the way for the Vermonters were sophomore star Dave Lapointe with 21, and Bill Librera and Russ Boardman with 16 points apiece.

Seven Cats hit double digits with sophomore star Dave Lapointe tallying 16. Also scoring heavily were Bill Librera (16), Alden Hale (13), Don Katz (12), and Russ Boardman, Bruce Hanna and Bob Jacobs all notched 10.

The Middlebury victory was only Vermont's sixth in 20 contests. Lapointe hit for 27 points in the Cats 87-85 victory over St. Lawrence. Following this victory was a 109-90 decision over former Vermont hoop greats in a Kake Walk game.

Only three games are left on the Vermont Schedule and two of them are state series games with Middlebury and Norwich. The other is at Boston University against the Terriers this Friday.

The Middlebury game was a poorly played contest by both teams. Instead of playing their usual ball control and defense game, the Cats started running in the second half after slipping ahead by only one, 37-36, at the half way mark. Middlebury, only 1-18 this season, couldn't contain the Vermonters and UVM

A RECORD!

It's official. Bob Mitchell of the University of Vermont football team set a national record last fall with an average of 31.1 rushing attempts per game.

This fact was confirmed Friday by Steve Boda, Jr., who is doing research for the next edition of the Encyclopedia of Football. Boda confirmed the fact in a double check with the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau, which compiles statistics during the football season.

The previous record was 27.6, set by Dale Mills of Northeast Missouri State in 1959 with 248 carries in nine games.

Little All American Mitchell toted the ball 249 times in eight contests for 1,207 yards.

Boda also said that Ralph Lapointe, presently Vermont baseball coach, will be listed in the record book. Lapointe, as a student in 1942, became one of seven men in history to return two kickoffs for touchdowns in one game.

Lapointe almost became the first man in history to return three in one game. In that contest against Union, he was in the open before tripping over one of his own men on the Union 35.

SWIMMERS LOSE...

By Mick Kropsky

Coach Les Leggett's varsity swimmers suffered their second defeat of the season this past Saturday losing 52-43 to the University of Connecticut. The loss came after the Catamount swimmers had picked up two straight victories over UMass and Union College.

UConn displayed a lot of depth in winning the meet. The Connecticut swimmers had one more first place finish than did the Cats, but it was numerous second and third places that gave them the margin of victory.

Outstanding for UVM were John Stephen who won the 500 yard freestyle, co-captain Tom Mills who, as he has done so many times this season, won the 50 yard freestyle, and John Cole who won the 200 yard breaststroke. At press time the varsity swimmers record stands at an impressive 5-2 mark. This coming Saturday, Feb. 25, the swim team will entertain Sir Williams at 1:30 in the Forbush Pool.

400-Yard Medley Relay - 1. Beroulin Siler Schongalla Holster (UC) - 3:56.8.

200-yard freestyle - 1. Sullivan (UC) 2. McAtery (UC) 3. Surphen (V) - 1:47.0.

50-yard freestyle - 1. Mills (V) 2. Crabtree (UC) 3. Campbell (UC) - :22.6.

200-yard individual medley - 1. Hassell (UC) 2. Gross (V) 3. (See Swimmers Page 13)

...GIRLS WIN

By Debbie Arnold

Lynn Bertram of UVM easily captured the combined trophy this weekend as the girl's ski team once again proved their winning abilities at King's Ridge Mountain in London, N.H. Seven teams participated in the annual Colby Junior College Intercollegiate Ski Meet.

In the first event, the giant slalom, Peggy Nutt placed third, Lynn Bertram fifth, and Val Greene ninth, therefore putting the team in third place with 177.4 close behind Colby Junior, 177.3, and Middlebury, 174.2, Colleges.

When the girls entered the afternoon slalom they were trailing second place by only a few points. Lynn Bertram after two almost flawless runs finished first. Peggy Nutt was close behind placing second and Val Greene placed fourth, giving UVM a generous lead. The results of the slalom were 1. UVM 2. Colby Junior and 3. Middlebury.

Because of the individual high standings in the slalom UVM rose to first place and won the combined over-all title. Lynn Bertram was ski meister and Peggy Nutt placed second in the combined individual results. Betsey Edge of CJC placed third. Linda Andrews, in her first race of the season, also placed well for UVM coming in twelfth in the slalom and eleventh in the slalom.

CYNIC Elects Ten to Key Positions

Editor's Note:

Last year at this time, ten proud students stepped into the powerful and dynamic Senior Staff positions of the Vermont CYNIC. As we look back over the year, many memories of fun, work, success and failure come before us. With these words and thoughts in mind, we pass from the scene. Our last function to introduce to you the 1967-68 Senior Staff.

R.B.

Leading the staff as Editor-in-Chief is Jay Roth, '68, from Roslyn Heights, N.Y. Jay, a brother of Phi Sigma Delta, has served as Advertising Manager on this year's staff, and was Vice-President of the Class of '68 freshman year. He is a history major and belongs to the History Honor Society.

The Assistant Editor, Suellen Botsford, '67, is also on the production and feature staffs and has been in charge of photo features this year and is also employed at the Burlington Free Press.

Phyllis Oremland, '68, from Verona, N.J., is the new Business Manager. She is a math major in secondary education and serves as treasurer for Alpha Epsilon Phi.

Jon Schechtman, '70, is the new Managing Editor. A pledge of Phi Sigma Delta from New Britain, Conn., Jon was editor of his high school paper. He has served on the production staff since September and was also a CYNIC reporter.

His Assistant, Marty Baker, '68, a psychology major from Coral Gables, Fla., was a member of this year's Production Staff.

The Co-News and Feature Editors are Lydia Burdick, '69, and Meryle Sachs, '70. Both are psychology majors. Lydia who was on this year's Business Staff, comes from New York, N.Y., and Meryle is from Worcester, Mass.

Their Assistant is Pat D'Agostino, '68, an English-History major from Sheldon, Vt.

Cheryl Gadoc, '69, a member of the Advertising Staff on this year's CYNIC, will be the new Advertising Manager. Cheryl is in Elementary Education minoring in art and comes from Norwalk, Conn.

Robert Richter, '69, from Great Neck, N.Y., will take over as Circulation Manager. He is a member of Phi Sigma Delta majoring in history.

Rewrite Editor is Joan Capelle, '68, an English major from Northfield, Vt.

Robert Bloomenthal, '68, who works in the Public Relations office of UVM's Sports Dept., is returning for his second year as Sports Editor of the CYNIC. Bob is a pre-med Dean's list student from Burlington, a member of Key and Serpant, and a past member of Gold Key.

Vermont State Colleges And UVM's Trustees Merger Pending

By John Kyper

A proposal to merge the boards of trustees of the University of Vermont and the Vermont State Colleges was strongly favored by Governor Philip Hoff and UVM President Lyman Rowell. The Governor is hopeful that a resolution shall be introduced in this session of the Legislature to direct the Legislative Council to study the merger.

In an interview Rowell voiced his support for the proposal, but added that no formal meetings had yet been held and that the merger would not take place immediately. Because a merger would make the use of staff and facilities more efficient, he believed that it would mean a less rapid increase of costs in the future.

The President believed that the cause of education could best be served by a unification of the boards into a larger University of Vermont, since he had reservations upon the ability of the state to effectively support four degree-granting liberal arts colleges with their two separate systems. "The need to provide a reasonable college opportunity for Vermont high school students can be met best by a single system of public higher education utilizing all the facilities of the University and the State Colleges."

Rowell foresaw no major effect on UVM students by the merger, except that it would produce a degree of specialization on the part of the four institutions. Although there would be a common admissions system, he believed that the schools should establish their identity: "You become a first class institution by defining your objectives and then implementing these objectives ... We set the admissions standards to fit the objectives ... to get into college the kind of students who fulfill these objectives."

At its last meeting, the Board of Trustees of the State Colleges indicated they would favor a study of co-operation but suggested that any proposal of merger was premature at this time. The four year colleges at Castleton, Johnson, and Lyndon and the two year technical college at Randolph were under the State Board of Education before 1961. That year the Legislature created the Vermont States Colleges Corporation and suggested that they co-operate with the University of Vermont in providing higher education for the state.

The State College board operates the three four-year colleges, with a total enrollment of 1800 and Vermont Technical College, a two year college with an enrollment of 350. Uvm has a total of 5000.

Mrs Hines Receives Bronze Star

SGT Hines, who was stationed with the ROTC Instructor Group at UVM before going to Vietnam was serving with the 1st Cavalry Division at the time of his death.

SGT Hines received the Bronze Star "for distinguishing himself by outstanding meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam during the period June 12, 1966 to September 21, 1966. Through his untiring efforts and professional ability, he consistently obtained outstanding results."

In column ceremonies on Thursday in the Military Science Department, UVM, Mrs. Mildred A. Hines accepted the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart Medal awarded posthumously to her late husband, Sergeant Louis C. Hines who was killed in September in Vietnam.

Rev. J. Malone Will Deliver Baccalaureate

The Most Rev. James W. Malone, D.D., Ph.D., of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Youngstown, Ohio, will deliver the baccalaureate address at the University of Vermont's 163rd commencement on Sunday, May 21.

Bishop Malone, who is Apostolic Administrator of the Youngstown Diocese, is widely noted for his interest in higher education and the role of religion in colleges and universities. He is Bishop Moderator of the National Newman Apostolate, the organization of Catholic colleges and university students on secular campuses.

7,000 Applicants For Class of '71

Ratio To Remain 40 to 60 Per Cent

By Mike Furst

Before the 1st of March, the admissions office has been snowed under by an avalanche of 7000 hopeful applicants. Alas, there are only 1200 pink IBM cards.

Since February 1, admissions has been busy sorting out next years freshman class and sending out the notices which either dispel the fears or smash the hopes of many high school seniors around the country.

The size of the class of '71 is determined on the basis of how many seniors are graduating, the projected number of students who will drop-out or flunk-out, and the number of former students who have decided to renew their acquaintance with UVM.

Harold Collins, Director of Admissions, said last week that the ratio of out-of-state to in-state students will remain the same, 40% to 60%, as it was last year. Two years ago the percentage of out-of-staters was 32%, the lowest ever.

The situation is diabolically different this year when compared to last years statistics. Then, application-acceptance ratio was 10:1 for men and 4:1 for women. It is the exact opposite for the Class of '71. The ratio of men to women appears to be 3:2.

Mr. Collins said that the Arts and Sciences division, although the largest at UVM, is more difficult to get into. He also stated that it was "extremely difficult" for out-of-staters, especially women, to be accepted into any of the colleges of the University.

Acceptance is based upon the prospective student's rank in his class, recommendations, SAT scores, and the difficulty of the high school course taken. The single most important factor is the student's high school grade record. There is no cut-off point for SAT scores, although a total of 100, Mr. Collins explained, is desirable.

"and justice for all" Title of Vt. Conference

The 1967 Vermont Conference has chosen as its topic "Justice in a Free Society." The three speakers for this symposium, entitled "... and justice for all" are, Randolph Blackwell of the SLC, Judge Sterry R. Waterman of the U.S. Federal Circuit Court, and author and social critic John Harrington.

The 13th annual Vermont Conference, March 21-23, has invited Mr. Randolph T. Blackwell, the former program director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by Dr. Martin Luther King.

Blackwell is presently the director of the Southern Rural Action Project, an anti-poverty program. This group seeks to organize and support groups in various parts of the nation to build a strong base for grassroots communities in the rural South and Southwest.

In viewing the civil rights struggle for social justice, Mr. Blackwell feels that "Twentieth Century civilization is infinitely more complicated than just the race problem and, because of that, we will have to be concerned ... with a number of social forces that we feel are ... compelling decisions that cannot be answered by viewing our concern as just one ... position of the Negro people."

Money Needed For Cultural Exchange

"Money can't buy happiness — but it sure make misery comfortable" — even the S.A. program needs money!

One year ago PCIL was still in its planning stages, with the hopes of success in the newly orientated program. Work by the class officers and advisors, with the aid of Dr. Perrine, raised the proper funds to send Larry Roth, of AEPI, as UVM's first cultural exchange ambassador to India. With a year's experience, PCIL is working again to raise enough money to send another ambassador to Chile, Japan, or India.

Since this group works without a financial base, many ideas for money are carefully considered. Such fund raising drives include Tag Day, which is the purchasing of cards with the PCIL emblem (handy bookmarks if you like). These tags are solicited by the class officers and familiar students on campus.

Another consideration is extended curfews, where girls may "buy" up to 1/2 hour of extra curfew for the reasonable price of 50¢ (a bargain!). Various contributions are being made by student organizations, including the Mens' Residence Hall Council (mainly freshmen) and their pledge of $500. Alumni are also being notified for their hopeful donations. In return for organizational contributions, PCIL will have the ambassador speak to these organizations on his (or her) trip.

Watch for notices concerning applications and the Mass Meeting of all interested students (March 9th). Sample copies of the applications may be examined at the S.A. desk in Billings. PCIL is a cultural opportunity for the student and for the campus.

Model UN

UVM is sending delegates again this year to the National Model General Assembly of the United Nations to be held March 9th through 12th. Over 1400 students from colleges and universities from all parts of the United States will meet in New York City as a "mock" United Nations. Each school will represent one member country of the UN and attempt to pass resolutions beneficial to that country.

Since November, fourteen UVM students led by Dr. Wolfe Schmokel and M. Horace Briggs have been studying the United Nations with particular emphasis on Portugal which they will represent in the NMGA. This study has consisted of key speakers from the history and political science departments, intensive individual research, and discussion of important world events.

While in New York, the delegation will visit the Portuguese Embassy for a briefing by the Portuguese ambassador. The delegates will then join the other delegations in the General Assembly Hall of the United Nations where Lord Caradon, UN representative of the United Kingdom, will speak to the first plenary session, thus opening the 1967 National Model General Assembly.

UVM Sends Student Ambassador

Many of you have probably heard of the international cultural exchange program — The Experiment in International Living. Each summer approximately 2500 American college students participate in a person-to-person international experience, living and traveling in one of forty-three countries of Europe, Latin America, Africa or Asia.

For the first time last year, the University community participated in The Experiment's Campus Ambassador program. Larry Roth, a senior from New Rochelle, New York, was selected to represent the University of Vermont. He traveled extensively throughout India with The Experiment program. His two-month journey was highlighted by a three-week stay in the home of a Hindu doctor in Warangal, A.P., India.

In the fall of 1965, the Student Association formulated the Presidents' Council on International Living. The task of organizing the program on the UVM campus was delegated to this committee, comprised of the class officers and advisers, under the direction of Dr. M. Perrine of the Psychology Department.

This year's organizational meetings have already taken place and in the weeks to come, announcements of pertinent information concerning speakers, fund-raising activities and selection procedure will appear in later issues.

$10 WILL BE AWARDED FOR THE BEST POEM AND PROSE

DEPARTURE, the literary magazine, is still in need of materials for the spring issue. Poetry, short stories, essays, and art should be dropped into the Billings DEPARTURE mailbox. Be sure to include a return address so that materials may be returned with notes and suggestions.

Deadlines are March 17 for art and prose, April 1 for poetry. Awards of 10 dollars will be given this semester for the best poem and the best prose piece submitted.

My Life

He grabbed me by my slender neck
I could not call or scream
He dragged me to his dingy room
Where we could not be seen
He took away my flimsy wrap
And looked upon my form
I was so cold, so damp, so scared
While he was hot and warm
His fevered lips were pressed to mine
I gave him every drop
He drained me of my very self
I could not make him stop
Made me what I am today
That's why you find me here
A broken bottle thrown away
That once was filled with beer.

Peace Corps Wants Volunteers

WASHINGTON, D.C.

— Peace Corps Director Jack Vaughn appealed this week to spring college graduates to meet an urgent need for 188 Volunteers in 15 specialized programs facing serious shortfalls in personnel.

Vaughn said applicants for the programs — which enter training between February and May — will be processed immediately.

Interested persons should apply or write to Chuck Butler, Director of Recruiting, Peace Corps, Washington, D.C., 20525 or call Area Code 202, 382-2700. Applications are available at most post offices and from Peace Corps campus liaison officers.

The programs, with background requirements and starting dates for training, are:

Liberal arts graduates: Afghanistan health (females only, beginning March); Morocco health (females only, May); and Bolivia community development in mining areas (males, April).

Physical education majors/minors: Nigeria secondary education (February) and Bolivia mines (community development, April).

Agriculture majors or background: Malaysia rural community development (March); Honduras plant and animal science advisors (March); and Iran agricultural extension (April).

Education degree: Dominican Republic and Brazil teacher training programs beginning in

Director of Student Activities Given Chairmanship.

David A. Bain, director of student activities at the University of Vermont, has been appointed Membership Chairman for Vermont of the American College Personnel Association. He will be the state's representative on ACPA's national membership committee and will be responsible for the planning and conduct of all Association membership activities in Vermont.

The ACPA is a national professional organization of college educators and administrators. Numbering nearly 6,000 members, the ACPA is a division of the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

CORSE FELLOWSHIP

Applications for the Corse Fellowship of $1200 will be accepted by Dean W.H. Macmillan, Graduate College, through April 15. This fellowship, established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, '88, is awarded annually to a graduate of UVM holding the Bachelor of Arts degree, to a senior or to a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

Applicants, either young men or young women, must have majored in English, or a classical language, or two of the European languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

Application blanks may be obtained from Dean Macmillan's office, 107 Waterman Building.

FINANCIAL AID

Those students wishing to apply for aid for the 1967-68 academic year should pick up application forms at the Financial Aid Office, 125 Waterman. The deadline for making application is April 1, 1967.

DEAN'S LIST CERTIFICATES

Dean's list certificates for the spring semester 1966, NOT 1966, can now be obtained at the Student Association Office in Billings.

BOULDER SOCIETY MEMBERSHIP

The Boulder Society, the Senior Men's honorary society, is now accepting nominations from the present Junior Class. Membership in the Society is based on scholarship, character, leadership and service. All nominations or recommendations for membership must be in the Boulder mailbox by 2:00 o'clock on March 15, 1967. If there are any questions please contact Terry Matthews at 2-4352.

HOMECOMING '67

Next year's Homecoming date will be October 7, 1967. Also, the University of Maine will be here for the traditional football game.

MRAC SPONSORS SPEAKER

The Men's Residence Assembly is sponsoring a guest speaker from Sweden Tuesday, March 7, Dr. Lars Amling, a guest professor at Goddard College, will speak on "Sweden -- Socialism, Suicide, Sex, or What." The program will take place in the Marsh Lounge, of MAT, at 7 p.m. There will also be a short film shown.

HOUSE PRESIDENT'S BANQUET

The annual House President's banquet was held Tues., Feb. 21, in the Faculty Dining Room. Those attending included Dean Gribbons, Dean Wing, Miss Dean, and President and Mrs. Rowell.

Theo Russell, President of WSGA, welcomed all in attendance, after which Miss Gribbons spoke on "The Changing Student" and expressed her thanks and appreciation to the house presidents for the fine job they have done this year. President Rowell joined Miss Gribbons in this thanks.

BILLINGS REFURBISHED

If the Billings Center appeared suprisingly new looking when we returned from our intersession break it was no accident. All during the vacation, Buildings and Grounds, working under the supervision of the director of student activities, David Bain, completed a number of important tasks. An incomplete list includes the following:

1. Refinishing the entire wooden floor on the first floor of the building.
2. Installation of a heater in Mrs. Newton's office.
3. Leveling and refinishing the tables in the den.
4. Complete soundproofing of the ceiling in the den so that noise originating there would not filter up into North Lounge.
5. A new rug was laid just inside the front entrance.
6. The building was completely cleaned and painted wherever necessary.
7. The fireplace was repaired.
8. New acoustic ceilings were placed in all four of the sound booths in North Lounge.

We of the Billings Center Governing Board feel that Building and Grounds deserves all the credit for this fine work.

STUDENT COURT PETITIONS

If anyone is interested in running for Student Court, petitions must be turned into the SA office by March 7th. At the same time, a letter stating reasons for running must also be submitted.

MEANING: "I hope you get the picture, chick, I'm a big on this campus."

Examining produce in an open-air marketplace in Lisbon is one way to broaden one's knowledge of the ways of the Portuguese people. These girls found exploring the markets of cities around the world a relaxing change from studies undertaken last year during a semester at sea on Chapman College's floating campus.

Alzada Knickerbocker of Knoxville, Tennessee, -- in the plaid dress -- returned from the study-travel semester to complete her senior year in English at Radcliffe College.

Jan Knippers of Lawrenceburg, Tennessee, a graduate of the University of Tennessee, and a former Peace Corps Volunteer, first pursued graduate studies in International Relations and returned a second semester as a teaching assistant in Spanish on the world-circling campus.

The fall semester voyage of discovery, aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, for which Holland-America Line acts as General Passenger Agents, is carrying 450 other students to ports around the world as you read this.

Still another 450 will leave from Los Angeles in February for the spring 1967 semester set to transit Panama Canal and call at ports in Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Morocco, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark and Great Britain, returning to New York.

EDITORIAL...

THE FINAL ANALYSIS

With the election of the new senior staff, who will take charge of the CYNIC next week, we suppose we are expected to offer some sort of sugar-coated post mortem of the past year's festivities. However, we have always worked in mysterious ways, our miracles to perform; we would hate to break CYNIC tradition by doing what was expected of us, in this our final gasp.

Rather than the usual coroner's report, then, allow us to look briefly to the future. Optimism has always been an unpardonable vice at The Vermont CYNIC. But perhaps it is time for a change (well, perhaps a slight change). In reviewing the newly elected editors we cannot avoid the conclusion that the CYNIC'S future is bright, or at least less dark than we had previously suspected. The new editors bring to this newspaper a brand of enthusiasm which, in some ways, has been missing for some time. They are young, and somewhat less bitter than their predecessors. But, they are very much aware. Very much alive. Very bright. And very hip. In short, the new editors of The Vermont CYNIC know what's happening. And what they don't know, they will learn very quickly.

Our past year at The CYNIC has been rough. It has been an up hill fight. It has been heartbreaking. But, it's been a real gas, and we wouldn't have missed it for all the heat in Billings, or all the virgins on Redstone Campus. To those of you who have offered us encouragement and constructive criticism, we extend our gratitude and the assurance that your suggestions have not been forgotten. To those who have criticized for lack of a more stimulating alternative, we suggest masturbation.

Only hours away from expulsion, we offer this as our last message from heaven. Although we are finally dropping out, we urge you all to remain tuned in, and we further promise to dispatch an occasional memo from purgatory.

Until then, be cool and keep the faith, baby.

Richard Berk

WHO'S CHEATING WHO?

To The Editor:

"Those who cheat are cheating no one but themselves."

What is the meaning of this statement? To whom does it refer? Why is it being mentioned? In this article, the author is not referring to the multitude of cheating on exams, but the 1967 Kake Walk!

People stole their way into the Jazz Concert, the walking, and the ball. Why? Was it because they lacked funds, couldn't get tickets, or they were just plain cheap? The reasons are trivial, but the principle is a dynamic one! If you hypocrites don't know where KW dispositions come from, allow yourself to be enlightened. The profit comes only from the two nights of walking. The profit is the KW disposition, which is distributed to campus organizations. By sneaking in with a group, using a ticket stub, you are not cheating the KW Committee, by getting something over on them, you are cheating and stealing from your fellow students and yourself.

You, of course, must realize that entertainment is expensive, and prices are rising. Fortunately, there are few solutions to prevent future childish actions and the KW Committee is planning to institute these solutions. It is irrelevant what next year's precautions will be and besides it's none of your business. Because you'll just think of some way to steal your way through.

Next year when your friends complain about prices, stop and think, it's people like you, past and present, caused it.

TRAMPLING HUMAN DIGNITY? WHY?

To The Editor:

I would suggest that Mr. Patterson acquire a copy of the recent housing petition and make a sincere effort to comprehend its contents. I believe that he will be most surprised to discover no direct allusions to "rights" as such or to the "Trampling of human dignity." However this idea of rights and human dignity is inherently involved and is, I feel, by no means satisfactorily emphasized. I further object to his use of the descriptive terms, "furor" and "hot declarations." As a zealous advocate of the request included in the V.S.M. petition, I have not encountered any such animosity among the people involved. Indeed, I find in Michael Patterson's archaic letter a contemporary and ineffectual sequel to Matthew Arnold in "Sweetness and Light."

It is unfortunately true that upon entering this institution, one is induced to sign a housing contract. However, in light of the present housing conditions (i.e. the over-crowded conditions) this demand appears even more unreasonable. Last summer, the administrators manifested a touch of humility when they asked students to seek off-campus housing, if possible, due to severe shortage in space. At present, however, and with blatant use of authority, they are reneging on this "temporary waiver" and are demanding that all students sign a housing contract for the academic year 1967-68. I am sure that the reason for this change is due to the ubiquitous economical problems of the university. Our acquiescence to this "game" of rules and regulations, due to their monetary difficulties, makes us somewhat analogous to pawns in a match of chess.

It is obvious that the masses of college students, Michael Patterson included, are resigned to the vast misconception that attending college is another step to be taken in attaining maturity, much like one's obligation to military service. These persons are most certainly not dead. They exist and must learn to cope with such faculty administrative policy which profoundly affects their lives. I am afraid that the solution to the housing policy does not lie in evading these existing rules of deprivation by seeking admission to another institution. Only by dealing with problems like this does attending a university cease to be merely a means by which one becomes something "when I grow up."

DIRECTORS BLAME THOUGHTLESS STUDENTS

To The Editors:

For two years the present Kake Walk Directors have been planning for the 70th Annual Kake Walk. No matter how meticulously plans are made, the entire success of a weekend can be crushed by the actions of a few students. The bitterly disappointing acts of these students who threw bottles at the entertainment and damaged the decorations can only be held in the utmost contempt by the Kake Walk Directors. In the event that Mitch Ryder had not performed, there would not have been any refund. Luckily the action of a few did not deprive the UVM student body from hearing what they paid for.

PERCEPTION

NUDES DON'T BELONG IN PRESIDENT'S HALL

Waal, Sir, I just want to let you know that I am with the Administration of UVM one hundred percent in this here matter of THAT NUDE PAINTING! Of course it should have been taken down! Why, by cracky, do you know who walks down that hall on the way to the President's Office. Parents! Trustees! Potential money givers! Big Names That's who! Why, if they seen something like that nude painting, they could get a whole lot of wrong ideas about our beloved State University. They could think we're letting the kids think that there wasn't nothing wrong with nudity! People could get the idea that we're progressive! By gum, we don't want that! Let's have decent art out there in the President's hall. Some cute pictures of puppies and dogs, nice homey scenes of covered bridges with snow on the roofs, and a couple of pictures of the University elm trees, say. The place to keep that nude stuff is in the smut magazine where we can mull it over in the privacy of the privy, and hide it under our mattresses and get all the proper snickers and enjoyment out of it. Yessir, I'm with the Administration two hundred percent on this one!

"Apres le deluge - blahhh!"

Who uttered these immortal words? King Louis XIV? Napoleon? The Red Baron?

All wrong. These immortal words were never uttered.

No, these words are unexpressed verbal symbols representing the creaking thoughts of thousands of Kake Walk revellers, brushing the last kake crumbs out of their catamount whiskers (the Queen, you recall, said "Let them eat kake"), and preparing once again to face the harsh realities of the academic continuum.

The morning after the night before stretched into the weeks after the weekend before, and still the emotional moratorium at UVM continued.

Dreary faces gazed without comprehension at disgusted lecturers, who revenged themselves with a flourish of hour exams.

Belated euphoria drifted over the campus like a London fog.

The Period of Recovery fastened its dull claws into random students who were keeping a patient vigil in Bailey Library, staring at the ceiling.

Romeo Cloverbud couldn't find an appreciative audience anywhere to listen to his latest amorous exploits.

Apathy rose from its all-time low of 37 cents a share two weeks ago to $14.84, and it proved the most popular purchase on Wall Street for several days.

The last memories of KW, the snow-sculptures, crumbled like abandoned ruins.

The UVM Date Book, which had had trouble finding places for everything before Kake Walk, was finally racking its IBM to think up enough sports events and club meetings to keep the undergrads out of Ira Allen's hair.

And speaking of statues, even Lafayette, keeping a steely eye on the Medical Building, seemed to have a dejected slump and a noticeably larger pot-bell than before Kake Walk.

The last of the big-time spenders invited his date to go skating Saturday night, and when they went for a snack later, he ordered water to drink with the Lureburgers.

Meanwhile, a distracted UVM faculty member paced tragically back and forth in a toga from a fraternity skit and a "Mitch Ryder for Queen" button, muttering, "How studious mankind is! O, grave, blue world, that hath such students in't."

Blahhh.

"Porgy And Bess" Highlights Red Lane Series

By Judy Beeber

Highlighting the Red Lane Series on Monday, March 6, will be George Gershwin's famous folk opera "Porgy and Bess" to be performed by the "Porgy and Bess" Company. The curtain will rise in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

The play first made its debut in the mid thirties. The story is set in the surroundings of Catfish Row, South Carolina where Porgy, a goat boy and Bess, the mistress of a giant stevedore reside. As the story unfolds, we see how Porgy's love for Bess results in terrifying tragedies.

Joyce Bryant as Bess

The score of the show consists of songs which have since become classics of the American musical theater. Among them can be counted "Summertime," "I Got Plenty O' Nothin'," "Bess, You Is My Woman Now," and "It Ain't Necessarily So."

The "Porgy and Bess" Company consists of a cast of 100 and will be accompanied by a large orchestra. The company will be coming direct from an international tour which in recent months has taken the company to Australia, New Zealand and Israel. The main roles will be played by LeVern Hutcherson, Joyce Bryant and Val Pringle, all to be accompanied by the Eva Jessye Choir.

LeVern Hutcherson, who plays the role of Porgy, has previously appeared in the theatre as the tenor lead in the Broadway production of Carmen Jones. Hutcherson was soon chosen to sing the role of Porgy in the production presented at the New York City Center.

Joyce Bryant, who plays Bess in the show is a concert and opera soloist. In recent years, she has appeared as soloist with the Washington Civic Symphony Orchestra and in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" which she sang at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Avon Long, who plays "Sportin' Life", has previously starred and featured in more than a dozen Broadway plays and musicals, such as "Bloomer Girl," "Green Pastures," and "Very Warm for May."

FLICKS

STRONG - "Marat-Sade" - an extraordinary play done by the brilliant Royal Shakespeare Company on film. A study of asylum inmates that makes one wonder about who really is insane in this world. Sun. - Alan Arkin, Paul Ford, Jonathan Winters and Theodore Nikel in "The Russians Are Coming." - A good idea, a Russian submarine grounded in American waters, botched in typical Hollywood, heavyhanded, slapstick fashion. Academy Award nominee because it cost so much money to manufacture. Arkin pretty good; Winters pitiful.

FLYNN - "Endless Summer" - Colorful surfing films from many popular areas. This film has been enjoying great success.

STATE - Dr. Zhivago - Omar Sharif, Julie Christie and many others. If one has not read the Pasternak novel, then he will not be disappointed with this beautiful Russian spectacle directed by David Lean of "Lawrence of Arabia" fame. Despite many drawbacks in the editing and story line, "Zhivago" can provide some stirring entertainment and some touching moments. Well worth the time and money.

S.A. - "The Diary of Anne Frank." - Josef Shickelraut leads a fine cast in a production that hardly differs a word from the Broadway thriller based on the diary of a young Jewish girl during World War II.

UPSHOT Presents 1-Act Plays

UPSHOT, the University Players' Experimental Theatre program presents an evening of Dimensions March 12 at 8:30 in the Arena Theatre. The new 1-act plays and films written by UVM Senior Jan Quackenbush and directed by Gene Dea will be performed. The public is invited to an evening of excitement.

KITTEN TALK

By Sandy Luckenbill

The past two weeks have been a time of studying for the Kittens, but nonetheless they fired up for sports anyway. The hockey team hit the road twice as they traveled to Lake Placid and Hanover, and they entertained Norwich at home. The frosh basketball team traveled south to Middlebury, and stayed home to knock off Plattsburgh State, and a revenge minded Middlebury squad. The Swim team stayed home in familiar ways and swam against UConn. and the Cadets of Norwich.

Beyond a doubt the freshman hockey team is the most interesting squad at UVM. They often practice at six o'clock in the morning, and some times they show up only to find themselves without a coach. This week, as they were coming home for the Northwood game, their bus ran into the back of a police car. It had been a bad week for the skaters for they lost in overtime to Northwood, and they blew a close game to Dartmouth. To add injury to insult, leading defenseman George Kreiner was lost to the team for the rest of the year with a shoulder separation.

Over the past two weeks, however, the icemen did get off to a good start as they beat the Norwich Cadets in an excellently played game, 3-2. To my mind this was their best game of the season as they got off to a 2 to nothing lead with goals by Kreiner and Bob Krebs. The Cadets scored, but Jim Yeates put the icing on the cake with his net splitting goal in the final period.

Northwood Prep School was next and the Kittens found themselves on the bottom 9 to 8. It was a thriller, but the preps took it in overtime. UVM put on quite a comeback as they were down 8 to 3 going into the final period. Hitting the nets were Bob Krebs with 2, Jim Yeates 2, Dick Mullany also 2, and Jumbo Lane and little Nick Vlachos both got one apiece. It was just the opposite at Dartmouth, for this time the Kittens were in the game all during the first 2 periods, but the third period was murder as the Ivies poured in 3 goals to UVM's zip. The final was 7-3 with Krebs, Mullany, and Bart Frisbe all getting goals.

Getting from on top of the water and into it, we find the swimming team winning one but losing another. UConn came to town for Kake Walk and sunk the swimming Kittens 63 to 26. In the losing effort Dave Edsall, Joe Lovett, and Bob Castle came through with first place finishes. The tide was turned against Norwich as the water Kittens swam up a 62 - 29 win. The UVMers won every first place position, the relays, and the diving. The first place performers are as follows: 200 Medley Relay Doug Arnold, Elliot Phillopson, Joe Lovett, and Bill Baker, 200 and 500 freestyle - Bob Castle, 200 Individual Medley and 200

Breaststroke - Dave Edsall, 50 Freestyle - Elliot Phillopson, 200 Butterfly - Joe Lovett, 100 Freestyle - Tom Ettenger, and Doug Arnold won the 200 Backstroke. The 400 Free Relay winning team was Bill Baker, Doug Arnold, Bob Castle, and Tom Ettenger.

It was an average week for the Kitten Hoopsters. They played 3 games and they won 3. They now have a typical game pattern, they fool around for the first ten or so minutes throwing the ball away and missing shots. Then about half way through the first half they catch fire and the game is as good as won. Middlebury was the first to fall this week as they came to UVM. They were no match for Bob Hutton and Frank Martiniuk as they combined for a total of 55 points. The final in this one was 81 to 64.

Plattsburgh was the next to come to town, but they too suffered defeat in the paws of the Kittens. It was a close one however as the New Yorkers put the pressure on in the final moments of play. The final score was 80 - 74 with Martiniuk again leading the scoring parade with 28 points.

The hoopsters accompanied the varsity to Middlebury and beat them soundly, 92-58. It was a team effort as the whole first team hit for double figures. Big Aliso Salati looked particularly good as he pulled down several rebounds and scored 12 points. Ray Bueb was good for 13 and a good number of rebounds, but it was the "machine," Frank Martiniuk who led the scoring with 18 points.

Nine Games Are Scheduled Thru 1972 Grid Year

J. Edward Donnelly, Director of Athletics at the University of Vermont, has announced that Vermont will play nine-game football schedules for at least through the 1972 season.

Starting with C.W. Post in 1967, a total of eight new schools will appear on the grid slate.

C. W. Post plays the Catamounts in 1967 and 1968. Wilkes of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., plays in 1968 and 1969.

Two Boston schools, Boston University and Northeastern, appear on the slate in 1969. BU plays again in 1970 while Northeastern plays at least through 1972. Also on the newly announced schedule for 1969-70 is Lafayette.

Hofstra joins the Vermont schedule in 1970 for at least four years. Bucknell (tentatively) and Lehigh will face the Catamounts in 1971 and 72.

Four independents will appear on each schedule in addition to the five Yankee Conference rivals.

Many of the schedule changes were brought about because of the termination of games after 1968 by Middlebury and Norwich, Vermont's traditional state rivals.

CATAMOUNTS LOSE: 7-3 SCORE

By Fred Schlapp

Last Saturday night the Cats played host to the powerful Colby Mules. Colby came into the game second only to Norwich in Division II, and they wasted no time showing why they held that lofty position. Paced by the leading scorer in Division II, Mike Self, the Mules tallied four times in the first period to hold a 4-0 advantage. But again, as has happened in many of their games, the Cats put on a strong second period showing, and moved to within 2 goals of Colby. The Cats started quickly as Roy put the disc away from point blank range at the one minute mark of the period. This was Roy's 31st point of the season and set a new Vermont scoring record. UVM struck again, but this time Curt Tobey was the marksman tallying from a goal mouth scramble with 3:42 gone in the period. Vermont dominated the second period and left the ice trailing only 4-2.

The Mules, however, just had too much fire power for the Cats, as they put the game on ice with a three goal outburst in the final period.

For Colby, Henrich had 3 goals and Mike Self had 2 to lead the Mules who were now 11 - 6 on the season. For Vermont, center Curt Tobey and goalie John Hynes played fine games despite the final score.

The Cats play host to Middlebury College on Wednesday, and high scoring Lee Roy who now has 16 goals and 15 assists for a Vermont record of 31 points, will be out to improve that total.

Cats Win Final Hoop Games

THE INSIDER

Middlebury, Norwich Lose

By BOB JACOBS

The brown leather ball bounced into the air after careening crazily off the floor, and for a split second the fate of the two ball-clubs hung suspended under the Vermont hoop. "Streak" Hanna's hand shot out like a snake's tongue to snatch the ball and the contest from the hands of the frustrated Panthers. Once the ball was in his grip, Bruce whirled, dribbled twice, and then launched his sweaty body toward the hoop. He laid the ball off the glass-board and was clobbered as it fell through the cords. The steal had come with 21 seconds left in the game with UVM 1 point down, and as he calmly added a foul shot, we surged ahead by two. But this Bizzaro contest was not over yet as Middlebury's Dick Minton was fouled with 4 seconds left on the clock. On a one and one situation he sank one, and then with a tie in his grasp, bounced the second free throw off the back of the orange ring a mere 16 feet away. Thus, 39 minutes and 39 seconds of effort were resolved in 21 seconds with UVM winning a squeaker, 79 to 78.

The foray was marked by an inability to fix the net by the Middlebury janitorial staff, an inability to the Middlebury official timer, and just plain incompetence by the two officials. Many felt that the Middlebury players had missed their calling as their histrionics and impassioned pleas made them sure of a niche in the theatre if they would pursue a career in drama. The referees were far from unsympathetic as a total of 67 foul shots were taken in a 40 minute contest. Incidentally, the Cats won while being deprived of the services of Billy Librera, Dave Lapointe, and "Skull" Boardman via the foul route.

Terry "Red Baron" O'Leary's 11 points in the second half were a timely and clutch contribution indicative of his fine efforts all year. Donny Katz also played a nice game drawing numerous fouls near the end of the game to keep us within striking distance. Despite being severely hobbled by the inequity of the officiating, Librera managed 12 points and Lapointe bagged 13 points before assuming their position on the long pine. For the Panthers, Minton and Captain Peter Roby played exceptionally well notching 19 and 20 points respectively.

Looking forward to Norwich on Wednesday, a victory would help brighten what has been in general a dismal season for the Cats. Stukowski is their big offensive threat, launching his jumpers and occasional sweeping hooks to keep the cadets in contention when the going get tough. Last outing Hanna and Lapointe did a good job containing Stukowski for three-quarters of the game. With Hanna defending like Clarence Darrow and Lapointe and Librera cutting the cords we should eke this one out.

VOLLEYBALL ENTRIES

By Jack Berry

The winter intramural schedule continues this week as entries for the volleyball tournament and winter sports meet open on Wednesday and Thursday respectively. Interested parties should apply to Mr. Strassbourg as soon as possible. Those interested in the Badminton Doubles Tournament have until March 6 to enter.

As the Paddleball Doubles Tournament enters its fourth round, pre-tournament favorites Burgess and Cook of Delta Psi, and Dorsey and Pravata of SAE remain in contention. These teams will not play each other unless they both reach the finals and competition is pretty rugged.

Delta Psi continues to lead in the race for the All Sports Trophy. SAE trails by a mere 2.5 points at this writing and has a good chance to break the Delta Psi dynasty. Delta Psi is trying for its third straight trophy and wants it very badly.

RIFLEMEN WIN

By David A. Keenan

The Catamount Varsity Rifle team overcame the obstacles of poor lighting and poor acoustics on the UMass rifle range to defeat the Remen by a score of 1220-1173. The low scoring match was topped by UVM's high-shooting sophomore, Bob Walker, who fired a 252. High for the Redmen were Pete Gallagher and Jim Gallorani, each with a 245. This win boosts the UVM record to 4-2, with the match against Nasson College still up in the air over the outcome. It seems that the Catamounts were all prime for the encounter with the Varsity team from Nasson, when the word came down that Nasson had failed to arrive. Whether or not the match will be fired at a later date or won by UVM by forfeit still is to be decided. UVM shooters now look forward to this Saturday when the Wildcats from the University of New Hampshire travel to Burlington to try their luck against the Catamounts.

Senior and Captain Bruce Hanna and Coach Art Loche.

Future Years Look Bright

by Ted Ryan

The bright prospects of the future overshadow the disappointing results of the recently completed basketball season and University of Vermont coach Art Loche is looking to a strong performance by this year's tall and talented freshmen. But this season closed in a fashion Loche was happy to see in.....winning.

The Cats completed varsity action Wednesday night, with a 77-75 victory over state rival Norwich for a 9-15 record.

On Monday night, the last minute free throw by Captain Bruce Hanna boosted Vermont past another state rival, Middlebury, 79-78.

A close game was not expected and Loche complemented Middlebury squad for its determined bid for an upset. "Middlebury has certainly improved over the course of the season. They were just as strong off the backboards. Defensively, we made many mistakes."

Loche also attributed the close game to a short layoff in practice over the weekend. Center Rusty Boardman missed two practice sessions. But Loche praised guards Hanna and Terry O'Leary for one of their finest games of the season respectively. Hanna and Bob Jacobs turned in sterling defensive performances on Dave Vanier, one of Middlebury's top scorers.

"We came out lucky," added the sophomore Vermont coach. The mature defensive work of Hanna was the decisive factor. Entering the game with just seconds left after a rest on the bench, Hanna came up with a loose ball and tallied on a three point play with 24 seconds left.

Another fine performance was fashioned by Donnie Katz, one of the most consistent players on the team. Dave Lapointe notched only 13 points, well below the current 22-point average he has been scoring of late, but five other Vermonters hit double figures to take up the slack.

TRACK TEAM IN LOSS TO TUFTS

By Mick Kropsky

Tufts University hosted the University of Vermont and Colby College this past weekend in a triangular track meet. When it was all over, the hosts had won and the guests had been solidly beaten. Tufts finished up with 71 points while UVM and Colby had 37 and 29 points respectively.

Tufts had six first place finishes along with a win in the mile relay in the 13 event meet. Colby ended up winning two first while Archie Post's trackmen took four firsts. UVM winners were as follows: Bruce Miller won the 36 pound weight event with a toss of 52'4 3/4". Avery Seamen came in second in this event. Ed Childs leaped over the bar at 6'1" to win the high jump, while Richie Kabat cleared the bar at 12'6" to win the pole vault event. UVM's other winner was Paul Ardell who threw the shot put 45'8" for a first place finish.

Both the varsity and freshmen track teams will be at home this Saturday for a dual meet with the University of New Hampshire at 1:00 p.m.

35-pound weight: 1, Miller (V); 2, Seaman (V); 3, Cowen (T); 4, Jacobson (T). Distance: 52 feet 4 3/4 inches.

45-yard low hurdles: 1, Anado (T); 2, Kabat (V); 3, Balsley (C); 4, Beattie (T). Time: 5.7 seconds.

Pole Vault: 1, Kabat (V); 2, Wells (T); 3, Skinner (C); 4, Lorlon (T). Height: 12 feet, 6 inches.

Mile relay: 1, Tufts. Time: 3:32.7.

Official statistics in the 1967 NCAA College Baseball Guide points out that the University of Vermont baseball team had another outstanding year on the mound and in the field in 1966.

The Catamounts were ranked fifth nationally in team pitching and tied for seventh in fielding percentage.

Despite the fine fifth place finish in the ERA loss with 1.84, Ralph Lapointe's Green and Fold dropped from their second place finish of 1965.

Housing Policy Changed

Off-campus Housing Allowed for Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors

There has been a great deal of discussion and friction on campus this semester concerning the present housing policy. There have been movements to stir up student opinion about it and proposals for possible changes that could be made in it. This is fact. The administration has now issued its housing policy for the coming two semesters. Following is a text of that policy; it is self-explanatory.

"After reviewing the projected enrollment figures for the 1967-68 academic year the University will continue the emergency housing procedure this next academic year. Therefore, sophomore, junior, and senior men and women may register for residence hall or off-campus housing. Parental permission is required of sophomores and juniors who have not reached the age of twenty-one as of December 31, 1967. Allowing sophomores and juniors with parental permission to live off campus continues to be a temporary measure and a departure from the normal University housing policy and is in effect for the coming academic year only.

We shall continue to be cognizant of student expression regarding University housing policies; however, a permanent change in policy is not practical or feasible at the present time. It should be noted that historically the University has attempted to respond to the needs of previous generations of students by providing housing facilities on campus. The establishment of a residential campus has required considerable capital expenditure and planning. To provide undergraduate housing the building costs alone to date total more than $7,500,000. The University continues to support these values inherent in a residential campus and is planning a 475-student residence hall to be completed in the fall of 1968.

While recognizing these values we are further persuaded that the available campus housing should not be a deterrent to the admission and education of qualified students. In order to accommodate this latter commitment the housing policy of the University in effect is subject to an annual review. The resultant decisions of any policy review should mutually serve the best interests of the students and academic community."

The Vermont Student Movement petitions, signed by a high percentage of the student body, has served, the administration feels, mainly as a reinforcement to the present decision. There are plans for two new co-ed dorms with room for 600 and 750 respectively. There will also be an apartment building for married couples containing 90-100 suites.

We would like to stress that the new housing policy is again a temporary measure.

Alpha Gamma Rho Kappa Alpha Theta Top Blood Drive

Annual PCIL Meeting Held

On Thursday, March 9, the UVM Student Ambassador Program held its annual meeting. The meeting was held by the class officers under the direction of Dr. M. Perrine. Dr. Perrine said that this year the student has a choice of Japan or India.

Gary Lawson, chairman of the program, explained the purpose of PCIL and future plans. Larry Roth, UVM's first ambassador (to India) explained the role of the student ambassador in the foreign country.

The trip is paid for by the program, with money raised by Tag Day, extended curfews, and organization donations. The only expense for the student is personal spending money. When he returns, the student reports on his stay to interested organizations.

Interested students may pick up an application at the S.A. desk. Questions should be directed to Committee members.

The Student Association of the University of Vermont is the only Organization in which each student is an automatic member because of his contribution to the student activity fee. S.A. is a means by which every undergraduate student may voice his opinion, assume some responsibility, and participate in University government. The Student Association is responsible for allocating money from the students' activity fees to each individual student organization qualifying for it.

BUS SERVICE FOR REDSTONE

The Student Association has been investigating the lack of transportation for women dormitory students since November. They have finally reached a tentative agreement with the Vermont Transit Bus Service whereby they will run busses from Redstone Campus to Waterman Building and back.

Monday, March 13, will begin a one-week trial period. The bus will run from approximately 7:30-10 a.m. and 12-4 p.m., subject to change. The charge will be 10¢ per ride.

As the S.A. had to guarantee Vermont Transit a certain sum each day, we strongly suggest you take advantage of this offer before it is terminated.

Elections Held in Most Campus Organizations

March is the time in the school year when most campus organizations hold their elections. Most fraternities, the CYNIC, the I.F.C. have already had theirs. The balloting for the Student Association is today, and next Wednesday, March 15, for the Woman's Student Government Association.

WSGA COUNCIL ELECTIONS

The hope is that next Wed. all UVM girls will turn out to vote for their '67-'68 WSGA Council. Voting will take place in Billings from 9:00-4:00 and in Wright and Simpson dining halls from 4:00-6:00.

Running for President are Deborah Arnold and Kathleen Dyer. Debbie is a junior in the College of Education and Nursing from Rutland, Vt. Kathy, also a junior, is enrolled in the College of Agriculture and is from Lexington, Mass.

The candidates for Chairman of Judiciary are Cynthia Alexander and Judith Anderson. Cynthia, from Vernon, Vt. is enrolled in the College of Education and Nursing in which she is a junior. Judy is also a junior in the College of Education and Nursing. She originates from Barre, Vt.

Candidates for House Chairman: Marianne Martin, Fran Robinson; Assistant House Chairman: Patty Capron, Roberta Williams.

Also the following Amendment to the Constitution is proposed: "That two members of the Sophomore class be added to the Judiciary Committee."

If the above amendment is passed, the following candidates have been nominated:

Sophomore to Judiciary: Judy Aplington, Judy Bruce and Sally Stannard.

Here is a list of candidates for S.A. and Student Court positions:

President, James A. Fontanella.

1st Vice President, Richard Kabat and Janet F. Roser.

2nd Vice President, Mary Moninger, Mary McNeil, Dennis Usdan, Kenneth H. Parker, Lester A. Velez, Brock Ketcham, Joyce Eidenberg, Brian Pease, and Jean M. Bomhower.

Recording Secretary, Dawn Clark, Shristina Maniatty, and Patricia J. Stankevich.

Corresponding Secretary Valerie Van Houten, Nancy Warsawer, Barbara Bigelow, Melinda Cross, and Van Hall.

Treasurer, Robert M. Williams.

Sub-Treasurer, John E. Cornish, Rebecca Hazen, Pam Marvinney, and Robert C. MacKenzie.

STUDENT COURT, Frank R.A. Resnick, Keith Pillsbury, Richard R. Adams, Robert Richter, Robert Jerard, Jack Stroker, and Douglas A. Deaett.

James Fontanella, Candidate for S.A. President

Janet Roser, Candidate for 1st Vice President

Richard Kabat, Candidate for 1st Vice President

The Purpose of

The S.A. Is ...

S.A. assists the University in this area of responsibility in two ways:

1. It serves the University as the official channel of communication with the student body in all matters involving statements of University policy regarding rules, regulations, and privileges of students. It is also responsible for communication in these areas.

2. It serves the student body as its communication link in the expression of student opinion. In meeting this responsibility, the student government organization may inquire into any aspect of University life. This communication is provided through the representation of elected senators from every living unit on campus.

NSU Aid Japanese College

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

Ryukyu Daigaku, shortened to Ryudai, is located on the site of the old castle of the Ryukyuan kings. This high spot overlooking the city of Naha was used by the Japanese as a key post during the last great battle of World War II. After the battle, the buildings were nothing but rubble, only some of the old stone walls left standing. So, following the Japanese traditions of using old feudal castle sites for college campuses, this site in Shuri was chosen for the first University of the Ryukyu Islands. The American government which has "administrative rights" over Okinawa has been generous in providing funds for some fifteen buildings which make up the campus. Despite the handicap of limited room for expansion Ryudai has a handsome campus. The buildings, some of which hug close to the rugged cliffs, are of functional architecture. Tropical palms and flowering shrubs abound.

A university is, of course, much more than a campus. Through the years since its founding in 1950 over 5000 students have graduated from Ryudai. Over thirty percent of the teachers in the schools of the Ryukyus are graduates of the University. Many graduates have gone into business and government service; some have gone on for graduate study in Japan and the United States. In its early years Ryudai performed another function, - offering summer and refresher courses to school teachers seeking to earn accreditation. Today better trained teachers are entering the profession and the university is devoting its efforts to up-grading its programs and carrying on research. This is needed, for some of its faculty members do not have advanced degrees and, as they retire, need to be replaced by well trained younger professors. Today, of the 188 faculty members, seven have Ph.D.'s from Japanese universities and eight from American universities. Fifty-four faculty members do not have collegiate degrees.

For fifteen years Michigan State University has had a sister relationship with Ryudai. Faculty members from MSU have been on the staff of Ryudai and have served in an advisory capacity. Recently Ryudai professors have been teaching at Michigan State and last summer eighteen MSU students came to Ryudai for a special summer program.

Not far from the campus is a faculty housing complex with apartments and houses for MSU and Ryudai professors. (Mrs. McCune and I were fortunate in being able to use one of the houses during our stay in the Ryukyus and found it very convenient and pleasant. It was good to reap benefit from my having helped to plan and arrange the financing of these while I was U.S. Civil Administrator in 1963.)

Ryudai has a real problem in trying to develop its own personality as an institution. It operated originally under a United States Civil Administration Ordinance with an independent board of trustees. Last year, however, the Government of the Ryukyu Islands passed a bill making it an instrumentality of the government. It has received most of its capital funds for buildings from the American aid program. Its operating funds come for its modest tuition fees and from the Government of the Ryukyu Islands. The Japanese government has offered to build a medical school, but the tremendous operating expenses for such a costly school which could milk the rest of the university dry has some of the faculty and administration worried.

Varied financing is matched by varied educational aims. Should Ryudai be a type of Japanese government "national university," an American Land Grant College type of university, or some kind of a hybrid fitted to the needs of the Ryukyu Islands?

With the help it has received from Michigan State University and elsewhere Ryudai has many features adapted from American higher education. A noteworthy example is an excellent openshelf library which serves as the academic heart of the university. In the library is a fine collection of Ryukyuan source materials. Another feature is emphasis upon the creative arts. A kiln built with Rockefeller Foundation funds was being tried out when I was there. I treasure the fine vase which Professor Adenya gave me from one of the first successful firings. It will go well with the modern painting by Professor Tamanaha which we have had in our home since 1962. The physical education and intramural program centered in a modern gymnasium is enjoyed by the students, though intercollegiate athletics is difficult because of the distance from universities in Japan.

The organization of the University is Japanese. When his predecessor died in office, President Asato was elected to fill out the term. He had been elected for two three-year terms a number of years ago. In this system deans also are elected. Department chairmen are appointed and hold professorships for life. They run their departments as fiefdoms. The students enter on the basis of examinations; only one in four applicants make it. Though the high school graduating classes doubled last year, the university upped its admissions only slightly. This year they expect to admit 960 students out of 4300 applicants. Ryudai will have a student body of 3600.

The students also are involved in the search for identity. The Ryukyu is still under American political administration. We, an anti-colonial people, have remained in power in Okinawa ever since 1945, under the justification of the strategic importance of the Ryukyus in these days of "threat and tension" in the Far East. In Okinawa we have a base where we have complete freedom of action. Over 60,000 men and more than a billion dollars worth of equipment are placed there. Though the 920,000 Ryukyuan people do have an elected government, this in turn may have its laws and actions circumscribed by the U.S. High Commissioner, the military commander of the U.S. forces. Students often join with others in protesting the American presence, shouting for reversion to Japan to whom the United States has agreed that the "residual sovereignty" of the Ryukyus belongs. When you may not have one, the desire for a passport or a national flag looms to paramount importance.

During my last week on Okinawa, the Government of the Ryukyu Islands Legislature was trying to convene for its regular session. The ruling party had proposed two laws which would restrict the political freedom and association of teachers. These are identical to laws recently passed in Japan and, if reversion were to take place, would be the law of the land for Okinawa. Yet despite their longing for reversion the teachers were protesting these laws. They so effectively blocked the entrance to the legislative halls that the legislature was forced to postpone its meetings. A couple of hundred of Ryudai students joined in the protests. To me it was discouraging. Their reasons for protest were illogical, but, far more important, was their abuse of the right to protest in obstructing the due process of government. To some students it was a protest for protest's sake, to others a day's cut from classes. Probably to most it was confusion, - a search for their position in the tentative and unrealistic society of the Ryukyus today.

Ski Lodge Membership Free

This is absolutely the last time that Ski Lodge Charter membership will be offered "free." This coming week memberships may be obtained at a booth in Lower Billings. In the future an actual payment will have to be made. If you possess a charter membership you are entitled to stay at the lodge for half-price ($1.50), obtain a 15% discount at Madonna, ski at Glen Ellen any time for $4.00 all day, and ski at Mad River for $4.00 on week days and for $2.00 for an afternoon.

Take advantage of this free offer which will entitle you to inexpensive skiing as well as lodging.

Students from other universities do not have the reductions offered to UVM students, but they take advantage of the facilities offered by our Ski Lodge more than we do.

The M.I.T. Outing Club has run many trips to our Lodge and is having another this weekend. A report in their monthly bulletin stated:

"Several ski trips have stayed at the University of Vermont Outing Club Ski Lodge. The reports brought back by the people on these trips contain nothing but praise for UVM. That seems to be quite a place they have up there. Our congratulations and thanks to the University of Vermont."

History Institute In Summer Session

The University of Vermont's 1967 Summer Session will include a History Institute for Secondary School Teachers, with tuition stipends provided for participants under the National Defense Education Act, administered by the Office of Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW).

The Institute is open to teachers in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York State exclusive of New York City who have had at least one year's experience in teaching European history in grades 9-12.

Participants will be required to enroll in two of three formal courses offered - "The Political Expansion of Europe, 1815-1914," "The Economic History of Europe since 1400," or "European Political and Economic Geography." They will also be required to take part in a workshop in the techniques of teaching history. An informal evening seminar will be available.

"The Institute," Professor Schmokel explained, "will be planned for teachers whose primary academic responsibility is history, and who already have a substantial background in the field." He added that interviews with teachers in 1966 NDEA Institutes at Vermont indicated that "there is a real need among teachers in the state to deepen their understanding of European history in order to teach the subject more effectively."

Applications for the Institute should be sent before March 20, 1967 to: Professor Wolfe W. Schmokel, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

"Tag day" will be Wednesday, March 15. Sponsored by the Student Ambassador program (PCIL), this day is set aside to raise money to send a student to India or Japan next summer. Various campus figureheads will roam the campus between 9:30 and 2:30 seeking contributions from the students. Donations will be accepted and the donor will receive a PCIL bookmark for his interest. Any amount will be accepted.

Reading Habits Of Prospective College Students Have Changed

New York, N.Y. - (I.P.) - There may have been a dramatic shift in the reading habits of college-bound youth during the past several years, according to the results of a study at Columbia College recently released.

The report reveals a trend away from the classics, British writers, and those magazines with light content, to existentialists like Camus and Dostoevsky, American writers like Steinbeck, Hemingway, Faulkner, and Ayn Rand, and more serious magazines like "The New Republic," "Newsweek," "Saturday Review," and "The New Yorker."

The findings come from a comparison of books, magazines, and newspapers read by entering freshmen in the Class of 1962 and the Class of 1970 at Columbia College. All applicants to the College are requested to list the books they have most enjoyed and the magazines and newspapers they read regularly.

Shakespeare is the author who has declined in popularity most conspicuously. While 25 per cent of the Class of 1962 listed at least one of his plays as a favorite, only nine per cent of the 700-man Class of 1970 did so.

Homer, Dickens, G.B. Shaw, and E.M. Forster were other important writers who have suffered a loss of interest.

On the other hand, several authors have risen sharply in popularity. Camus, listed as a favorite by only two per cent of the Class of 1962, was enjoyed by 18 per cent of the Class of 1970. James Joyce was read by five times as many members of the Class of 1970 as in the earlier group. Kafka, Steinbeck, Ayn Rand, Fitzgerald, and Faulkner were others who stock has risen.

Some authors who were strongly liked wight years ago continued to be fairly popular: Joseph Conrad, Thomas Hardy, Jean-Paul Sartre, Sinclair Lewis, Mark Twain, Thomas Wolfe, and Hemingway.

Certain single books also continue to enjoy the students' favor: Huxley's "Brave New World," Joyce's "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man," Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye," Orwell's "1984," and "Animal Farm," Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby."

In magazines, the study reveals a movement away from lighter reading toward periodicals more concerned with weightier matters. "Reader's Digest" was read by 29 per cent of the Class of 1962, but only six per cent of the Class of 1970. Over the eight-year span "The New Republic" had the greatest jump in student subscriptions, from two per cent to 15 per cent. "Time" is the most widely read magazine among the Class of 1970, with 49 per cent, up three per cent from eight years ago. "Playboy" was included in the regularly-read category by only a tiny handful.

There will be a free sugar on snow party on Saturday, March 11, at the Newman Center. The party will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be followed by a hootenanny. No admission fee will be charged. There will be refreshments served, so plan to come and bring your friends!

What is Mortar Board ?

Elections to Mortar Board will soon take place and we feel perhaps the students of UVM would be interested in knowing more about this honorary.

Mortar Board is the Senior Women's Honorary. It represents a group of girls who have distinguished themselves in service, scholarship and leadership.

Mortar Board originated at the University of Vermont in 1914 as "Akraia" meaning "The Peak" or "The Very Top." It became a part of Mortar Board, the national women's honorary, in 1924.

It was composed of senior women who worked with the Dean of Women's office for service to the school. It was originally the only organization which represented the women of the University.

Mortar Board served the school by performing such functions as evaluating rules and privileges for the women of Vermont.

When Waterman was built the Mortar Board established a lounge for the town girls there. A recreation room in Coolidge basement was converted to the Coolidge library.

During World War II, the girls on Mortar Board worked to collect money for scholarships and loans for the soldiers who had left UVM. When the soldiers returned to school, these girls set up a tutoring service for the men.

Mortar Board used to present an annual Spring Pageant called Lilac Day. At this time the girls planted the lilacs on Redstone Campus.

They were hostesses at the President's Receptions and served as ushers at the Chapel. On Sunday afternoons they would have coffee hours for the faculty at Southwick.

Eventually their tasks became so overbearing that Staff and Sandal and Sophomore Aides were created to assist the Mortar Board girls with all their jobs.

Today, many Mortar Board functions have been changed. They still are primarily aides to the Dean of Women's office, they also carry on the Mum Sale and this year they are working for an improvement of the Spring Honors' Day program. They have attempted to improve the University Store's program of a selling

John Birch Society Criticized

By John Kyper

Self-described, the John Birch Society is "an educational organization to supply the American people with what they have not been told." It was ostensibly in this spirit that John McManus, an organizer, came to UVM to inform the students about the Society and their views.

McManus began by citing Lenin's plan to conquer the United States. Continuing, he stated that Communists were infiltrating themselves into the government disguised as Americans. How does he know? If they are such experts on this matter the Society ought either to perform a valuable national service and tell all they responsibly know to an authorized government organ or else shut up, rather than undermining public trust in the government with irresponsible and unsubstantiated accusations.

By sly innuendo the speaker repeatedly implied that Presidents Eisenhower and Johnson were either Communists or Communist dupes. Indeed, in this sad state of affairs it seems that the government is totally in the control of Communists and their dupes and that the public is quite apathetic to this situation. If the American people are such stooges to the Communists, it might be wondered; are they at all competent for self-government, particularly if they are as ill-formed and as biased as the John Birch Society insists? Would a benevolent despotism of the Right, like Franco's, better serve their interests?

Similarly, he believes that the campus protest movement is, apparently, solely the result of Communist agitation. The speaker said that the students are led by professors of "varying shades of red." Again, he should put up or shut up.

To soften the blow he states that he, too, is a dissenter on foreign policy. In Vietnam, he adds, American troops are fighting without purpose because the sacred word, "victory," has been forgotten; that the nation, in effect, has no stated policy. Apparently bombing alone will solve all problems. It is almost enough to remind anyone of a recent candidate to the US Senate whose incredibly simplistic proposal was that ten days of intensive bombing in the North would win the war. Do they desire to turn North Vietnam, China and perhaps eventually Russia (The So-Viet-Chinese split is phony, because, after all, they are all Communist.) into an uninhabitable wasteland? Would this solve all our problems?

Just what is meant by this seemingly mystic word, "victory"? Is it the instant savior that shall resolve everything for America, a salvation by military might? If it taught America anything, World War II demonstrated the futility of mere military force as an end in itself, for once the war ended, the victory, America again became a divided nation. It is true that some advantages had been lost, particularly to Russia, in the dealings of wartime power politics; but the most powerful country as its awaited victory lost its potential advantage because it had no idea by which to unite man, much less itself; instead it satisfied itself with the mere expedient of steadfastly opposing Communism without challenging man to change because it had no ideology to live. Like the New Left, the Right is a symptom that America's foreign policy is failing; but neither have an answer.

Typically, Korea is scored as a great defeat of anti-Communism, when victory was denied, allegedly by "United Nations sabotage." General MacArthur is lovingly cited as the commander who felt victory denied. Yet it is forgotten that the General never believed that the Chinese would enter the war and that they were tough fighters.

A film, "The John Birch Society Looks at the United Nations," was shown. Piously declaring that such a subject was too crucial for emotions, the narrator immediately launched into a highly prejudice bender that the UN was a Communist organ, ranging from the utterly frivolous (that the UN seal was designed after the Russian Soviet

By M. Minsky

For a few brief seconds I thought I had been mysteriously transported to an unfortunate Latin-American Republic. I soon became aware I was in the basement of billings center and the Marines were there for the honest recruitment of students. At first I was repulsed by their appearance. Ugly pinkish-white scaly flesh showed through short black stubs of hair; it looked like lots of pepper sprinkled on an egg. Their uniforms, it is true, distinguish them from the mass of non-military citizens, but these marines are only conforming to another mode of behavior. Their cleanliness was also repulsive — anyone who keeps so clean does so only because he feels so dirty. With these marines were two rather long-haired creatures who I learned were women marines.

Always eager to learn I obtained several pamphlets and began gazing at the pictures. The booklet was entitled "The Building of a Marine Officer." The pictures showed marines happily training for various activities. The captions of these pictures were revealing literary gems such as: "Sound Off," nothing can describe the sensation of having men respond to your command. You are the leader. Not one Negro was shown in the pictures. At least five hundred white marines were shown but not one Negro. Forgive me I exaggerated — there is one. He is shown cutting the hair of a new recruit. I suppose he has a really high position in the marine hierarchy as a special hygiene assistant.

The closest picture one gets of war is a series of pictures describing war games. No one gets killed and no one kills. Its all one big happy game among a large group of grown-up children. I hoped they would include that world famous picture of an American Marine demonstrating the greatness of American technology to a group of dumbfounded Vietnamese by burning down their village with his zippo lighter. At any rate it makes urban renewal for these poor people much easier; necessity is the mother of invention. The booklet does little more than make the Marine Corps look like a Walt Disney production.

I certainly don't want this country defended by such a namby-pamby group of men. Perhaps one reason why this nation is doing such a wretched job in Vietnam — a mere 200,000 people have been killed there, at Hiroshima we got a far greater number in one fell swoop — is that the Marines are poorly trained for killing. We have in this country several annoying minority groups. Certainly the Marines could be used to provide an ultimate solution to the poverty problem. After all, if the Vietnamese deserve everything the Americans have because all men are equal, it follows as day the night that the people of America deserve the same thing the Vietnamese have got.

WORLD-WIDE Cynic

VIETNAM

By Terrie Wurzbacher

NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE, New Hampshire — Letter from student to his brother: "It is the very nature of Communism to form a police state and also to be the aggressor. There are many reasons for this, one being that none of the Communist countries are very stable economically. Hence, their leaders must have a cause which is black and white upon which they can blame their own shortcomings. Both Hitler and Mussolini realized this. They both realized that the only way to gain complete support of the people was to give them a solid cause. The entire Cold War is based on this theory.

"A defeat for the Communists somewhere in the world will not only be the defeat of another country, but also a severe setback for Communism itself. America has realized all of this, and so they started out by simply giving aid to South Vietnam. When they discovered that the South Vietnamese could not win the war themselves, they sent American soldiers over to help. The U.S. is now doing all the fighting with the South Vietnamese army working on pacification and support."

CHUNG-ANG UNIVERSITY, Korea — One of the students who visited Vietnam: "The Korean soldiers in Vietnam, under the motto of "with the least sacrifice, make the best effect," are making brilliant war efforts against the Vietcong to claim so many lives with the least sacrifice. The Koreans have been trained in the deadly taekwondo, a self-defense skill, which can easily beat the enemies especially in hand-to-hand combat."

Another student: "Before I was sent to Vietnam, I had a feeling of fear for the guerrilla warfare. But the country was rather calm and safer than I had expected: I was not strange in the country, because I found many Korean soldiers around us."

THE DALHOUSIE GAZETTE — Song of an irate Dal student sounding off on war: "The Napalm's Bright Light" O say, can you see, by the napalm's bright light, Those who proudly we bombed at the twilight's last gleaming— These women and kids are so easy to fight, But we just wish they'd stop their incessant screaming! And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air, Give proof in the night that USAF's still there. O! say, watch those writhing Gooks trying to move, In the compounds we're bombing in order to save.

O! thus was it ever, when white men did land From great troop transport ships in colonial nations! Blest with affluence and might, may our God chosen land Be praised by the Gooks as the heart of creation. For conquer we must, just because we must, And this be our motto, "In God we trust;" And the dark writing people no longer shall move In the compounds we're bombing in order to save. (With apologies to Francis Scott Key)

THIRTEEN CADETS RECEIVE DISTINGUISHED MILITARY STUDENT AWARDS

At the Gutterson Field House last Friday afternoon, thirteen cadets received the Distinguished Military Student Award. Major Michael Peck, Commandant of Cadets, made the presentation of the award, given on the basis of "leadership, high moral character, noteworthy academic achievement, and exceptional aptitude for Military Science." Each cadet, receiving the award may take a Regular Army Commission if he so desires. Those receiving the award included: Francis P. Ambrose of Fairfield, Connecticut; Thomas H. Armbricht of Washington, N.J.; Robert H. Bullard, Jr. of Barre, Vt.; Edward N. Chase of Waterbury, Vt.; Edwin T. Congdon of Clarendon, Vt.; Alan R. Forman of Malden, Mass.; David B. MILITARY BALL QUEEN CANDIDATES TO BE CHOSEN

During the past week, members of the ROTC Brigade have voted from among 36 candidates from girls' dorms, sororities, and living units to select 5 finalists for Military Ball Queen. The finalists selected will attend a tea held Sunday afternoon in the Waterman Lounge, where judges will select the Queen on the basis of poise, grace, and personality. Acting as judges will be Bruce Hewitt, Acting Dean of Men, Mrs. D.R. Longacre, wife of Colonel D.R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science, Mrs. Melvin A. Dyson, wife of the Vice President in charge of Financial Affairs, Mayor Francis Cain of Burlington, and Dr. J.A. Samenink of the Home Economics Department. The girl chosen will reign over the Military Ball to be held the following Friday Evening.

CADET KELLEY RECEIVES CADET OF THE MONTH AWARD

Cadet Michael Kelley, a sophomore from Burlington, received the Cadet of the Month award Friday afternoon at ceremonies held in the Gutterson Memorial Field House. Making the presentation was Major Michael Peck, Jr., Commandant of Cadets. Cadet Kelley had been chosen for the second time for the Cadet Corps as one of the most proficient in drill performance, high classroom achievements, and general knowledge of world affairs. In addition to a citation from the Professor of Military Science and the accompanying ribbon, Cadet Kelley will receive a number of gifts donated by downtown merchants. One more cadet will be chosen in the ensuing month for this award before the Military Review.

NOTICE

All UVM men and their dates. Girls out on dates Saturday, March 18 will be permitted out one half-hour after normal curfew. A catch? Yes there is one. The guy will have to pay 50¢ for the extended time. This is to help to raise funds for the Student Ambassador Program to Japan or India. By WSGA ruling, this has come about. Girls and dates are expected to comply. Here's your chance to buy some time, guys!

UVM Leaders To Attend Conference

Leaders of nearly all student organizations of the University of Vermont will attend the annual Leadership Training Conference, organized by Student Association, Sunday afternoon, March 19, at the Middlebury Inn.

William Pickens, a Vermont Alumnus, and Section Chief with Western Electric Co. Graduate Division, will speak on "Leadership and Group Roles." Also speaking to the conference will be Bruce L. Hewitt, assistant Dean of Men, S.A. President James A. Fontanella, Norwich, Conn.; and Norman T. London, associate professor of speech.

This conference of 80 Vermont students will discuss group leadership techniques, parliamentary procedure, and the role of student activities.

Senior Week Committees

Committees for Senior Week have now been instituted. This does not mean, however, that those of you who are interested in working on Senior Week activities cannot join. If you are interested, please contact the chairmen of each Senior Week committee. Applications are available at the S.A. desk, and should be put in the Class of '67 mailbox.

Following is a list of the Senior Week committees. The first person on each list is the chairman and should be contacted by Friday, March 17th if you are interested in working on a committee:

"Marat/Sade" will probably be known as one of the great films of this decade. It is an important advance of cinema art in two ways. First, it is far superior to any other filmed version of a play; Burton's "Hamlet" is dull and insipid compared to this burst of dramatic energy. The camera is alive; it probes the madmen, picking out an individual face among the crowd, or it shows us the crowd in their frenzied activity unified by the skillful choreography. Occasionally, we see an audience silhouetted against the cage which serves as the stage — a rather simple but effective device of drawing the movie audience into the play.

But more important is the non-linear aspect of the film. Like that pretentious ultra-artsy bore, "The Last Year at Marienbad," "Marat/Sade" does not rely on development of plot; but unlike "Marienbad" it is always exciting with the possible exception of a few brief scenes which consist of dialogue between Marat and the Marquis. Diverse ideas, sensations, and data spill from the screen in a cinematic version of a freak-out. But behind this apparently unorganized film is the rather consistent philosophy of the playwright Peter Weiss.

The philosophic assumption is that there are no really evil men, that the fundamental tragedy of human life is that all men want good but in pursuit of that good they do evil acts. Both Lyndon Johnson and Ho Chi Minh want nothing more than the salvation of a people and perhaps the attendant glories of becoming a popular hero. Marat wants to do good and so there must be a blood-bath. The nobility also wanted to do good to keep order and save the people from violence; to do this they use repression and violence. Charlotte Corday, who kills Marat, sings:

Change which mean something to you I see
Meant something quite different for me.

When Marat dies, first black and then white paint is poured into a bucket; good and evil are the same.

seal) to the unsubstantiated and slanderous (that U Thant and Ralph Bunche are Marxists). Repeatedly, Alger Hiss, a convicted Communist, and instrumental in the founding of the UN, was shown with President Truman and FDR was shown with Stalin. Is this guild by association?

Apparently, the UN is a mammoth conspiracy to subvert the nation through the implementation of total disarmament and thus effect a military takeover. The final plug is in the name of patriotism: "One nation under God or one world under tyranny." Such a blatantly nationalistic and selfish view seemingly precludes any possibility that man could destroy himself or actually solve his problems together. Thus, in the end, the Birchites betray their sense of futility in man.

Apparently the news media is biased against the Patriots, which is essentially what the New Left says. The Society urges others to check their sources; but they themselves blindly subscribe to the views of their own authors, the House Un-American Activities Committee, the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, and J. Edgar Hoover. They score their scapegoats by the familiar tags of "Communist," "Marxist," and "Socialist," which they nowhere define specifically except to appeal to the prejudice of their listeners. In short they accuse others of being biased while refusing to admit to their own bias. They have altered the facts to fit their prejudices rather than formulating theories upon the facts.

In their dogma the John Birch Society views Communism as the apparent root of all evil, and the only logical response is anti-Communism; therefore anyone who opposes them is consequently a Communist. But anti-Communism at its best is a sterile dogma, at its worst it is militant fascism; dent, deception becomes the insidious component of apathy.

Hillel Forum

The Hillel Foundation at the University of Vermont is pleased to announce that it will have Ravi Emanuel Goldsmith as a guest speaker on Sunday evening, March 12th at 8:00. The program will be held at the Hillel House, 389 College Street.

Rabbi Goldsmith is the Executive Vice President of the Jewish Reconstructionist Foundation, Assistant Executive Director of Reconstruction congregations and Fellowships, and Assistant Editor of "The Reconstructionist Magazine." He was ordained at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, and has served in pulpits in London, England, New York City, and Halifax, Canada.

The Reconstructionist Movement, of which Rabbi Goldsmith is a representative, conceives Judaism as a evolving religious civilisation. Religion cannot be separated from the notion of an organic Jewish community, according to this view, and God is considered as a process rather than as a supernatural being. Rabbi Goldsmith will address himself to these and other aspects of Reconstructionist Judaism in his talk. The lecture is open to the public without charge.

neither one of which are capable of challenging man to change, for there is, in truth, little difference between tyrannies of the Left and of the Right. Hitler was the greatest anti-Communist who ever lived; he opposed the system steadfastly and ruthlessly. As a tribute to his efforts, Eastern Europe is Communist today, and Germany is divided. Is this the kind of heritage we as Americans desire to leave in the name of combatting Communism?

Porgy & Bess Impresses

By K. Klonsky

"Porgy and Bess," the re-knowned American "folk opera," is perhaps the single most distinctive and powerful piece of entertainment ever produced in this country. The drama of the Dubose Heyward libretto, the poetic lyrics of Ira Gershwin, and the surging, pulsating musical score by George Gershwin are the essential elements in a work that is going to endear itself to more and more people as time goes on.

RIDES INTO ETERNITY

The story centers around Catfish Row, a shabby tenement district in Charleston. Bess, Porgy, Crown, and Sportin' Life are four temporary members of this transient community. It is their drama that momentarily occupies the forefront of the daily life in Catfish Row. Bess, a woman both intensely animal and spiritual, is torn between Porgy, the good cripple with the unquenchable heart, Crown, the animalistic bully, and Sportin' Life, the cunning skeptic who tempts Bess with his "happy dust" and his money. The fact that each man has an equal sway over her makes Bess a battleground for these three quasi-symbolic human types. When Porgy finally kills the vicious Crown it seems as if he had won his quest. However, Porgy is forced by the police to identify the body and Sportin' Life convinces Bess that Crown's wounds will bleed again and incriminate Porgy as the murderer. Like a buzzard, Sportin' Life has swooped in and successfully lured Bess to come with him to New York. Five days later when Porgy returns from prison a free man, he is dismayed to find that Bess has gone away. But instead of resigning himself to fate, he is determined to follow his woman the thousand miles to New York on a goat cart. Armed with his faith in God and his own vital spirit Porgy rides out of Car-fish Row and into eternity, a triumphant, inspiring procession.

NEGRO EMERGES

But, once again, it is Catfish Row that is the center of "Porgy and Bess." Within those rotting walls, where the uncomprehending white man rarely ventures, is a living, breathing and unique American culture. Catfish Row is where a powerful lust for life ("I ain't got no shame doin' what I like to do") mingles with imposed Christian religious ideals to create a people and a faith unlike any in this country. The Negro emerges from "Porgy and Bess" a beautiful and complex mixture of superstition and humanity who has learned to cope with hardship by "rolling" musically with the punch.

INITIALLY SCORNE

When "Porgy and Bess" opened in Boston in 1935 it was victimized by a shoddy performance and initially scorned by most critics. However, the irresistible beauty of the Gershwin musical masterpiece eventually found companies who understood its essential warmth and pathos. The Red Lane Series production of March 6 was an exceptionally comprehending and radiant "Porgy and Bess." Joyce Bryant, as Bess, gave a towering performance both as singer and actress, surely as fine an interpretation this role has ever been given. Avon Long, lacking a great singing voice, more than made up for that deficiency in his sharp and witty portrayal of Sportin' Life. Levern Hutcherson was a tender and believable Porgy. The entire supporting cast sang the numerous choruses flawlessly and acted well, while the small orchestra played the rich music with zest and feeling. The magnitude of this production cannot be measured in adjectives. Let it suffice to say that "Porgy and Bess" Memorial Auditorium style, is a most distinguished feather in Jack's cap.

Exciting Montoya Coming

By Judy Beeber

Carlos Montoya, the famed master of the flamenco guitar, will be featured on the next Lane Chamber Arts Series on Friday, March 10 at 8:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Montoya was born in Madrid, Spain, where he received his musical instruction starting at the age of eight. He learned first from his mother who played guitar for enjoyment, and then from a barber in Madrid who also taught guitar. At fourteen, he was playing in the "Cuadros Flamencos" for artists such as Antonio de Bilbao, La Macaronna, and La Camisona. He received his real training when the late Antonia Merce came to Madrid looking for a guitarist and chose Montoya. He left his native Spain to tour all of Europe with her for three years.

Before Montoya, flamenco guitarists usually worked with a singer, or dancer. In 1948, Montoya broke with this tradition and decided to give a full concert recital of flamenco guitar music. In this endeavor he was successful and therefore made tours in Europe, the U.S. and Canada giving solo recitals.

One of the most interesting things about these recitals is that Montoya creates as he goes along. All the music he plays are his own arrangements and original compositions based on the Spanish gypsy tradition. In January 1966 he composed the "Suite Flamenca," a suite for guitar and orchestra which had its world premier with the St. Louis Symphony.

CLEVELAND ORCHESTRA

The Cleveland Orchestra, conducted by George Szell will be presented by the Red Lane Series on March 16th, 8:30 P.M., in Memorial Auditorium.

UVM Band Tours State

UVM's band led by Prof. Herbert Schulz begins a busy two-day concert tour on March 20. First stop will be the People's Academy in Morrisville at 10 a.m. At 1 p.m. they will be at Stowe and at 8 p.m. at Island

Pond. Three concerts will be given the next day also, 10 a.m. at Derby, and 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. at Newport. Possibly, the tour will be extended a third day in order for the band to play at a few more distant locations.

After the tour, the band will begin rehearsing in earnest for the Spring Concert. It is scheduled for 8 p.m. on April 16, which is the same day as President Rowell's Inauguration.

FLICKS

FLYNN: Phil Silvers and Jack Guilford in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" - lives up to its name for the most part. Its a wild, carefree, Dionysian spectacle.

STRONG: Jean Paul Belmondo, Kirk Douglas etc. etc. in "Is Paris Burning?" - a great historical story based on an exciting best-seller that just seemed to miss slightly as a movie. However, great camera work inside Paris enhances the film and provides some, but only some, solid entertainment.

STATE: Omar Sharif and Julie Christie in "Doctor Zhivago" - splendid Russian spectacle falls short of the Pasternak novel but still manages to remain an excellent motion picture.

S.A. - Mirage - spy flick, fair to middling.

LANE SERIES EXTENDED

The George Bishop Lane Artists Series of the University of Vermont has joined the Vermont Council on the Arts to establish Lane Extension Concerts at Brattleboro and St. Johnsbury. Jack Trevithick, Lane Executive Secretary, said that "it is expected that this program will be extended to additional communities."

SIMON & GARFUNKEL APPEAR HERE

Simon & Garfunkel were recently hailed as "the fastest-rising popular vocal duo in the land" by Robert Shelton of the New York Times. They well deserve their praise. Their second album, "Parsley, Sage," became a million copy seller in 1966 and their latest, "Parsley, Sage, Rosemary and Thyme," is currently one of the top five long playing albums.

The Vermont Tuberculosis & Health Association presents Simon & Garfunkel as their March concert replacement for Bob Dylan.

Tickets can be purchased at the Association offices, 198 College Street, or at the door for $4.00 apiece.

of five of the players. Mr. T. Comerford as 'Captain Plume handled the hero role with confidence and adroitness, doing much to keep the play together.

As Silvia, the female lead, Betty Smith showed the same vivacity and assurance that made her such a success at the Shakespeare Festival last summer.

Peter Covette showed once again that he is nothing less than first-rate actor. If there was any humor in the play he was largely responsible in his portrayal of Captain Brazen, floating lightly about the stage, handkerchief in hand, an affected chilvarous freak.

Forrest Bowman as Kite, the wily aid to Captain Plumé, delivered his lines with a power and clarity that many of the other player's lacked. Miss L. Wenz was convincing as Lucy, typical maid-in-waiting.

But this production as a whole was a disappointment. Director Richard Thomsen must be faulted for failing to give this play the added life it so badly needed.

"Recruiting Officer" Reviewed

By K. Klonsky

There was definitely something missing in Thursday night's Arena Theatre production of George Farquhar's "The Recruiting Officer."

The play, with its weak plot and lack of lively humor, was an unfortunate choice to begin with. The University Players, despite some excellent individual performances, did very little to add some extra vitality to this boring and humdrum affair.

The play might have been saved had the double entendre humor been spiced with some eccentricity and clowning a la "The Shoemaker's Holiday."

For the most part, talk was at a premium and gesture at a minimum so the audience, fully prepared to laugh, had to wonder why their delight came to no more than an occasional chuckle.

The fact is simply that double entendre humor is not strong enough to stand by itself any more.

The strength of "Shoemaker's Holiday" was in the gay improvisations of its minor character. The weakness of "The Recruiting Officer" was the failure of its minor characters (mob, constable etc.) to go out and have a good time. The company played it too straight, too correctly. The authenticity was there but the fun was not.

The strength of this production lay in the strong performances

Weiss's sympathies seem to be for the masses. Their crude, murderous vulgarity is at least more honest than the civilized, murderous vulgarity of the nobility. The masses take care of their enemies quickly and mercifully with one clean swipe from the guillotine; the aristocracy kills slowly. But any way you look at it they are all murderers. That's what one of the madmen says and then after lamenting the fact he attempts to strangle the director of the asylum. History is determined by passion and not by reason and men may have a passion for any number of things which they call good.

To do justice to the play or the film is an almost impossible task; its diversity and richness as well as its emotional qualities will provoke a great deal of discussion. Peter Brook's direction is outstanding as is the acting of the Royal Shakespeare Company. To comment on the virtues of this fine group of actors would be superfluous. One can only be amazed with the quality of this film.

J.S. Bach's "Passion of Our Lord According to St. Matthew" will be presented by the University of Vermont Choir and Orchestra Sunday, March 19 at 4 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

David McKay William's abridgement of the oratorio will be used by the 50-member orchestra and 53-member main chorus. A 15-member women's chorus will also be used, especially in the complex opening passages which call for nine separate vocal parts.

There will be nine soloists in the performance headed by Roland Patzer, dean of student personnel services at the University, who will be featured in the difficult role of the narrator. Patzer is choir director in Burlington's First Methodist Church and has had wide musical experience in churches and professionally.

The oratorio orchestra will be prepared and directed by James Keene, assistant of music at the University. Francis A. Weinrich, also an assistant professor of music, will prepare and direct the choirs and soloists.

The oratorio, commonly known as the "St. Matthew Passion," is considered by many to be the most beautiful and dramatic of all of Bach's choral works.

WHO'S GOT THE BUTTON?

I'm sure it has not escaped your notice that underlying the adorable whimsy which has made this column such a popular favorite among my wife and my little dog Spot, there is a serious attempt to stay abreast of the problems that beset the American college student.

Many a trip have I made to many a campus—talking to undergraduates, listening to their troubles, hearing their grievances, reading their buttons. (Incidentally, the second and third most popular buttons I saw on my last trip were: "WALLACE BEERY LIVES" and "FLUORIDATE MUSCATEL." The first most popular button was, as we all know, "SCRAP THE SCRAPE" which is worn, as we all know, by Personna Super Stainless Steel Blade users who, as we all know, are proud to proclaim to the world that they have found a blade which gives them luxury shave after luxury shave, which comes both in double-edge style and Injector style, which does indeed scrap the scrape, negate the nick, peel the pull, and oust the ouch, which shaves so closely and quickly and truly and beautifully that my heart leaps to tell of it. (If perhaps you think me too effusive about Personna, I ask you to remember that to me Personna is more than just a razor blade; it is also an employer.)

But I digress. I make frequent trips, as I say, to learn what is currently vexing the American undergraduate. Last week, for example, while visiting a prominent Eastern university (Idaho State) I talked to a number of engineering seniors who posed a serious question. Like all students, they had come to college burning to fill themselves with culture, but, alas, because of all their science requirements, they simply had had no time to take the liberal arts courses their young souls lusted after. "Are we doomed," they asked piteously, "to go through life uncultured?"

I answered with a resounding "No!" I told them the culture they had missed in college, they would pick up after graduation. I explained that today's enlightened corporations are setting up on-the-job liberal arts programs for the newly employed engineering graduate—courses designed to fill his culture gap—for the truly enlightened corporation realizes that the truly cultured employee is the truly valuable employee.

To illustrate, I cited the well-known case of Champert Sigafos of Purdue.

When Champert, having completed his degree in wing nuts and flanges, reported to the enlightened corporation where he had accepted employment, he was not rushed forthwith to a drawing board. He was first installed in the enlightened corporation's training campus. Here he was given a beanie, a room-mate, and a copy of the company rouser, and the enlightened corporation proceeded to fill the gap in his culture.

First he was taught to read, then to print capital letters, then capital and small letters. (There was also an attempt to teach him script, but it was ultimately abandoned.)

From these fundamentals, Champert progressed slowly but steadily through the more complex disciplines. He was diligent, and the corporation was patient, and in the end they were well rewarded, for when Champert finished, he could play a clavier, parse a sentence, and name all the Electors of Bavaria.

Poised and cultured, Champert was promptly placed in an important executive position. I am pleased to report that he served with immense distinction—not, however, for long because three days later he reached retirement age.

Today, still spry, he lives in St. Petersburg, Florida, where he supplements his pension by parsing sentences for tourists.

Here's a sentence that's easy to parse: Subject—"you." Verb—"double." Object—"your shaving comfort when you use Burma-Shave, regular or menthol, along with your Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades."

WAITSFIELD - VERMONT

KITTEN KORNER

By Sandy Luckenbill

It was a quite week in the Kitten's den for the seasons are over and it is time for the baby Catamount to hibernate. There were only 2 teams to see action during the past week. The hockey team which bowed to Northwood Prep School, and a group of Kitten dart players who are trying to form an intercollegiate dart league in Burlington.

On the ice, Northwood traveled here to Burlington, and got their second victory over the Kittens in as many tries. The final score was 11-3, but the score at the end of the second period was 5 to 3. The Kittens were without the services of big defenseman George Kreiner, who appears to hold the key to this team's victories, and Dick Mullany, a good scoring forward. Hitting the net for the Kittens were Bob Krebs, Jim Yeates and John Cussen with one apiece.

On the overall season the Kittens compiled a 2 win and 7 loss record. The only losing freshman squad this year, and a disappointing season for what was to be the new movement in ice hockey at UVM. Bob Krebs would have to get my vote as the team's leading performer as he lead the team in scoring with 9 tallies and was second in assists with 11. Jim Yeates is close behind with 7 goals and with team leading assists of 11. The third man of scholarship with Krebs and Yeates is Kreiner, and when he is healthy no-one is better, but he spent a good part of the season recovering from injuries.

The Kittens scored 40 goals in 9 games giving them a per game average of a little over 4 goals a game. Not enough points for a defense which allowed 68 goals this season, or a per game average of 7 goals. Other than Kreiner the defense is hurting badly and is in need of new personnel. Goalies John Lawrence and Russ Watson were inconsistent, but they both showed they have good potential. It is a tough position to play when there is little support up front.

Moving on the basketball and a winning team, we find Coach Loche looking forward to next season. The Kittens of the court had 11 wins and only 1 loss on the season as they overpowered their opposition with their high scoring and tight defense. This year high scorer was Frank "The Machine" Martiniuk, and he was followed by both Ray Bueh and Roy Greenman. On the defensive end of the court nobody got by Aldo Salari or Bob Hutton, and Sandy Magid came off the bench to take a fair share of the rebounding duties.

The freshman swimming team finished the year with a 5 win and a 2 loss season. The 2 defeats coming at the hands of swimming powerhouses Dartmouth and UConn. The leading Kittens on this squad would have to include Bob Castle and Joe Lovett who constantly finished first in their events. Keep in mind that this squad was hurt badly by first semester marks, and there are alot of first class swimmers, who aren't so smart, waiting in the wings for their grades to improve.

In this week's other major action the newly formed dart league continued its action as San Souci defeated Kory's 4-0. Pete Nolan and Ritch Wardwell lead the winners with 48 and 47 points respectively while Ed Villenaire was high with 15 for the losers. The sport of darts is catching on around campus and competition will soon start against St. Mikes and Champlain.

Hockey:

Kittens Deal

11-3 Pummeling

By Northwood

By Jeff Aronson

Last Saturday night, the Kittens hockey team met Northwood, hoping to prove their 9-8 overtime loss last week was a fluke. But Northwood had the same idea, and with their slick stickhandling, and the Kitten's porous defense, they prevailed 11-3.

The score is deceptive. The first period saw Northwood jump ahead 4-1, but the Kittens played well. Northwood Senior, Bob Moran scored the first of his 5 goals early in the period; his was followed at 8:59 by another, putting Northwood ahead, 2-0. Jim Yeates broke the scoring ice for the Kittens at 4:04. Getting the puck at the blue line, he faked out his defender, and put a beautiful shot past goalie Tom Connors. However, before the period was over, the prolific Moran ran Northwood's score up to 4-1, scoring at 10:33 and 14:09, both times with the Kittens a man short.

The second period saw UVM cut into Northwood's lead. The defense tightened up, and the offense began to press into Northwood's zone. At 8:11, Bob Krebs slipped away from his man in front of the net, and slapped the puck past Connors who was way out of position. Assists went to Jim Yeates and John Cussen. Less than a minute later, Northwood struck back with Jim McAdams scoring on a break away. The Kittens then returned at

Cynic Chooses All-Stars

Recently some of the members of the CYNIC sports staff got together to select a few all-teams as the 1966-67 basketball season nears its end. Our consensus is as follows:

*Bill Librera, 6-3, Vermont
*Joe Roy, 6-3, Norwich
*Bruce Stryhas, 5-11, St. Michael's

* Unanimous Choice

11:58 to score again, and again, it was Jim Yeates, scoring from a face off to the left of the Northwood net. The score at the end of the period was 5-3, and while the lead was not overwhelming, Northwood's play looked like it would become so.

The leaky defense, obviously hurt by the loss of George Kreiner, combined with the tired offense allowed Northwood to go berserk in the final period. The fault is not all goalie Russ Watson's, as 3 of the Northwood goals were scored with UVM a man short.

Northwood, however, controlled the period, and the final score was 11-3.

Yeates, Cussen, and Krebs played very well for the Kittens, as did Bart Frisbie, Walt Kelly, Nick Vlachos and goalie John Lawrence. Northwood's lines, composed mainly of seniors, showed the immense advantages of playing together for years. Despite this loss, the Kittens had a good season, and some of them should be able to replace the key men who are leaving this year's varsity.

UVM Edges UNH, Wildcats, 57-55

Kabat Shines Takes 2 Firsts

By Mike Kropsky

Coach Archie Post's varsity and freshman indoor track teams were both victorious in dual meets this past weekend against the varsity and frosh cindermen from the University of New Hampshire. The varsity meet was a real squeaker with UVM finally edging UNH by a mere two points, 57-55. The meet literally went down to the wire with the decisive margin not being determined until the last three events of the day. In the 55 yard low hurdles UVM had a clean sweep. Rich Kabat came in first with a good time of 6.6 seconds, while Argle Economou and Jim Yendzeski came second and third respectively. After this event UVM had a slim 52-47 lead which it barely held onto in the remaining two events.

Mr. Post seemed very pleased with the team's performance and the win was especially gratifying to him as it was the last dual meet of the current indoor season. Although Coach Post didn't want to take any credit away from his team and make excuses for UNH, he did indicate that the marriage of UNH's top weightman on Saturday (and thus his nonparticipation in the meet) could have been a decisive factor in the outcome of the closely contested meet. Mr. Post said that the young man couldn't have picked a better time to get married. Asked to select an individual standout in the meet for UVM, Mr. Post singled out Rich Kabat. Kabat who had never vaulted 13 feet before Saturday went over the bar at that height and then proceeded to better that effort by six inches. Aside from his first in the pole vault Kabat also won the 55 yard low hurdle event.

In the freshman meet, the UVM Kitten trackmen once again demonstrated their all around strength with a 68-45 win over the UNH frosh. The indoor season ends for the frosh on March 18th as UVM hosts high schools from all over the state in the 4th Annual H.S. Invitational Meet. The varsity ends their indoor track season this Saturday at the Yankee Conference meet to the Yankee Conference meet to be held in Durham, N.H. Coach Post emphasized that the end of the indoor season doesn't mean the beginning of a layoff period before the spring track season begins in about a month. Both the varsity and freshman trackmen will be expected to keep in top condition during the interim between the indoor and outdoor seasons.

Mermen Travel To Storrs

By Bob Bloomenthal

This Saturday at Storrs, Connecticut, nine of the individuals from Vermont's fine 7-2 swim team will represent the school at the New England Swimming Championships. They are sophomores Dave Striker, John Cole, Tom DeVona, John Kinsey, and John Sutphen, juniors John Sinclair and Jim Harrod, and senior co-captains Tom Mills and Pete Gross.

The only teams to defeat the Catamounts this season in dual meet competition were Connecticut and Plattsburgh State while victories were gained over the likes of Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Massachusetts, Union, and Norwich (twice). In summing up his team's performance, coach Les Leggett said, "The season went as well or better than expected. I was both pleased and pleasantly surprised not only in winning as many as we did, but also in the individual performances of the team members."

Two of these members were co-captains Tom Mills and Pete Gross, both seniors. Mills did an excellent job in his specialties, the 50 and 100 yard freestyles. He holds the team records in both events, while his 22.6 time in the 50 yard freestyle also stands as a UVM pool mark.

Gross, who "came through in meet after meet," was exceptionally strong in the individual medley and the butterfly. The team records for both of these events are in Peter's possession. Coach Leggett was very happy with the leadership which both Mills and Gross provided for the team.

Other outstanding individuals from the squad which boasts the best record off all UVM winter sports teams include one junior and five sophomores. Jim Harrod, the junior, is a good example of the depth of the team with his work in the individual medley. Coach Leggett stated, "It was the all-out effort and contribution of each team member which made everything go so well."

The top sophomores were John Sutphen, Dave Striker, Don Campbell, John Cole, and John Kinsey. Sutphen is noted for his distance work and holds team records in the 200, 500, and 1000 yard freestyles. Striker, who attended the same high school as Sutphen, is the mermen's outstanding backstroke and is both the team and pool record-holder of this event.

Cole and Kinsey were the squad's best in the breaststroke, while Campbell, a freestyler, has a very bright future with his potential in the event.

Coach Leggett, a 1951 graduate of Maine, coached football, track, and swimming at Whitman (Ore.) College and at Adrian (Mich.) He joined the Vermont staff in 1962 and was also the football line coach until recently. He has worked hard to make swimming, in only its fourth year of existence at UVM, a winning sport.

Of this year's team he says, "Their success came with the character of the boys. Swimming is a sport which demands supreme dedication and effort in order to achieve success, and these boys had it."

Looking ahead to next year, Leggett will sorely miss the loss of Mills and Gross through graduation. He is, however, looking for good help from this year's freshman team, which was under the capable guidance of Bob Gobin. Coach Leggett is also grateful to Jim Harrod of this year's team who has persuaded his brother Pete, a good swimming prospect, to enter UVM next year.

Carlson Takes Over As UConn Hoop Mentor

STORRS, Conn. — Burr R. Carlson, 39, assistant basketball coach at the University of Connecticut for three seasons, has been promoted to head basketball coach to succeed Fred Shabel who will become an assistant to Athletic Director Jim Hickey at the end of the season.

The appointment was announced by President Homer D. Baddidge Jr., who says Mr. Carlson will continue to teach in the School of Physical Education, in addition to his coaching duties.

In accepting the appointment, Athletic Director Jim Hickey who recommended Carlson stated, "I have made a thorough study of the requirements for this position and have interviewed many people in the process. I feel Coach Carlson is the best qualified."

"I also feel extremely fortunate that a man who is so well acquainted with our program stands ready to carry on in this important position."

Coach Carlson is a graduate of Connecticut (1953) and was a teacher-coach in various state high schools prior to his appointment in May of 1964 as an assistant varsity and freshman basketball coach here.

Prior to that he was head coach of basketball at Bristol Eastern High, from 1959 to 1963, where his teams won 48, lost 30 and qualified for two state tournaments. He also coached soccer there.

A native of Bethel where he went to high school, Carlson served in the Navy two years prior to matriculation at Connecticut where he was All-Yankee Conference basketball center in 1952.

After graduation he served as a teacher in Rockville and this was followed by two years' duty as an Army lieutenant at Ft. Dix, N.J., where he was athletic officers and coached basketball from 1954-56.

A year as a teacher-coach at Rockville followed, and he served two years as cross country coach and assistant basketball coach at William Hall High in West Hartford prior to his appointment at Bristol Eastern.

Carlson is married to the former Carol Dickson of Windsor and the couple has two children, Ricky 11 and Gary 7.

Coach Carlson said, "Connecticut has a rich and successful tradition in basketball, and I have been privileged to take an active part in it as a student, player, alumnus and spectator. I am grateful that I have been given the opportunity to enrich my experience, as a head coach."

the Cats depth at forward with either Bueb or Salati at center. Lapointe, and Martinuk should be pushed by returnees Bob Jacobs and Terry O'Leary. Big Bob Crawford, Paul Shea, Steve Pool and Sandy Magid, all have talent and only the question of desire remains to be answered.

Loche is also interested in obtaining the services of Beep Foster, a freshman who Loche claims could replace Hanna as the defensive specialist.

The Cats of 1967-1968 should have more depth, rebounding and scoring than this year's edition, but, only the most outstanding qualities of this season's squad — desire and hustle — can make them into a winning team.

Rifle Team Finishes Campaign With 6-2 Mark

By David A. Keenan

The Catamount rifle team finished its regular season with a 6-2 record Saturday as it beat the University of New Hampshire rifle team at the UVM Range. Led by Captain Jim Bellino with a 258, the Cats provided depth to their captain, with Bob Walker and Dave Keenan each shooting a 254, Dick Walker a 240, and Bob Cavoretto with a 237. High for UNH were Don Valentine and Jan Herman, each with a 250. UVM finishes the season with wins over Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Nassau (by forfeit) and New Hampshire.

UVM suffered only two losses, one to Maine and one to Norwich. Final averages for the team have yet to be computed, but Sophomore Bob Walker leads the Cats with Captain Jim Bellino close behind, unofficially.

The Cats are not completely finished, however, as the Yankee Conference match is yet to be fired. This match, to decide the YC champion, will be shot on March 18 at Durham, New Hampshire. The pressure will be on, but UVM should place well in this, the last match for seniors Dick Walker and Steve Curland.

Cats Lose On Disputed Goal

Catamount Nine Preps For Southern Tour

By Fred Schlapp

The game with Middlebury saw the Cats absorb a 10-2 pummeling. The Cats must have wished that Stu Dunn had never returned from his overseas study program, as the smooth skating junior racked up a total of 5 points, 3 goals and 2 assists, against them.

The first period saw Middlebury take charge quickly, but a good display of hustle and fine saves by John Hynes kept the Cats close. Dunn scored the first Middlebury goal at 14:04, Symonds and Doherty assisting. The tally was a power play goal that came after Catron had been sent off for charging the goalie. Two minutes later, Pete Kirkpatrick took a pass from St. Louis and beat Hynes from point-blank range. At this point, it looked like the first period would end with the score 2-0 in favor of Middlebury. But Captain Chip Uihlein alertly picked up a Roy rebound, burst through the defense and scored with 31 seconds remaining in the period. Roy and Schroeder picked up the assists in this goal. The assist was Roy's thirty-second point of the season and added to his already record scoring pace.

The second period saw a complete reversal of form, as the Cats made many mistakes and the Panther capitalized on them. Middlebury struck early with Kirkpatrick picking up his second goal of the night after he stole a pass from the UVM defense and went in alone on Hynes. Less than three minutes later, Dunn, who has led the Panthers to seven wins in their last eight games, including a 3-1 upset of Division I power Northeastern, scored his second goal of the night with a beautiful assist from Symonds. Later in the period, Ex-Deerfield Academy star Carter Jahnke amazed the crowd with an eighty-foot slap shot that found the upper right-hand corner. Two more goals within the space of forty seconds saw Middlebury take a comfortable 7-1 advantage to the dressing room.

UVM started the third period like they were going to make a game of it as Semler scored his sixteenth goal of the season at 1:27, with assists from Uihlein and Schroeder. However, the smooth skating Panthers had too much talent for the undermanned Cats and goals by Jahnke, Dunn and Doherty upped the final score to 10-2.

Having absorbed a second thumping from Middlebury, the Cats then traveled to Norwich where in all probability, they figured to get more of the same. Norwich was the top team in Division II, and sporting a 13-2 record in their play. The Cats, however, paid no heed to the Norwich record, and it was evident from the outset that he had come to play. With 3:39 gone in the first period, Semler notched his seventeenth goal of the season, to put the Cats ahead 1-0. Norwich, however, was not about to roll over and play dead. Spurred on by their fantastic little center, Roger Guillemette, the Cadets tied it up at the 7:00 mark; when Gallerani collected an errant Jim Brock pass and scored from close in. The Cadets wasted no time in showing why they held the number 1 spot in Division II, as they scored 27 seconds later to move ahead 2-1. Gallerani collected his second goal of the night as he tipped in defenseman Bruce Beany's blue-line slap shot. Norwich then left the ice with a 2-1 advantage.

The second period saw Norwich continue to press, but Vermont stayed right with them. Half-way through the period, after Norwich's Kearns was sent off for tripping, Roy scored his seventeenth goal of the year, with Semler assisting. This goal seemed to spark the Cats, as they took the play away from Norwich and dominated the remainder of the period.

Vermont started the third period quickly and just missed a couple of glittering scoring opportunities. Norwich, on the other hand, looked sloppy as their passes missed the mark, and at times had trouble getting out their own zone. The see-saw battle continued scoreless until the buzzer brought regulation play to an end.

The teams now faced-off for a ten minute sudden death overtime period. With forty-six seconds gone, the Cadets scored their cheapest goal of the season. Guillemette shot after taking a pass from Gallerani and Hynes stopped the puck right on the goal line. But this should not have been a goal, as the puck must pass completely over the line. Unfortunately, for the Cats, a Norwich cadet was functioning as a goal judge, and in his eagerness to give his team the victory, flashed the red light. Obviously intimidated by a highly partisan Norwich crowd, the referees awarded the Cadets the goal, and thus the Cats were forced the end the season on a losing note.

Special mention should be given to seniors Chip Uihlein, Paul Dorsey, and Dick Squire who all turned out outstanding performances in the final game of their college careers. Other who played well were defensemen Bob Schroeder and wing Eddie Danks, as their hustle and fine play kept Vermont in the game.

Last spring the UVM baseball team was 11-6 overall, and the team lost but one player. This year the team seems to think they can take all the marbles. Why? Take a gander at the roster.

Pitching will be the backbone to the team and here is the reason why: the Yankee Conference earned Run Average leader Bruce Bovenizer will be returning. He sported a 3-1 record and allowed just 1 run every 9 innings. John McCord, who had a 1.28 E.R.A., which placed him third in the league, was the mainstay of the staff with a 6-2 record. He is returning. Len Sheflott, who in his sophomore season was rated as the best pitcher to hit UVM since Jack Lamabe, was hampered by arm trouble last year but still allowed just over 2 runs a game. John Packard is probably the fastest of all of the pitchers on the staff and when not playing first base last year, came in to relieve. The four of these players will comprise the nucleus of a pitching staff that probably will be one of the best in the country. They are backed up by 3 sophomores. Terry O'Leary has been called the best looking southpaw to pitch for UVM in a long time. Mac Adams and Charlie Brucato will see a lot of action also.

The outfield has more depth than it has had in several years. Don Fitts will patrol the left pasture. He was one of the leading batters as a sophomore last year. Coach Lapointe is expecting a tremendous season from him this year and says he already has a big league arm. He tied with Dave Wayne to lead the team in R.B.I.'s last year with 12 and batted .262. Last year Dave Wayne had centerfield under control, but, this year he seems to have a problem. He is behind the rest of the team because of his Kake Walking exploits and cannot seem to break the habit of Kake Walking after fly balls. Regardless of his handicap, he is still probably the best outfielder on the team and if he can catch up will start there. He was All-League last year in his first year playing college baseball after switching over from football. Right field was anchored mostly by Brad Stevens last year who did a good job, but, he will be pushed by Dave Lucaroni who has been away from the sport for a few years also. Luke, a starting tackle on the football team, is so strong that he not only swings the bat like a toothpick, but, when he connects, sends the ball into orbit.

Coming in to the infield, at first base Packard will probably play there while not pitching, and if Lucaroni is not playing right field, he may fill in for John. Terry O'Leary is being considered here, as in the outfield also. Packard batted a respectable .260 last year as a sophomore. Great things are expected of him as clarified by the fact that he was offered a bonus of $75,000 by San Francisco when he was in high school.

Second base was secure with Bruce Lombard last year, but, he will be pushed by sophomore Steve Kunkin.

Dave Lapointe seems to have shortstop in healthy hands for the next 3 years although Fuzzy Evans has threatened Ralph that he will bring up his son who will beat him out.

The hot corner is secure with Bill Leete. Bill laid off for 3 years, then last year went out and won the third base job and was the third leading batter on the team. Now with a year experience, he is smoother and better than ever. He may also be put in the outfield.

Catching is one of the strongest positions on the team. Captain Rick Aldrich is starting his third campaign and has been labeled by Coach Lapointe as "a fine leader." He is backed by Bob Nield who is an excellent catcher in his own right. Joe Soldano was an outstanding baseball player in high school, but, laid off the sport for 4 years and will require a lot of work to get back on the ball. However, he has been working hard and being the great athlete he is, will make his contribution. He may be tried in the outfield and as a pinch hitter.

Overall, hitting is the weak point, but, pitching and fielding will more than compensate for this, in which UVM finished 5th and 6th nationally last year, respectively. The players are really skying and their attitude is great. You might say the word is optimism.

Cats End On Winning Note

By Ted Ryan

The 1966-1967 University of Vermont basketball season ended in a winning and exciting fashion with one and two-point victories over state rival Middlebury and Norwich but Coach Art Loche is already looking towards next season.

Loche, who coached Vermont to a 12-8 record in his freshman year, could offer only words of praise for his two seniors, Bruce Hanna and Rusty Boardman. Another player, big Alden Hale, was listed as a junior at the season's start but he too will graduate.

Boardman was not noted for his offensive value but he turned in remarkable defensive performances. Lacking a great deal of natural talent, he nevertheless proved to be a fierce competitor. Through sheer desire and work, Boardman became one of the most improved players on the Vermont team this year.

Still, Rusty finally found the soft scoring touch in the final few games when he hit for double digits several times. But Boardman's forte was defense and rebounding. Among his best defensive performances were fine evenings against St. Michael's great Dick Falkenbush and Billy Tindall of Massachusetts.

Captain Hanna also had plenty of desire, hustle and defensive ability. For Bruce the season was just a matter of scoring that first basket. He worked hard on developing his shooting skill. Finally the long hours proved worthwhile when Bruce dumped Middlebury in the final seconds with a three-point play.

Hanna was the defensive specialist of the team. He stopped Paul Stukowski of Norwich and Dave Vanier of Middlebury. Like Boardman, Bruce acquired a scoring touch in the final few games.

Overall the season was a disappointing one to Loche. A murderous schedule of numerous away games in the first few weeks and the loss of sophomore sensation Dave Lapointe early for a few games kept the team unsettled. Still, Vermont threw scares into several Yankee Conference contenders before falling.

As in years past, UVM still lacked the big man. Boardman and Hale were the tall men at 6-5 but, opponents often had taller counterparts. With Lapointe sidelined, Bill Librera was expected to pick up the scoring slack. The talented junior tried but simply couldn't handle the load. Don Katz, who improved steadily, showed flares of scoring and defensive ability, and always pushed himself.

The problem of the big man may be solved next year in 6-7 Aldo Salati and 6-6 Ray Bueb, a pair of freshmen who are expected to start next season. Loche will be asking a lot from these two and phenomenal scoring ace Frank Martinuk next season.

A speculative starting lineup for next season would consist of these three plus Librera and Lapointe. But, Loche readily points out that the battle for all positions, except Lapointe's, will be hotly contested.

Katz, Librera, Bueb, Bob Hutton and Roy Greenman will give

Vermont Conference '67 to Discuss Justice in America

"...And Justice For All" will be the title of discussion this Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the University of Vermont, as the Vermont Conference Committee presents its annual campus-wide seminar for 1967.

Taking its name from the Pledge of Allegiance, the topic draws three well known and respected leaders in the legal, social, and economic world. The Conference program begins 7:30 p.m. Tuesday evening at the Ira Allen Chapel with a discussion of "Criminals and the Constitution." Speaking will be Sterry Waterman, senior Judge on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Judge Waterman, a resident of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, is a graduate of Dartmouth College and attended the Harvard and George Washington Law Schools.

JUDGE STERRY R. WATERMAN

"...the United States Supreme Court in my judgement is meeting the demands of our society and has taken an enlightened position toward the administration of criminal justice. Much of the excitement that has been engendered by recent decisions of that Court in the criminal justice field is misguided, and many of those commenting thereon are apparently misinformed." He received an honorary LLD from Dartmouth in 1963. Appointed to the 2d Circuit by President Eisenhower, Waterman has been serving in that capacity since 1955.

Speaking Wednesday night at the Chapel will be social critic Michael Harrington. Harrington, born in 1928, was educated at Holy Cross College, Yale University Law School, and the University of Chicago, where he received an M.A. in English literature. He is past editor of the "Catholic Worker" and the "New America," a Socialist party bi-weekly. Since 1960, he has been a member of the national executive committee of the Socialist Party, and in 1963 received both the George Polk and Sidney Hillman awards. Known best for his explosive documentary, "The Other America: Poverty in the United States," in which he explored the life of the impoverished in this land of plenty, Harrington is also the author of "The Accidental Century," and "The Netall Clerks."

His topic, "Liberty and Equality," is best summarized from a letter sent to Vermont Conference Chairman Joseph Badgewick: "Justice in the United States discriminates against the poor and in favor of the rich. Recent Supreme Court decisions have addressed themselves to some of the most outrageous procedural aspects of the problem, but the enormous inequality is still a powerful element in promoting inequality before the law. In fact, full political democracy will require both economic and social democracy."

Closing the Conference on Thursday evening will be Mr. Randolph Blackwell, presently the Director of the Southern Rural Action Project, an anti-poverty program. The former program director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Blackwell is a product of American negro education. He holds a B.S. degree in Sociology from North Carolina A & T College, an LLB from Washington's Howard University, and did post graduate work in economics at Syracuse. Born in North Carolina in 1927, Blackwell has also taught Economics at Alabama A & M College and Winston-Salem Teachers College in his home state.

While director of Program for the SCLC, Blackwell was responsible for molding that organization's various departments into a coordinated and persuasive, non-violent approach to civil rights problem. He has chosen as his topic discussion, "Vision and Design."

Following each of the presentations in the Chapel will be a question-and-answer session in the Waterman Cafeteria. In previous years, these discussions have extended beyond curfew and have been carried on for days at a time.

The Conference Committee will sponsor a coffee hour in Billings Center Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 to allow UVM students to meet and discuss with the speakers.

RANDOLPH BLACKWELL

Members of the panel following the presentations include Associate Psychology Professor James P. Chaplin; Edwin H. Pfuhl, Associate Professor of Sociology; and Mr. Harry Levins, UVM graduate of 1963, and political reporter and editorial page writer for the Rutland Herald.

Chairman of Vermont Conference for 1967 is Senior Joseph Badgewick of Rutland, Vermont. Badgewick, a Deans List student majoring in History. The plans to attend Georgetown Law School in the fall, serves as Vice President of the Student Court.

Dean Patzer also pointed out, "is that they require citizens or institutions having knowledge of violation of drug laws to report violations."

Dean Patzer also called attention to current medical opinion regarding "major substances used for mind alteration."

Fontanella Elected SA President

The elections for the new members of S.A. were held Friday, March 10th.

James A. Fontanella, '68, was elected the new president of S.A. He is in the College of Technology. Among other things he was president of S.A. this year, is treasurer of Sigma Phi and a member of Key and Serpent.

Janet F. Roser, '68, also in Technology, is 1st Vice President. She was past Treasurer of A.S. and is a member of Staff and Sandel.

Mary Moninger, '69, in Home Economics, is the 2nd Vice President. Mary is a Kappa Alpha Theta and member of Sophomore Aides.

Patricia J. Stankevich, '68, elected Recording Secretary, is active in Kappa Alpha Theta and was on S.A. Senate.

Valerie Van Houten, '69, in the College of Home Economics, is Corresponding Secretary. She is a member of Sophomore Aides this year.

Robert M. Williams, '69, is Treasurer. He was an S.A. Representative and is Treasurer of Intercollegiate Council.

John E. Cornish, '68, and Pam Marvinney, '69, are the Sub-Treasurers. John is an active brother of Sigma Phi Epsilon and Pam is a Home Economics major and member of Sophomore Aides.

Jack Stroker, '69, Frank R.A. Resnick, '69, and Robert Jerard, '69, (alternate), are the members of the Student Court.

Instructor's Dismissal Attacked

ROTC Holds Military Ball Tonight

Tonight, the ROTC Brigade of the University of Vermont will hold its 99th Annual Military Ball at the Hotel Vermont, co-sponsored by Ethan Allen Rifles and Pershing Rifles. As in the past, some 36 girls representing the sororities and women's residence halls on campus competed for the honor of being Military Ball Queen. After 3 days of balloting by each of 520 ROTC Cadets, the five finalists were chosen. They are Miss Judy Bamman, a sophomore from Westport, Conn.; Miss Nancy Bathgate, a sophomore from Springfield; Miss Betty Purda, a junior from Brattleboro; Miss Barbara Schmitt, a freshman from Rockville Center, L.I.; and Miss Joyce Westcott, a sophomore from Boston, Mass.

The girls continue to be honored at major formations of the brigade throughout the year including the Annual Military Review to be held this year in April.

The judges were Mrs. David R. Longacre, wife of the Professor of Military Science, Mrs. Melvin A. Dyson, wife of Vice President Melvin A. Dyson; Acting Dean of Men Bruce L. Hewitt, and Dr. Samenink of the Home Economics Department.

Since it is traditional that the Queen not learn of her selection until the very moment of her coronation tonight, this information has been the most closely guarded secret on campus for the last week.

Drug Policy Announced by Patzer

Prompted in the disclosure of the illegal use of drugs on this campus, Roland D. Patzer, Dean of Student Personnel Services, today, in an official statement of University policy declared:

"Use of such substances which violate law of the University's code which asks each student to maintain high standards of personal conduct and social responsibility, both on and off campus, will be subject to such disciplinary action as shall be deemed appropriate after any case has been considered on its merits."

Dean Patzer also said the University encourages each student to inform himself about drugs, "and the problems that their use represents, from sources as authoritative as possible."

The dean suggested such sources might be the Testing and Counseling Center, the University Health Service, the Dean of Men and Women, or personal physicians.

"We believe that this kind of self education will greatly minimize use or abuse of any and all substances used for mind alteration," the statement continued.

Dean Patzer also outlined the legal issue involving the use of drugs. "Laws governing control of drugs are complicated," he said, "but basically may be summed up as follows:

"In general, it is a violation of federal law to acquire, possess, sell or transmit any drug except as it may be acquired or possessed in accordance with laws governing sale, possession and distribution of drugs. Most states, counties and communities have laws or enforcement policies supporting federal laws."

"One aspect of these laws," Dean Patzer also pointed out, "is that they require citizens or institutions having knowledge of violation of drug laws to report violations."

Dean Patzer also called attention to current medical opinion regarding "major substances used for mind alteration."

DRUG POLICY (Cont'd from Col. 4)

According to the dean, Dr. Joel Fort, director of the Center for Special Problems San Francisco Health Department, "rates sedatives (including alcohol) as having a high potential for psychological dependence and high overall potential for abuse."

"Stimulants, including nicotine, the amphetamines (pep pills, etc.), "Dr. Fort also rated "high for potential psychological dependence and abuse; tranquilizers are rated minimal on both counts; marijuana moderate on both; narcotics high on both counts; LSD and mescaline are given minimal in both categories."

"It is always dangerous to generalize," Dean Patzer said, "yet it would seem safe to suggest that the majority of medical opinion would weigh heavily against use of drugs except as prescribed for medical use or for use under approved and carefully controlled experimental purposes."

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Office

Your first job is to get a job. Your next job is to learn your job. The new entrant to business must expect to serve something of an apprenticeship and to continue training in order to augment his value to the employer. The person who is willing to do that will find that opportunity today, while unlike that of yesterday, is as abundant as it ever was. If you plunge wholeheartedly into the business of learning all you can about your job, the reward, not only in advancement, but in job satisfaction will greatly repay your efforts. It is the idler who is discontented, not the person who tackles his job the hard way.

The woman graduate, who is hired as a secretary, looks around at other jobs. If she has any sense, to see what the women holding them have that she lacks, and to figure out what she must do to fit herself for a better position. Go to almost any employer today and you will find people who, after working all day, go to school at night, taking courses to help them in their job. In most instances, employers encourage this program by refunding at least part of the cost. It is as important to the employer to have trained people whom they can advance as it is to the person to be trained so he can advance.

A vast majority of job seekers complain that they run into a vicious circle: "No experience - no job; no job - no experience." They demand to know what they are to do about it. The error here is that the untrained applicants have applied for jobs which require experience. In other words, they have been seeking a job blindly. Every organization has starting assignments which do not require any specialized training or experience, and the untrained candidate should apply for these.

Training is essential for advancement and it is available today to a greater extent than ever before. Yet the fact still remains that not one person in a hundred makes use of this method of increasing his value to an employer. The day frequently comes when the employee has an opportunity for real advancement and is unable to grasp it due to insufficient education. No where is there a greater need for improved training and education than in the application of man's most constantly used and most frequently misused tool-words. The number of people who can use either the written or the spoken word adequately is shockingly small.

YOU CAN GO ONLY SO FAR DOWN THE ROAD YOU CHOOSE TO GO AS YOU CAN PERSUADE OTHER PEOPLE TO ACCEPT YOUR IDEAS. Your most effective method of persuasion consists of words. If you are to reach a position of any importance at all you will have to express yourself in writing. Letters and reports will be one of your chief methods of conveying your ideas. If you cannot express them clearly you are lost.

The same thing applies to the spoken word. It is my personal conviction that a course in public speaking should be compulsory for every college student. It not only gives a man an incomparable advantage by making him more at ease and giving him greater confidence in himself, it increases his ability to express his ideas and to impress them on others.

Every day in the week some man puts over an idea in a business conference, although everyone present may have disagreed with him when he started to speak. Why? For the simple reason that he can present his ideas clearly and forcefully. Men constantly fail to carry their point because they cannot marshal their thoughts. They hem and haw, they wander from the point or leave it out altogether; they bog down in confusion.

Promotion does not come by accident; it comes by preparation, and preparation in business means training. Two weeks after you are employed, few will know or care where you went to college. It is not what you have learned but, whether you can make use of what you have learned that interests your employer.

To sum up, training and continuous preparation are the answer to that cry, "Give us the skill!" The opportunity to acquire it is given you; but you must acquire the skill by yourself. Time is the most valuable possession you will ever have and your future depends to a large extent on the way you make use of the time at your disposal. This realization, hopefully, you will have already discovered during your stay here at UVM.

Women's Dress Standards Questioned

By Sue Winters

Girls, are you one of the few who have been asked to leave the dining halls at 5:30 on a Friday night because of improper dress? Were you infuriated because you had to change your clothes before you could eat (and were not allowed back in because it was past 6 o'clock before you got changed)? And then to make it worse, did you have to go back upstairs and change again for a Friday night date? Were you upset? Do you wonder what you can do about it?

You have two alternatives. You may forget about the bother and try to be there on time and properly dressed (no slacks, shorts, etc.).

There has been some confusion as to who set the dress standards for Friday night dinner (since it is not in the WSGA handbook) and whether or not it is actually a strict regulation. A CYNIC reporter, in an interview with Dean Gribbons, learned exactly what the policy was and how it came about.

First of all, the dress standards is almost as old as the University. However, when our new Dean of Women came here in the fall, she went about issuing the policy with greatest regard for the opinion of the women students.

A rough draft was made of the policy, based on last year's policy, and then it was submitted to WSGA for criticism in the form of approval, disapproval or revision. At this time, the policy was revised by WSGA, with even more standards added! The policy as handed to the women students last fall, was then wholeheartedly approved by the WSGA - which represents you!

And, although it is not written in the WSGA handbook as such, the policy is expected to be maintained and any girl can legitimately be asked to leave the dining hall (or for that matter, any class or the library) for not adhering to the dress standard.

The second alternative is to revise the policy, allowing slacks in the dining hall on Friday night. This could easily be done by going through WSGA channels, if there is a strong desire on the part of a considerable number of girls to do so.

It all boils down to this decision: Do you want to abide by the policy set by the women students themselves, in an "acceptance of the responsibility to govern oneself" (WSGA handbook) or do you want to change this policy?

The CYNIC would be interested in any opinions on this matter. Please feel free to voice any grievances you have - if you don't voice them - don't have them.

IFC SECOND RUSH OPENED MARCH 6

Monday, March 6 was the official commencement of second rush. All those who did not go Greek and have an interest in the fraternity systems are urged to participate in the upcoming somers.

All sixteen houses are looking for potential pledges and welcome anyone who wants to visit them. Open bidding, as in previous years, will be in effect. GO GREEK!

Lieu of Taxes Proposed by UVM Attorney

The University has 73 rental units at Ethan Allen in the Town of Essex, 29 in the Town of Colchester.

Both towns have billed the University for taxes on the property, on the grounds that faculty-staff occupancy of the former Air Force officers houses creates cost to the town not shared by the occupants of the units.

Vermont's attorney general advised the University that as a public institution of higher learning, it could not pay taxes. He did not rule out a payment in lieu of taxes, however, and UVM's Trustees named Vice President Lyman S. Rowell, Melvin A. Dyson and Burlington attorney and UVM Trustee Leon Latham, to seek to negotiate a payment in lieu of taxes with both towns.

dent of the Student Law Association, and is a member of the History Honor Society. In discussing this year's topic, Badgewick stated that "although Vermont Conference is limited in both budget and membership, we attempt to bring to the campus an intellectual offering each year to stimulate student curiosity and present an issue of deep importance at a time in which it is important and by the people who have helped to make it important."

The Vermont Conference Committee invites the students of UVM, their faculty, and all interested citizens of Greater Burlington to three evenings of mental stimulation.

INSTRUCTOR'S DISMISSAL

Student apathy, at least among Mr. Eurich's students, seems to have disintegrated enough to permit the circulation of a petition asking that the administration review its decision (see this week's Letters to the Editor section).

Dr. James F. White, Chairman of the department, said that the termination of Mr. Eurich's teaching career here is a "...critically clear case. In accordance with UVM rules, he has not made significant progress, after four years, towards his Ph.D. and thus cannot be recommended for promotion." After four years an instructor must either be promoted or his his appointment terminated. This decision is made by the specific department head. Dr. White also said that he feels Mr. Eurich is a good teacher and his students' support is a great credit to him.

Mr. Eurich's only comment was that he has been here for four years, and that the letter in this issue of the CYNIC is true, except he has initiated study for his Ph.D.

Jay Roth, Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC, said, "This is a question of what is more valuable to the student body: the hiring of a new and inexperienced instructor or the retention of one who has proved himself to be a good teacher. The matter of tenure deserves further investigation. The CYNIC plans to run a series of articles on tenure in general, as well as a follow-up of this particular case."

Ethan Allen Rifles Initiates Members

The Ethan Allen Rifles, Honorary Military Society at UVM, has added seven new members to its ranks. During initiation ceremonies held in the Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building on March 7, Colonel D.R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science, spoke briefly on the qualities of leadership essential in the activities of the Society, then presented each of the new members with their certificate of membership and copy of the E.A.R. constitution.

Major Michael Peck, Jr., Faculty Advisor, presented the traditional gold braid. Those inducted include Samuel Bain of St. Johnsbury, Walter Cooper of Gales Ferry, Conn., James Fontanella of Norwich, Conn., Vernon Kellogg of Stratford, Conn., William Krebs of Potsdam, N.Y., James Mitchell of Greensburg, Pa., and David Shumate of St. Johnsbury.

Wages range to $400 a month, and in most cases neither previous experience nor knowledge of a foreign language is required. ASIS, in its ninth year of operation, will place more American students in summer jobs in Europe this summer than ever before.

Students interested in working in Europe next summer may write directly to Dept. Threats of War Spur Search for Meaning

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

The Korean people, like people everywhere, are searching for meanings for their lives. In Korea, where the experiences of war and the threat of war are very real, the search seems more urgent. In North Korea, the Communist regime is imposing more and more rigid thought control in order to "mold the new Communist personality," according to the words of Marshall Kim Il-sung. In the south the search is in a relatively free atmosphere and interesting to observe.

Traditionally, the Koreans have been worshippers of natural objects; they have had beliefs in spirits; some of good, but more often of evil effect. To exercise these spirits, women sorcerers, mudangs, who can work themselves into a trance, are called upon. Usually their tables for food offerings to the spirits and for incantation are set up in the courtyards of the farm homes. One night while driving on a side street in Seoul when the temperature was well below freezing, our headlights picked out the sight of a mudang with her client kneeling at the edge of the street - the only available space in the crowded city. Nature and spirit worship in Korea is unorganized. It may pervade the background thinking of most Koreans, but offers little moral guidance and solace in their search for meanings.

Organized religions claim the adherence of only a fraction of the Korean population. This table from a government report gives the numbers in 1965:

Total Population	28,377,000
Total Religious Adherents	3,573,412
Buddhism	963,572
Protestant Christianity	811,915
Roman Catholicism	755,544
Chondo-Kyo	623,397
Tong do-Kyo	115,810
Other Religions	303,174

Chondo-Kyo and Tongdo-Kyo are native Korean religions that are reactions to Christianity in that they emphasize "Eastern learning."

Buddhism was introduced into Korea more than fifteen hundred years ago. During the Golden Age of Silla, the kingdom which unified Korea in 668, it became firmly established as the state religion. At Kyongju, in southeastern Korea, we visited some of the remarkable temples which are still in existence from that period. The massiveness of the Tongguk temple, especially the pagodas and entrance stairways, are impressive. The stones are all fitted together without mortar. Nearby, isolated in the mountains that look out over the Sea of Japan, is the temple of Sokkuram. Here in the natural rock of a cave are carved a series of bas-relief statues to encircle the central figure of Buddha whose peaceful, contemplative countenance is awe-inspiring.

Another interesting center is Hae-in-sa where some twenty temples are clustered in a thickly wooded mountain valley. I reached here (continued on page ten)

Study Shows Better Way to Construct Exams

Madison, Wis. - (I. P.) - A good way for teachers to encourage students to review for exams is to have them submit questions which might appear on the exam. That's the conclusion reached by a University of Wisconsin psychology professor who has analyzed the difference between student and teacher-constructed exams.

"Student participation in the construction of a multiple-choice exam results in better test performance," Prof. Albert R. Marston has found, "although the average grades of participants are only slightly higher than those of non-participating students."

The results? Student and teacher-constructed exams were equally difficult; yet students who helped write the exam did better than did those who had not prepared test questions.

ASIS Offers Jobs in Europe

Grand Duchy of Luxembourg - Every student in America can get a summer job in Europe and a travel grant by applying directly to the European headquarters of the American Student Information Service in Luxembourg. Jobs are much the same as student summer work in the U.S. with employers offering work periods ranging from three weeks to permanent employment.

Lifeguarding, office work, resort-hotel jobs, factory, construction, camp counseling and farm work are only a few categories to be found among the 15,000 jobs ASIS still has on file. An interesting summer pastime not found in America is tutoring. Numerous well-to-do European families are inviting American college students to spend the summer with them and teach their children English.

EDITORIAL VERMONT CONFERENCE

Vermont Conference, perhaps the only campus-wide intellectual event of the year, begins Tuesday evening. It would behoove all students to attend all three evenings of discussion.

The Conference Committee brings to UVM three distinguished gentlemen of national prominence - social critic Michael Harrington, civil rights leader Randolph Blackwell, and Judge Sterry Waterman of the Court of Appeals.

The principles of the Vermont Conference are singular. The committee strives to bring an issue of import before the student body at a time when the issue is burning bright throughout the nation.

It has brought such individuals as Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, James Farmer of CORE, Jules Feiffer, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Thurmond Arnold, and scientist George Wald, just to name a few.

Last year, the Committee offered the question "Is God Dead?" with three of the most vocal and respected advocates in the nation.

The speakers will be visiting and lecturing to various classes during the week as well as participating on local radio and television programs.

Judge Waterman ranks among the select few judicial leaders in the nation and serves as an officer in many social and civic programs. Mr. Harrington is one of the country's most ardent critics of the vast differences of social and political affluence in the population; one of his works, "Poverty in America," has been published in no fewer than eight foreign countries, and has been used extensively as a major source of assignments on the UVM campus. Randolph Blackwell has worked with Martin Luther King in the SCLC and is now on leave from the organization to lead a field drive to eliminate poverty and discrimination in the South.

In less than seven days, the President, a specially appointed Presidential Commission, and members of Congress from both parties have pointed to the obvious inequality in the draft laws, indicating one major reason for inequality is affluence. Many others, on the other hand, have argued that poverty and ignorance in the United States is merely minimal and overplayed by social critics.

This is an opportunity for all the members of the student body to view a discussion of national significance.

The CYNIC urges all of UVM to attend Vermont Conference to decide, on an individual basis, whether or not this nation provides both freedom "...and liberty for all."

BITTERNESS

Many comments have been made in the past about the "bitterness" of CYNIC editorials. This "bitterness" comes quickly to the new staff.

The Vermont CYNIC was given an exclusive story last week. The entire housing policy statement was released by The Burlington Free Press before it was ever printed in the Vermont CYNIC.

A university paper should be the first to announce university news. Once the paper is by-passed for another organization, it no longer has a purpose, unless that is the exploitation of stale news.

It is for this reason that the paper should be the voice of the University. We suggest, if this policy continues, you subtract $4.00 from your student activities fee and but a subscription to the Free Press.

At this point, we will become the official student supplement to The Burlington Free Press and will best relay the news to you which we too have read in that paper. If this practice is continued the CYNIC will be forced to adopt the motto: "We print all the news that The Burlington Free Press thinks is fit to print."

Ed. Note: There will be a series of articles on the University statement on narcotics.

SUBJECTIVE ARTICLES FOUND MEANINGLESS

To The Editor:

Allow me to offer a criticism of your article which appeared in the CYNIC issue of March 10, 1967.

I submit that you have failed miserably to offer any support for the contention of your article. You stated that you "briefly wanted to show how the administration has effectively initiated and encouraged the deadening disinterest which is 'flushing' this university to an unsanitary end."

With a statement like this, the most important thing to be proved is that there is a deadening disinterest or that the University (and I have the respect to capitalize the word) is, as an educational institution, going downhill. You have not done this, and in the process you have placed your article, along with many others, in the category of healthy student writing supported by blatant student ignorance.

There is no proof which may be found to support your contention. If you were to ask a randomly cross-section of the student body their opinions on these matters, instead of only regurgitating the sewage disposal plant brand of propaganda fed to you by one, two, or at the most five, Berkeley waiting - list hopefuls, I'm sure that you would find a very stable attitude of acceptance toward major University policies.

You see, my fellow student, I am all for questioning the validity or utility of any rule or social restriction which the University might be preaching, but I am sick and tired of all the senseless quibbling about these matters without any factual support for the argument.

What I am doing, Mr. Robichaud, is not criticizing what you are doing but the way in which you are doing it. For as long as I have attended this University, I have been reading in the CYNIC's subjective articles like yours, many wild unfounded generalizations about current University problems. And, for as long as I can recall, these articles have meant absolutely nothing, served no other purpose than to bolster the writer's ego and image (pseudo) of non-conformity, and precipitated more senseless un-investigated verbiage about the same problems.

The level of progress as a result of these articles has remained at zero for one quite obvious reason: Not one of the enterprising young, old, addicted, or otherwise "writers" have ever offered any evidence of research into the problem which they are discussing.

If you are ever going to write another article, and I hope you do because I would be very interested in observing your improvement, please offer some concrete data to support whatever you may be criticizing. When support is offered, the issue becomes more clear, the discussion becomes more meaningful, and the University moves a step further towards its transformation into a cleaner place at which, everyone now feels so dirty.

HAS MINSKY JOURNALISTIC RESPONSIBILITY?

Dear Mr. Minsky,

For a brief, blissful second I thought our beloved sceptic had been mysteriously transported to an unfortunate Latin-American Republic. I soon became aware that I was in the basement of Billings Center and our beloved sceptic was also present. At first I was repulsed by his appearance. The ugly pallor of his pseudo-psychedelic appearance crept over me as repugnantly as the thought of my own embalming. But I shall refrain from further derision of your appearance, for I feel that it has little to do with your view or mine, or with the Marines' for that matter.

You, Mr. Minsky, have finally reached the nadir of your career as a columnist. You evidently wrote this column just to see your own words in print and seemingly devoted little effort to its accuracy and rationality. From your statements you obviously formed your opinion by taking the negative view of the Marines' own highly subjective material. Honestly, Mr. Minsky, do you feel that your own account of the Marines is any less biased than theirs. F. Scott Fitzgerald, through the person of Amory Blane ("This Side of Paradise") once said that writing is a responsibility. I submit that this was not a responsible written column. I hope that in the future you will devote a little more time to your column so that you might give a slightly more objective account of the circumstances. Also, that you will avoid undue persecution of the "namby-pambys" of this world. To use your own words, Mr. Minsky, "We have in this country several annoying minority groups"; I number yours among them.

So, with heartfelt regards for your continued success, I am Antagonistically yours,
Thomas R. Varricchio '70
P.S. I trust your column was not written as part of the CYNIC's anti-apathy campaign and was a true reflection of your personal views.

... METHODS CRITICIZED

Dear Mr. Minsky,

I intend this letter to be very short. I am strongly against your methods of criticism and your pseudo-scepticism. Your latest article (March 10 - U.S. Marine Corps) only reveals your fantastic stupidity and lack of thought. Quite frankly I think your article was a last minute line of bull which you continually spout. I think (furthermore) that you are repulsive.

Quite Sincerely,
Kitty McGinniss

J. W. Snurdly: Capitalist Of The Year

By M. Minsky

Accey-deucey, backgammon, bandy, battledore and shuttlecock, crambo, deck tennis, fox and geese, gobang, halma, hammer-throwing, hide-and-seek, jack-straws, leapfrog, mahjog, merels, mumblety-peg, pall-mall, parcheesi, ping-ping, quoits, roller-skating, skittles, tetherball, tivoli, etc., are rapidly being replaced by a new and more exciting amusement: shoplifting. Who can explain the orgasmic thrill of victory when you emerge safely from a store clutching under your coat a recording of an entire Wagner opera? And what about the dreadful bringdown when you feel that cold, cold tap upon your shoulder?

It will please all of you to learn that a former UVM student OH was one of the world's truly great lifters. He was expelled from this school for, among other things, distributing pornographic literature to innocent freshmen and killing a chicken in Ira Allen Chapel ("It's just part of my religion," he explained to an unimpressed dean). To watch O in action was a great delight. Boldly entering a store, he would grasp any large object which caught his fancy and cautiously but professionally thread his way through the crowd loudly but politely, begging pardon so that the employees of the store mistook him for one of themselves.

Recently a group of progressive, intelligent mid-western businessmen, headed by Mr. J. Winslow Snurdly, opened an emporium for shoplifters. The player enters the store after paying a nominal fee; once in the store he may practice his art without fearing social or legal embarrassment. To make the game more interesting, plainclothesmen are stationed throughout the department store. If a lifter is caught he simply forfeits the item and must pay another nominal sum to reenter the game. Another important rule is the tag rule. Any player who views another player lifting may approach that player and "tag" him. Upon describing the stolen object the "tagger" receives it from the "taggee." It is considered a very grave breach of etiquette for a "taggee" to "squeal" upon a "tagger" who possesses the item to anyone who seems to be a guard. Guards, in order to claim an item, must be able to identify it correctly.

Mr. Snurdly may soon announce certain changes in the rules. The game now allows the player to keep the items he is able to lift once he passes the so-called "goal-line". This, according to Snurdly, may tend to "debase the game and make a thing for people who want only to get things". To make it a "pure sport" he would assign to each item in the store a certain point value based on a size-price ratio. At the "goal-line" or check-out counter each player will be required to produce his items. Thus, two or more people will be able to play against each other or will be allowed to form teams. Already certain local industries have expressed an interest in forming competing shop-lifting teams, and a local college fraternity says it will sponsor a shop-lifting tournament for orphans and other deprived children as part of its semiannual Do-Good week. There are reports that a national television network has offered Snurdly an eight figure sum for the rights to broadcast weekly matches.

Snurdly, always interested in the pursuit of knowledge, plans to open a national academy to train both lifters and guards. Several members of Congress have been offered positions in the administrative bureaucracy of the school because, according to Snurdly, "they have the know-how and know-what in order to make this operation a success because they have lots of experience". Snurdly, a devout churchgoer and father of five children (Brigitte 3, Kermit 4, Aimes Ellen and Edna May 5, and J. Winslow Snurdly, Jr. 6) recently declared at a luncheon in his honor, "What I have done is a dramatic example of the free enterprise system. In Russia this would be impossible."

KNOWLEDGE WOULD HELP

To The Editor:

If an article is to be written about someone, he ought to be able to defend himself afterwards. The recruiters for the United States Marine Corps are no longer on campus so, I will act on their behalf.

First of all, I would like to point out that I have a certain degree of familiarity with the Marines as I am in the OSC program they were here recruiting for. This is important because if a person is going to write about something intelligently, he ought to know something about it. I just do not feel that Mr. Minsky knows enough about the Marine Corps to write an intelligent and fair article. The purpose of this letter is to straighten out a few points that were made in last week's SCEPTIC and, hopefully, to teach the writer something he should know.

The writer made some remarks on the appearance of the recruiters. He said they were repulsive because they were so clean and that they were clean only because they were so dirty. The Marine Corps is known for its sharp appearance, and the recruiters are neat and clean because they are proud of being Marines and proud of their service. Too many people on this campus do not take pride in their appearance, and the writer of the article falls into this category, in my opinion.

Next I want to clear up a couple of things in relation to the training that was so authoritatively written about. Since the writer of the article will probably never be a leader, he will never experience the feeling of leading a group of men and having them respond to his command. To have a position of leadership is a privilege not a right, and this privilege must be earned.

When I was taking my training, of the roughly 500 men in my battalion there was only one Negro. Since they were taken during actual training this may explain the absence of Negroes from the pictures in the book; a point I think M. Minsky should know about and should have looked into before he started writing.

Since the writer has never been through it, I do not understand how he can make the statement that Marines are poorly trained for killing. This is their primary function and the training they receive is thorough in this and all other respects. Read your history books, Mr. Minsky, and read about places like Belleau Wood, Iwo Jima and the Choson Reservoir, and then see if you think Marines are not trained well.

I seriously doubt whether the writer has ever been to Vietnam and seen a Marine burn down a village. When villages are burned it is with good reason. And if he has never been there he has never seen the good things the Marines do, like helping the people harvest their rice, or helping them build schools or giving them medical care. These are things the writer failed to mention in his article.

If Mr. Minsky is so concerned about our country's being defended by such a "namby-pamby" group of men, then I suggest that he sign up and show us how it is done. I do not think, however, that he could make it in the Marines - so that makes him something less than a namby-pamby, doesn't it?

I hope I have cleared up certain points and written at least

By Dick Matheson

There may be an interesting struggle about to begin at UVM - interesting like a man-eating tiger attacking an abandoned tank. In the right corner we find the defending champion, (by default) our old cliché, apathy. Trying to climb through the ropes into the left corner, laze an' gennemen, is the would-be challenger, the new left. You may want to know what the new left is. But first, do you really know what apathy is? No, really, do you?

Well, apathy isn't anything; it's the absence of something. What then, is the something which apathy is the absence of?

That's up to you. It's like the comical argument in one part of Heller's Catch-22 about what God it is that the two atheists don't believe in.

Perhaps, to you, apathy is an absence of a pro-Vietnam demonstration of three hundred students running through the city streets shouting, "Fight! Team! Fight!"

Perhaps it's the absence of classroom discussion or of spectators at a basketball game.

Perhaps, to you, apathy is the absence of the new left. Okay, so what is the new left? Well, it hasn't climbed through the ropes yet into the ring, so it's a little hard to see. It just keeps running around the ring, shooting its pea-shooter at apathy, which doesn't seem to notice.

The new left's basic problem seems to be that no one on campus really gives a damn that it exists.

Even in conservative old Vermont, people are liberal enough not to be shocked by these allegedly radical ideas. Any anti-establishment group worth its assault has to seem radical enough to make the establishment rise up in arms, terrified, against it.

The new left at UVM seems scarcely to have raised an eyebrow, let alone arms. Student groups since the 1920's have been much more threatening than the new left, yet this group is trying to pass itself off as sensational, new, and radical.

To change, it has two choices: It can announce definite idealistic goals of new freedoms and then work for them, like an organization of beatnik Boy Scouts. Or it can renounce all goals and all ideals and become a group of campus anarchists, thereby renouncing any claim to intellectual sincerity, like a group of pedestrian Hell's Angels.

In any case, the new left may wish to trade in its pea-shooters for weapons more up-to-date and effective against modern establishments.

An irate German citizen has discovered just such a weapon. It seems Luftwaffe and U.S. Air Force jets were screaming over his house at an altitude of 400 feet instead of the minimum 1000 feet at which they were supposed to fly.

Helmut Winter began to put his super stroodle strewer into action. Within a few days the Luftwaffe and USAF had surrendered and were flying higher.

Just how, you may wonder, did Winter's weapon work? Basically, it was a Roman-style catapult designed to plaster planes with dumplings, and small pies. Its range was less than 200 feet; not enough to hit planes, Winters said - but enough to scare them.

It is not known if Helmut Winter is a member of the new left, but he surely punctured the local balloon of apathy.

some of the things the recruiters would have said. I also hope that I have shown Mr. Minsky that, if he is going to write an article, he should have more facts than he had this time - it does not make him look as intelligent as he thinks he is.

KLONSKY'S REVIEW IS MISLEADING AND ILL-INFORMED

To The Editor:

Mr. Klonsky's review of "The Recruiting Officer" was both misleading and ill-formed. The play was not a "boring and hum-drum affair; rather it was filled with double entendres, delightful obscenities, and marvelous acting not only by some of the major characters (Mr. Klonsky admits this freely) but also marvelous acting by some of those who had minor roles (such as Jim Collins and Jeff Kent). It may be true the mob did not, "go out and have a good time." But in restraining the mob the director was in keeping with the polished and mannered Restoration tradition.

To compare this play to a much earlier and yet in many ways a more contemporary play "The Shoemaker's Holiday" is also regrettable and gives the impression that what Mr. Klonsky really wanted to see is another "Shoemaker's Holiday". The bawdy slapstick of the Elizabethan stage is not, as Mr. Klonsky seems to imply, the only possible form of mob humor. What we saw in "The Recruiting Officer" was in effect a more confined, but nevertheless impressive, humor which relies more on the skill of the actor than on the performance of funny things on a stage. After all any idiot can fall down, drop things and run about on the stage. It is far more difficult, however, to portray an idiot.

Mr. Klonsky also neglects the "total theatre". Mr. Thompson was able to create. By having Miss Esther Sundell sell oranges and announce intermissions and by having the actors often directly address the audience and by using Mr. Schenk's skilfully designed set, he was able to do more than simply direct a play; he recreated a form of theatre. While popular opinion is not always a criterion for excellence, the reaction of the audience made it quite clear that they enjoyed the play. And that was the exact purpose of the play.

SCEPTIC...

NEGATIVE AND ANTI

To The Editor:

Before I read the Editorial explanation I found it rather difficult to decide if you were the right taking a crack at the left, as you professed, or the left trying to make fun of the right. Are you for real? Your swinging wilder than Sen. McCarthy. I've been a staff member of DEPARTURE for a couple of years and haven't been let in on the dastardly plot yet. In fact I've never been to Winooski. I must be using the wrong kind of mouth wash, I guess.

DEPARTURE has no editorial statement or philosophy. We print

"From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli..." so the familiar song goes. Unfortunately, it would seem that our noble SCEPTIC has previously short changed one of the institutions which enables that very expression of diverse opinion (free speech) to continue. Before looking any deeper into the matter at hand, it appears that examination of the SCEPTIC'S "driving" purpose is in order.

One may begin with a general battery of questions. It would really be interesting to learn if the SCEPTIC is:

1. pink, red, hip or wishes so;
2. trying to reveal the gross inadequacies entrenched in this free democratic nation of ours;
3. hoping to become a controversial figure worthy of recognition; and/or
4. for real.

In any case, I would like to convey my deepest sympathies.

The United States Marines unflinchingly risk their lives, first, last, and always, whenever, wherever a trouble spot appears to be threatening the fate of free nations! It truly seems hard to believe that someone would dare attack the 'Esprit de Corps' which enables men to face death without question and take pride in defending the American way of life. Furthermore, if the University condones recruitment for the Peace Corps and VISTA, there is no apparent reason why other government sponsored service groups should be prohibited from on-campus recruitment. Although the SCEPTIC may be trying to tell us that the armed forces are no longer "in" it is one of our square democratic traditions to allow the people to choose freely from amongst the various alternatives.

It is my deepest hope that the multi-dimensional ethical pervasions of the SCEPTIC will be taken as lightly as usual.

The seeds of discontent are sown in strange places. Here, there, and everywhere you look about in dismay with the harsh reality of unreality breathing down the back of your necks. Apathy, that mythical sleuth, need be traced no further than an introspective glance into the all pervasive mediocrity looking back at you in the mirror. Like forces repel, etc., etc., etc.

Indeed, it seems that ultimate good has triumphed against us and apparently, has viciously outwitted those in a position to cope with it. The ultimate good of which I speak is, you and I and you, fellow Catamounts. Look around and see yourselves looking back at you. Sheltered, fondled, ex-Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, National Honor Society Members, sweet, unsoiled, unblemished, God-fearing, unprovoked, sons and daughters of the American middle class, stand up and look around. We are all here together. There is no mystery waiting in your next personal interacting. It is just you meeting with you.

All is not gloomy. The past was bright and there are always lofty hopes for the future. It is just the present which must be endured. Apathy has resulted but, the administration may stand

PODIUM

Soldiers of the World: Unite!

For centuries man has solved his highest political conflicts by means of warfare; yet throughout the stem of time man has never placed a realistic design upon the term "soldier." Traditionally the definition of a soldier was that of a man who was willing, unselfishly, to lay down his life for another's (i.e. country, democracy, mother, etc.) This attempt does not, however, hold up under scrutiny. A soldier is a man having the distinction of being willing to destroy one life for the sake of another.

In order to come by a working definition of the term "soldier," one must understand the making of a soldier as a person. Training and indoctrination are the keys to a successful (brief) military career.

The three essentials of military learning are: to obey, how to obey, and to rationalize (The attainment of the third necessarily follows with the conscious acceptance of the first two.) Discipline of rank is the first and most important phase in a soldier's career. Judgments of face value evidence are disregarded in favor of simpler comprehensions. The quantity of braid upon a sleeve or the type of lapel or epaulet configuration determined the value judgment delegated to the common soldier. The soldier learns to respect and obey the military decorations stitched to the covering of his leader. (The aspiring soldier also realizes that the closer he comes in perfection of obedience, the greater his chances become to receive promotions. The Pentagon is the world's largest Skinner Box.)

All the world's obedience is, however, useless if the physical ability to carry out command is lacking. This usually entails teaching the soldier what his weapon will do and how he may cause it to function. Only experience will inform the soldier of the personal effect of such weapons. So as not to confuse the men at arms the direction in which the weapon is to be aimed is decided by his superior. (A soldier may, however, on his discharge, use his own initiative; such as stabbing nine nurses, murdering students from a clock tower, killing a President etc. — on-the-job training should not be wasted.)

The ability of a soldier to rationalize is quite remarkable. At times he will curse the war and the leaders who seem to have nothing but themselves at heart, grimace, and go right on slaughtering.

Soldiers of the world, your record, is indeed impressive: Indians (American and Asian), Africans, Philippines, French, Germans, English, Americans, Poles, Jews, Christians ... you've had a crack at all of us. Until, today the soldier has been unable to keep the masse of human beings from outstretching the bushery they have wrought upon the earth. The solution to birth control is at your fingertips; even the Vatican would not object to this, witness the Catholic participation in the "war" in the land of the yellow things. (The simple solution to the white man's burden is a realization today!)

United soldiers, turn into a horrifying creature willing to envelop the earth in its writhing coils of napalm and nuclear devastation. Your day has truly come, worriers of the world! Humanity is cornered. There is little to allow escape ... your orders are clear — extermination.

* A Skinner Box is a device used in psychological experiments, usually used to train rodents to do certain tasks for rewards.

the work of individuals who take enough interest in finer things to want to create. DEPARTURE is apolitical and will remain so, unless some thoughtless Nerds stereotype it into a position where writers are afraid to be associated, for fear of being "radical" or something worse.

Blame yourself if the "opposition" has more staff members and material represented. You charge the SCEPTIC with being anti, but you seem to be getting you follies from an anti-culture attack. What's the point in yelling "white" every time SCEPTIC yells, "Black?" What are your programs? What can you do as a creative force? I'm old enough to criticize SCEPTIC myself. Sorry but I find your column very anti and very SCEPTIC. Think for yourself or be gone.

RETAIN DEDICATED FACULTY MEMBERS

To The Editor:

The teaching contract of Mr. John Eurich, Instructor, German Department, is not being renewed because of reasons unassociated, in my opinion, with his outstanding classroom performance — Mr. Eurich has not initiated study for his Ph.D.

A petition has been circulated among Mr. Eurich's students calling for a reconsideration of this action and a prompt contract renewal offer. (In former cases of this kind, faculty members have been asked to stay on.)

The original petition, I understand, was presented to Dean Kidder, College of Arts and Sciences, and copies were submitted to Vice President Cook and to Mr. James White, Chairman, German Department.

There is no question in my mind that Mr. Eurich is a highly skilled, deeply dedicated, and thoroughly competent teacher. The overwhelming majority of OHIO WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY - Letter from the President of the University: "I should like to state the University's rationale for its position with respect to the use of alcoholic beverages by students:

- 1) The record shows a consistent and positive correlation between drinking and serious disciplinary problems of all kinds on campus;
- 2) A policy which condones drinking can mean the exclusion of many prospective students for social and economic reasons;
- 3) The approval of drinking by the University would infringe upon the freedom of those students who prefer not to drink by bringing heavy social pressures upon them, particularly in organized social groups;
- 4) Finally, the violation of any regulation does not present a valid reason for modifying it. Cheating is said to be widespread on American college campuses, yet no one has suggested legalizing it."

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN - A record of drinking hours (was set by 12) University of Michigan students in January in an Ann Arbor tavern. Beginning Jan. 5, and ending 604 hours later, nine men and three women consumed the brew at a rate of 12 ounces every half hour, totalling 14,496 ounces (453 quarts). They were out to break the old record of 302 hours set in 1956. According to the leading drinker the twelve continued until Sunday "because it's there," and stopped only because university officials disapproved of this sort of social research.

We are not all at fault for this creation, so let's not waste anymore time on an issue which has already been worn out.

Standing Ovation Awarded Flamenco Guitarist

By Louis M. Ugalde

"CARLOS MONTOYA PLAYS THE FLAMENCO FIRE GUITAR" is the title of a record album and serves very well to describe the performance in Ira Allen Chapel last Friday night. Sr. Montoya was not in rare form; he was at his usual fiery best.

His Yankee audience, which filled every corner of the chapel, gave him a standing ovation but without a dingle "ole." This explains in part the inclusion of unflamenco numbers such as "gaita gallega" (Galician bagpipe), "guajiras" (Cuban songs), and the three encores: "jota" (a popular dance), "saeta" (a processional song; in this treatment the entire religious procession was described), and the "Mala-guena" by Lecuona — all of them in flamenco arrangements.

It must be noted too that even the traditional flamenco pieces: bulerias, fandango, rondona, petenera, zambra, and angos came out somewhat stylized when compared with Alan Lomax' recordings of the songs and dances of Spain, recorded in the field some years ago.

The real wonder is that after many seasons of 120 concerts in the United States and 60 or more in other countries, Carlos Montoya's art has remained as authentically flamenco as it has. Perhaps his failure to learn English has really been an unconscious avoidance of too much Americanization.

There can be no question about Montoya's mastery of his instrument. One of the giants of the flamenco guitar, he is perhaps the best of them all. The left-hand plucking technique, featured all by itself perhaps a little too much, was truly fantastic for strength of tone and clarity of articulation. His right hand has no peer, particularly in the machine-like regularity of the triple tremolo. The tone tends to be a bit harsh but, can be delicate and plaintive when the occasion requires it.

Despite the built-in limitations of a single instrument and a well defined style, the program was quite varied. The first group of selections, strictly flamenco and characterized by a certain sameness for the uninitiated, offered a gem in the "zambrilla," marked by a strong Moorish influence and changing intricate rhythms.

The second group offered more variety. The audience responded well to the "zapateao," a tricky heel and toe dance cleverly simulated by drumming on the wood of the instrument. The "tarantas," or miner's song from Levante, a fine example of "cante jondo," was outstanding in the third group.

It was a fascinating evening, and would have been more so with a "cantaor" to sing the "petenera" and the "tarantas," and a "bailaor" or two to dance the "bulerias" and the "zapateao."

Upshot Paused

By K. Klonsky

With the initiation of UPSHOT, a campus group for creative drama, Jan Quackenbush has performed a hitherto impossible feat. Lo and behold an artistic consciousness of some size was born at UVM. For, aside from Quackenbush's provocative evening of entertainment, one had to be gratified by the large turnout that came to see what a UVM playwright had to say.

One of the justifications for a university is that it provides a place of learning outside the classroom. To both spectators and playwright, this justification reached its fruition on Sunday night. The material was lively and insightful and the reception was enthusiastic. One could see that Quackenbush still has a long way to go but one could also notice a remarkable improvement on the part of the author. One of the reasons, aside from his increasing maturity, has to be his actual experience in working with the Arena Theatre.

The crucial moments for UPSHOT are probably approaching. For all the playwrights who thought that no one was interested, Sunday night was a clear demonstration that students and faculty are indeed interested. The aggressive courage of Jan Quackenbush has begun something that could explode into a fertile workshop or sink into memory and oblivion. The potential of the former possibility for this university is exciting. UPSHOT must not be permitted to die.

unique style with a combination of folk and popular beat. But, no matter what the tune, the words captivated the audience's attention.

Before the third encore Simon timidly stated, "You're a gas," and then, after singing "Bleeker Street," Simon and Garfunkel left a most enjoyable concert.

"Goodbye, goodbye, goodbye, goodbye
That's all there is.
And the leaves that are green turn to brown."

Simon and Garfunkel Entertain

Simon and Garfunkel performed last Sunday, March 12. UVMers and Burlington residents, flowed in to see them. Bob Dylan is hard to replace, but Simon and Garfunkel fit the bill very well.

Simon and Garfunkel may sing of a lack of communication, but one always receives their message. Paul Simon wrote the duo's songs, all twenty-seven of them, the majority of which are popular hits.

The two, a little awkward on the stage, began the evening with "He Was My Brother," and "Sparrow." After this they became acclimated with the audience, gained confidence, and made the audience feel at home.

Bathed at times in Simon's favorite red light, they continued with hits such as, "Red Rubber Ball," "Dangling Conversations," "Sounds of Silence," and "Words Written on the Underground Subway Wall." The latter, as Garfunkel explained, pertained to "the common suggestion," and was written in typical "New York baroque style" in a fit of something on the subway wall.

Simon has definitely created a his students apparently feel the same way.

I feel that the University is doing the student body and the faculty a disservice by adhering inflexibly to arbitrary standards which result in the loss of such excellent teachers, especially when those standards are such a poor measure of actual teaching ability.

I challenge administration officials, before going to the state legislature for funds to hire new teachers, to first make a dedicated effort to retain faculty members of Mr. Eurich's caliber.

Poet-Songwriters Delight Audience

By Judy Beeber

Headlining the last Chamber Arts Series of the 1966-67 season will be folk song interpreters Sandy and Caroline Paton. They will make their debut in Burlington on Sat., March 18 in the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 p.m.

Sandy and Caroline met at the University of California and discovered that they had much in common since they were both folk music enthusiasts. They soon married and in the summer of 1958, they sailed for England and spent the following year listening to British traditional singers.

In September of the same year, the Patons traveled around Sutherlandshire, in the far northwest of Scotland with Hamish Henderson of the School of Scottish Studies. They also spent a week at the home of Jeannie Robertson, the ballad singer where they learned much about folklore.

After returning to the U.S., the Patons settled in Huntington, Vermont. They have sung for many groups all over the state, ranging from guests at the Trapp Family Lodge in Stowe to meetings of the Artificial Breeders Association. Last year they sang for the State Legislature's annual Sugar-on-Snow party in Montpelier shortly before they drove across the country to participate in the U.C.L.A. Folk Music Festival in Los Angeles.

With the help of a friend, the Patons established their own recording company titled Folk Legacy Records, which Caroline now heads. Quackenbush Presents Three Works

Last Sunday Mr. Quackenbush finally proved himself when he presented two plays and a film at the Arena Theater. He has come a long way since that pretentious sentimental and wordy creation "To Touch the Grass."

For one thing he has developed a sense of humor; a great deal of "The Baby" is rather witty. He is also developing new ways of working with material. He uses the rather brilliant technique of using film as a flashback sequence in the play. Unfortunately much of the effectiveness of this device was lost because of the poor quality of the film. The play itself involves the inability of a young, well-meaning but totally inept social worker played by Stephen Carlson to deal with an evil - the abdication of parental responsibility. The man, played by James Collins, at first convinces the worker that he is the father, a rather cruel and grotesque father, but then convinces him he is not the father.

The play however was marred by Mr. Quackenbush's use of a rather trite and gimmicky device to end the play; the baby dies due to exposure. This may be a taint of that obnoxious sentimentality from some of his earlier works. The play however was devoid of that dreadful wordiness found in these earlier works and most of the dialogue moved rapidly.

The play was done no justice by the generally unrehearsed quality of the actors. Mr. Carlson was rather stiff and seemed somewhat unsure of his lines. Mr. Collins played the role adequately but lacked much of his usual fine comic style. Marsha Davies appeared briefly as the woman.

The second part of the program consisted of a film "The Pigeons According to Saint Hubert" and starred Bert Muzzy and Ellen Freese. There were a few interesting shots of Mr. Muzzy and the audience did laugh upon occasion - why we did so is not clear. The film however developed into a piece of sophomoric stillness, totally devoid of any apparent meaning either thematic or artistic. If Mr. Quackenbush desires to make more films he might begin looking for interesting things to film rather than construct vague pseudo-events to be performed before a handheld 16mm. camera; he must learn something about composition before he can make a worth while film. Possession of a movie camera doesn't make a film director any more than possession of a pen makes a poet. Then again, every artist has a starting point and it would be unfair to condemn Mr. Quackenbush for his first effort. The chief virtue of the film was the soundtrack played by Tony Mastaler.

The evening concluded with "Complexions" a one character "play" which shows the decadence of an affluent family. Betty Smith was, as usual, impressive, in spite of the fact she didn't know her lines well and referred to a handy script upon occasion. The play required Miss Smith to portray the woman as a young girl, a teenager, a young woman, a bitchy middle age schrew, and at last an old lady. Miss Smith was particularly convincing and memorable in her portrayal of the teenager smoking a cigarette and was also quite good as the child, far less innocent than her parents believe. Less convincing, and this may be the fault of the writer, were her portrayals of the young lady, ultra-sophisticated to the point

S.A. - Gary Cooper and Ingrid Bergman in the magnificent "For Whom the Bell Tolls" - A great, exciting and thoroughly moving film, a must.

FLYNN - Jason Robards in "Any Wednesday" - pretty good comedy plus a chance to see America's no. 1 actor.

STRONG - Hopefully Michal Caine and Shirley Maclaine in "Gambit" - excellent suspense comedy with the Caine touch that seems to turn all his films into winners. However, they may hold over "Is-Paris Burning?" which could be the worst film of 1966-67 or any other year. Padded with great actors who can do no more than stand around and look ridiculous most of the time.

NEWS for ENGINEERING GRADUATES 1966 1967

Continued expansion of our military and commercial business provides openings for virtually every technical talent.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, we suggest you consider career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Like most everyone else, we offer all of the usual "fringe" benefits, including our Corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. But, far more important to you and your future, is the wide-open opportunity for professional growth with a company that enjoys an enviable record of stability in the dynamic atmosphere of aerospace technology.

And make no mistake about it . . . you'll get a solid feeling of satisfaction from your contribution to our nation's economic growth and to its national defense as well.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL, AERONAUTICAL, CHEMICAL, CIVIL (structures oriented), ELECTRICAL, MARINE, and METALLURGICAL ENGINEERING, ENGINEERING MECHANICS, APPLIED MATHEMATICS, CERAMICS, PHYSICS and ENGINEERING PHYSICS.

Take a look at the above chart; then a good long look at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft—where technical careers offer exciting growth, continuing challenge, and lasting stability—where engineers and scientists are recognized as the major reason for the Company's continued success.

SPECIALISTS IN POWER . . . POWER FOR PROPULSION—POWER FOR AUXILIARY SYSTEMS. CURRENT UTILIZATIONS INCLUDE MILITARY AND COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT, MISSILES, SPACE VEHICLES, MARINE AND INDUSTRIAL APPLICATIONS.

 3. Photography
 4. Ceramics, Jewelry
3. Entries must be submitted by April 5 at the S.A. Office desk in Billings Center.
4. Not more than two (2) entries per person may be submitted.
5. Work will be on exhibition between April 7 and April 21 in Billings. Work must be picked up by the artist by April 23. The artist assumes all responsibility for works submitted.
6. All works submitted must be ready for display (drawings must be matted, paintings prepared with hooks and wire).
7. Attach name and campus address to each work.

PRIZES:

- $25.00 - Grand Prize
- $10.00 - best out of each of four categories.

Maple Sugar Party

The annual maple sugar on snow party, named for the late J.L. Hills, who was dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Vermont, will take place on Sunday afternoon, March 19, near the Patrick Gymnasium for the benefit of Alpha Zeta.

Psychology Club

The Psychology Club elected its officers for 1967-68 on March 13th, at 4:00, in 239 Waterman. Joseph Besso '69 was elected president; Martha Baker '68, vice president; and Lynne Ulrich '68, secretary-treasurer.

Plans were discussed for a trip to Windsor State Prison and Douglas Hospital, Verdun, Quebec in April. It was decided that the Douglas Hospital trip would be open to all interested persons and sign-up sheets would be placed around main campus.

Phi Delt Book Drive

The brothers and pledges of Phi Delta Theta are sponsoring a book drive for our soldiers in Viet Nam. This is the first time such a drive has taken place, and the fraternity hopes that it will be a success and that it will establish more spirit backing our men in Viet Nam. The books will be sent from Burlington to California, and from there they will be distributed to the armed forces.

Would all persons with extra paperbacks drop them off at Phi Delta Theta, 439 College Street, or call 869-866 and the books will be picked up.

Snow Plow Troubles at Converse-'98

It seems strange that after two years of unsuccessful experimenting with the snow plow some new methods of clearing paths leading away from Converse Hall does not receive a trial.

Five minutes after the plow has made one of its semi-daily trips over the road, the wind blows back with interest all the snow that has been pushed aside and consequently one who has an appointment at any of the other buildings finds it exceedingly uncomfortable to get out and around.

Someone has suggested that those in authority procure a large roller drawn by horses and pack the snow soon after it falls.

If this were done it is quite likely that the wind would sweep over the place leaving as good a pathway hours later as it does the moment after the roller has passed over it.

It is evident that an experiment of some sort is necessary and it would prove a delight to the student if a method like this could be found successful.

Corse Deadline April 15

Application blanks may be obtained from the office of Dean William H. Macmillan of the Graduate College by those who are interested in the Corse Fellowship of $1200.

Applications will be accepted through April 15 from young men or women who majored in English or a classical language, or two of the European languages. They must also be preparing for careers in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

This fellowship was established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, UVM '88. It is awarded annually to a University of Vermont graduate holding the B.A. degree, to a senior, or a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

PCIL Plans Future Program

Plans for sending a student ambassador to India or Japan this summer are almost a reality. With donations from campus organizations and "Tag Day," the PCIL is nearing the required amount of money for their program.

Already, new ideas of expanding are being carefully considered. First, PCIL is trying to obtain a cable address, "Interliv." With the address, PCIL will be recognized internationally as UVM's Student Ambassador Program. Second, since over 350 college students go abroad each year under this program UVM is hoping to receive Funds From IFC and S.A. to send students abroad for one semester, with arranged credits from the University.

If the IFC can raise the necessary amount of money, the student sent will be selected from a fraternity, since all fraternities will donate. If the S.A. contributes enough money, all students on campus will have an equal opportunity. If both organizations donate, two students may spend a semester abroad. These plans are in consideration by both organizations and if they work, UVM may have 3 student ambassadors next year.

Fraternity Presidents Elected

Within the past few weeks elections have been held in all sixteen fraternity houses for the office of president. The new presidents of the respective houses are as follows: Dave Brown, Acacia; Alan Moss, Alpha Epsilon Pi; Andy Dufree, Alpha Gamma Rho; Steve Robinson, Alpha Tau Omega; Colin Hurd, Delta Psi; Dick Trudell, Lambda Iota; Robert Mitchell, Kappa Sigma; Michael Roberts, Phi Delta Theta; Buddy Harrigan, Phi Mu Delta; Mark Oland, Phi Sigma Delta; Tom Abernethy, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Bob Schroeder, Sigma Nu; Dave Crane, Sigma Phi; Moge Lee, Sigma Phi Epsilon; Mel Hebel, Tau Epsilon Phi; Frank Giebutowski, Theta Chi.

Ariels on Sale

Copies of both '66 and '67 ARIELS will be on sale at the ARIEL Office in Lower Billings this coming week, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 22-24.

IFC Attends Symposium

This past weekend four representatives of the Interfraternity Council attended a symposium on fraternity morality at MIT.

Traveling to Boston were Gary Glynn, Treasurer of the IFC, Bill Machanic, an assistant director of Kake Walk, and Bill Perry and Bob Gordon, vice-presidents of the IFC.

Twenty-seven colleges and universities from the New England area participated in the day long conference. Addresses were given by the Governor of Massachusetts, John A. Volpe; Elliott Richardson, Attorney General of Massachusetts; former Congressman Walter H. Judd; and Dr. Harvey Cox of the Harvard Divinity School.

Supplementing the addresses were seminars led by distinguished faculty and clergy on the various topics of drugs and drinking, ethics, sex, and the responsibility of the fraternal group, and religion.

Sigma Xi Meeting

Dr. W. Alan Tisdale, chairman of the department of medicine at the University of Vermont College of Medicine, will discuss "Alcohol and the Liver" when he addresses the Vermont Chapter, Society of the Sigma Xi, Thursday night at 8.

The meeting will be held in Science Lecture Hall, New Delehanty Building, Trinity College. It is open to the public.

Scope Presents Kauffmann

SCOPE will present Stanley Kauffmann of "The New Republic" in Ira, Allen Chapel on Monday, March 20th at 8:00 p.m.

Mr. Kauffmann is best known for his film, literary, and drama criticism. He was film critic for "The New Republic" from February, 1958, to December, 1965, is the author of "A World on Film" and seven novels, was the writer and conductor of the educational TV film series, "The Art of Film," and is now associate literary editor of "The New Republic." These are only a few of his many accomplishments.

In his presentation Mr. Kauffmann will explore the standards, shortcomings and achievements of American culture.

"Le Million" Presented

The Department of Romance Languages and the Amicale Française will present one of the all time greats in film comedies on Thursday, March 23. "Le Million" is about the hilarious chase after a missing lottery ticket.

The film will be shown at 7 p.m. at Votey Auditorium. Admission is free. "Le Million" is in French with English subtitles. Don't miss this, "... one of the best films ever made."

Physics Colloquium

Prof. Michael Tinkham of the Harvard University Physics Department will speak at a University of Vermont Physics Department colloquium Wednesday at 4:10 p.m. The session in Room 104, Williams Science Hall, is open to the public. Tinkham's topic: "Superconductivity Today."

An agricultural engineering seminar on "Agricultural Engineering, the Profession with a Future," will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Agricultural Engineering Building on the University of Vermont campus.

Paper Fashions Popular

By Kathy Watt

Paper fashions first appeared to be a fad, soon to be forgotten. However paper wedding dresses are making headlines, and New York manufacturers are producing paper dresses by the millions, the fascination of the throwaway fashion is not soon to be stamped out.

It started as a fun item with a premium offer for a disposable paper dress for one dollar by Scott Paper Company, has skyrocketed into a complete avant-garde fashion era.

I. Miller has designed a "gem" studded golden robe, and Givenchy, a gown in quilted silver - both in the latest "fabric," mylar coated paper.

Steve McQueen recently modeled a forest green paper suit designed by an advocate of paper suits for men. Those who still consider this a fashion gag would appreciate the $150 price tag.

Paraphenalia and Wippette are two companies leading this paper clothes revolution. They are putting our paper dresses in clashing colors such as orange and plum, green and pink, and also in crazy geometric prints, silver foil, paisley, stripes, tweed, and even a wild tiger print.

Wippette is putting out an "Instant Canned" dress. It comes in a brightly colored can no larger than a coffee container and comes out wrinkleproof and ready-to-wear.

A surprising advantage of the paper fashions is their fire and water resistance.

They also can supposedly be pressed and are good for up to six wearings. After that, you toss them!

As one American fashion designer put it at the Chicago Paper Show, "Paper does offer the supreme possibility that any major designer could easily design a dress that would put millions of American women in style. Far from vulgarizing fashion, paper makes a vast experimentation possible and involves the American women in a sense of personal style which disappeared with the thirties."

(continued from page eight) of vulgarity, and the middle aged woman, a viscous wife in the "Virginia Woolf" tradition, both roles being somewhat stereotyped. There was also a slight tendency for this paly to drag. Nevertheless, Mr. Quatkenbush has provided an ample vehicle for an actress to display her talents.

Ceilidh Opens Formal Membership

Ceilidh, the UVM folk music club, is opening for formal membership on Wednesday, March 22, at 8:00 p.m. in conference room "B" in lower Billings. Membership is open to anyone in the Burlington area.

The purpose of the club is to promote the singing and learning of all types of folk music. Stress is put on the vocal aspects rather than the instrumental. The name, Ceilidh (which rhymes with "daily"), is the Welsh equivalent of hootenanny.

Ceilidh has been informally meeting since the beginning of last semester. Starting next week there will be a charge of fifty cents, which covers membership for the rest of the semester. Those who wish may pay dues for next semester as well. The fee is $2.00.

Membership in the club allows admission to all club activities including regular meetings and club-sponsored concerts now in the planning stages, as well as access to both the magazine and record library.

The officers are Stephen McGaughey, President; Steven Minor, Vice President; Mary Potwin, Secretary and Treasurer; Michael Furst, Publicity Director.

Dean Gribbons Honored at Tea

Miss Jackie M. Gribbons, Dean of Women was honored at a tea given by Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board on Sunday, March twelfth from four to six o'clock in the Southwick Ballroom for all undergraduate women and women faculty. Miss Gribbons was Assistant Dean of Women at Bowling Green University, Bowling Green, Ohio, and assumed her present position at the University this fall.

DEAN GRIBBONS

Those in the receiving line with Dean Gribbons were Mrs. Lyman S. Rowell, wife of the President, Miss Margaret M. Wing, Assistant Dean of Women, Mrs. Ruth Izzo, Advisor to Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board, and Miss Ann Lindley, President of Mortar Board. The wives of the Deans and Vice President were invited to pour.

The members of Mortar Board, Senior Women's Honor Society, Staff and Sandal, Junior Women's Honorary, Sophomore Aides, and Alpha Lambda Delta served as hostesses for the many students, women faculty, head residents and other guests who attended.

Students on Draft

More than 90 percent of American students feel that a nation can be justified in conscripting its citizens into the military.

More than 70 percent of American students are not satisfied with the present Selective Service System.

More than 70 percent of American students would prefer to have non-military service, e.g., Peace Corps, VISTA, Teachers Corps, as an equal alternative to military service.

Over 60 percent of American students do not feel that students should be deferred just because they are students.

after a day's bumpy bus ride across the mountains and hills of south central Korea. The serenity of this temple where one could hear undisturbed the murmuring of mountain streams, the cadences of monks' repeated prayers and the call of birds was a delight. Especially interesting for me were the thousands of wood blocks housed here, from which Buddhist scriptures had been printed many centuries ago.

Visits to temples such as these give a strong impression of the long history of Buddhism in Korea; yet today it appears to have little vitality and not much relevance. Buddhism has not had state support since 1392. Most of those who come to worship are older women, though Korean tourists often go through rather perfunctory obeisance rites. Monasteries and temples are usually tucked back in the mountain areas away from the mainstreams of Korean life.

In contrast, the Christian churches are very apparent in the cities and towns of Korea. A regular part of the sounds of the city are the tolling of church bells for early prayers every morning at four and five o'clock and for Sunday services. The cross-topped steeples pierce the skylines. Even in remote villages churches can be found, often only a mud and thatch construction, but, with a small bell tower at the side. Though modern Christianity has a history of only some eighty years, its growth in Korea has been rather phenomenal in comparison to other areas of Asia.

One of the most impressive churches and the largest in Korea is Young-nak Church in Seoul with 8500 members. The minister, Dr. Han, studied under my father and was a student-assistant of Mrs. McCune's father many years ago. A magnificent preacher, he held in complete attention the audience of 2500 in the main sanctuary and of an additional 1000 in the closed-circuit TV-equipped chapels adjoining. We were attending the 11:30 service, the third of the morning. The choir's anthem was a choral excerpt from Beethoven's Ninth. In their hymn singing the vast congregation did not drift into the verse as is the habit of American congregations but, sang from the first note with fervor. Here there seemed to be meaning for the Koreans. The sermon topic was the Second Commandment - relevant to the Koreans with their ancient tradition of many gods and with their present conflicts in an increasingly materialistic society. There were many young people in the audience, including large numbers of students to whom the messages of Dr. Han have appeal.

Still the number of Christians - Protestant and Catholic - make up less than six percent of the population. Unfortunately, some of the Christian impact is blunted by schism within the churches. Also some aspects of its appeal are to those looking for material rewards - "rice Christians," as they are called.

The long years of control by the Japanese whom the Koreans hated and whose laws they followed only by coercion have left their mark upon the Koreans. The war years have been equally severe in creating moral strains. It is not surprising that many Koreans became amoral, with little meaning to their lives. As they rebuild their nation the search for meanings becomes even more urgent. Anti-Japanese or anti-Communist slogans and sentiments cannot fill the which will give them moral strength in these stress-filled days.

Speech Dept. Announces New Program

By Sally Stockwell

As introduced in CYNIC, February 10, the Speech Department has added a major with emphasis in dramatics in its now-expanded program of five possible majors. With the final addition of Speech I, Foundations of Oral Communications, in September, 1968, the present expansion in the Department will be complete. Until this year, the General Speech Major was the only speech major available to the students. As it has in the past, this major offers courses, including Oral Interpretation of Literature, Introductions to Theatre, Broadcasting, and Speech Correction and electives at the 100 and/or 200 level. Although well-suited for the student unsure of his desired area of concentration and to the student in Education as well as to those with specific speech intentions, the general major did not emphasize in depth any particular one of the areas now offered. Now, with the recognized program, more students whose individual interests are concentrated in broadcasting, drama public address, or speech correction can take advantage of this new arrangement in the Speech Department.

However, the majors aren't complete with courses alone. Several activities, known as co-curricular because of their importance to an experienced and well-rounded major and in correlation with each major, are available for individual and particular enjoyment outside of the classroom. Briefly, the Department encourages such activities as: work in actual stage productions (Theatre), discussion as a part of a group which travels all over Vermont to speak on vital issues and the debate team which has earned nationwide recognition (Rhetoric and Public Address), programs with WRUV, AM and FM, and perhaps Educational TV in the future (Broadcasting), and actual clinical work with persons having speech defects (Speech Pathology).

SOUND... AND FURY

Letters to the Sports Editor

Dear Mr. Bloomenthal,

Having observed all of Vermont's home hockey games, I would like to pose a question, to which I would very much appreciate an answer. Why doesn't the University of Vermont subscribe to the Eastern College Athletic Conference system of hiring officials?

Under the present system, the coach is compelled to contact and contract the officials who will officiate the game of the night. This system seems quite unnecessary with the present facilities that the athletic department has at its disposal. In addition, Coach Cross is put under an additional strain, as he is often unable to contact officials, or at least competent ones. Some of the referees whom he contacted were, through no fault of his own, not of ECAC caliber and consequently the officiating was substandard. Surely the athletic department is not too tight fisted, but perhaps uninformed of the ECAC referee system. The Eastern College Athletic Conference has a system whereby the University would pay a fee, send in its "home" schedule and have assigned, ECAC certified, officials. Now that hockey has become a major sport at Vermont I see no reason why the athletic department must continue its nickle and dime tactics to secure officials.

While I am on the subject of changes, I would like to suggest another. The press box at Gutterson Field House, in which this lowly reporter is relegated to the third row, is in such a position that picture taking and observation is well nigh impossible. I suggest that the press box be either elevated another few feet or moved forward so it would overlook the ice. After all if Don Fillion can't take pictures and I can't see the game that I am to write about, both the "Free Press" and CYNIC will suffer immeasurably.

I hope the athletic department will consider these suggestions and act on them, so that officiating and press facilities can keep up with Vermont's expanding hockey program.

Sincerely yours,
Fred Schlapp
CYNIC Hockey Reporter

Intramural Sports

SAE, Delta Psi Lead Field

By Jack Berry

Despite the lingering snow and icy winds which hang over the campus, the intramural sports schedule is beginning to show definite signs that Spring is approaching. The winter sports meet on March 18 marks the end of a long season. On March 14 the wrestling entries open followed by the softball and tennis doubles, for which entries open on March 21 and 22 respectively. Those interested in the badminton singles tournament have until March 21 to apply.

The finals of the paddleball doubles tournament will be played this week. Burgess and Cook of Delta Psi will meet the winner of the match between Wilson and King of Delta Psi and Dorsey and Pravata of SAE. It is significant that Delta Psi and SAE could be represented in the finals since these two teams have been dominating the All-Campus Sports Trophy competition all year. Team standings following the close of the winter bowling leagues are as follows:

TEAM	SCORE
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	581
Delta Psi	566.5
Sigma Phi Epsilon	424.5
Phi Sigma Delta	416.0
M.A.T.	400.0
Phi Delta Theta	363.0
Sigma Nu	298.0
Sigma Phi	274.0
Lambda Iota	272.0
Acacia	260.0

Girls' Ski Team Shines

By Debbie Arnold

The UVM girl's ski team, coached by Miss Chase, brought back six trophies from their last two races. The first three were won at the Middlebury Winter Carnival with Lynne Bertram placing first in the slalom, and Peggy Nutt coming in second. In the giant slalom, the two top skiers reversed positions with Peggy placing first and Lynne coming close behind in second. As a result, the team came in first in the slalom, first in the giant slalom, and easily claimed the combined trophy. Lynne and Peggy tied for the skimeister.

And, need I say it? The UVM girl's ski team did it again at the University of New Hampshire last weekend.

Though the snow conditions were slow the team placed first in the giant slalom with Lynne Bertram coming in fourth, Peggy Nutt seventh, Kathy Dillman eight, and Valerie Green tenth. Colby Junior placed second in this event and Cornell placed third. Still racing in fine style, the girls finished the slalom with Peggy third, Katie sixth, and Lynne eleventh. This resulted in another first place for UVM, with Colby Junior second and Middlebury third. The girls took the combined trophy once more.

The UNH race was the last of the season for the undefeated team. Next year promises to be an equally successful season as five of the nine members are now freshmen and three are sophomores.

Sport Coupe—comes in convertible version, too.

THE INSIDER

BY BOB JACOBS

No season would be complete without a post mortem recapitulation and so here it is. The statistics are quite revealing and by critically examining them we can see the team's weaknesses that led to a disappointing 9 and 15 season. A case in point is a comparison of the rebounds from a game average aspect. While UVM corralled 46.3 rebounds a tilt the opposition snatched the ball off the boards at 52.8 rebounds per game clip. As we were a small ball club it might be conceded, but not when the opposition outshot us both from the field 42.8% to 41.1% and from the line 62% and 61%. The result of these factors was that the Cats average of 69.8 points per game was 6.7 points lower than the 76.5 points per game of our adversaries.

On an individual level, Lapointe coming back from an illness that left him looking like the sole survivor of the Bataan death march, averaged 16.8 points a game. While waging a personal vendetta against the rival's top scorer, Dave was still able to hit at a 43% rate from the floor. While hot popping in his short jumpers or left drives, he was cashing in from the charity stripe to the tune of 74.6%. Cat fans can look forward to 2 more years of Dave's hustling talented play.

Bopper Billy Librera was the only other member of the club in double figures notching 12.8 pts. per game. Slippery Billy also managed to scrape the glass boards for a total of 202 rebounds an average of 8.4 rebounds a game. Returning next year also, he sported a flashy 43% field goal percentage like Lapointe.

Mention here must be made of the contribution Rusty ("Skull") Boardman made this year. The thinly thatched senior was an iron-man for the Vermont quintet and contrary to the gibes leveled at his shooting ability powered them through at a 41.5% field goal rate. His 62% from the line was also better than the team free throw percentage. In the rebound side of the ledger Rusty was also a leader ripping boards at a 7 rebounds a game rate against the likes of high-flying Bill Brey and the soaring Billy Tindall.

Alden (Deacon) Hale was this club's "unsung hero" if I might employ that cliché. Although missing much of the recognition he deserves he averaged 7.5 points a game and had the second best field goal percentage on the team hitting 45.6% of his field goal attempts. Alden was instrumental in the fine UVM effort made against UConn. and numerous other contests. "Bully Cully" Hale's peculiar stride will be sorely missed next year as he departs via the graduation route.

Bruce Hanna, the team captain, and defensive ace, was in an invaluable asset to this year's club as his scrappy style of play was an inspiration to all. His 29.6% field goal percentage is deceiving as his shooting picked up considerable as he made clutch buckets to win both the last Middlebury and Norwich games. As Coach Loche put it, "It was poetic justice that Streak should have hit those buckets." Bruce a fine Tennis player also, was awarded a position on the All-Loyola Invitational Tourney for his fine play.

A junior reserve who shows great promise is Donny Katz, who averaged 7.1 points per game for UVM this past season. His scoring potential revealed itself many times during the season, particularly in the Springfield AIC Tournament and the UNH per centage might seem a bit low, it must be remembered that his style is highly conclusive to drawing fouls which he plunked at a 69% rate.

One of the fan's favorites this year had to be sophomore Terry O'Leary a tricky driver and adept play-maker in the Guy Rodgers tradition. Red was also one of the team's best defensive players as he sticks to the man with bull-dog tenacity. His 27% shooting was of the long grange variety ability. Particularly cool under pressure Terry, along with Alden Hale, almost carried the Cats to an upset over UConn. a 6.2 point per game production was Terry's contribution as a reserve.

Bob Jacobs, another sophomore, rounds out the list of the 8 players whom we have statistics on. Jake averaged 5.9 points per game on 47% from the field and 83.3% from the line. Although not noted for clever ball handling or smooth play he headed the public relations stable for the team. He and O'Leary did an invaluable job of keeping track of the basketballs and warm-up jerseys though.

The "Co Squad" was headed by Rich Kellogg, Rich Segal, and Bill ("Raccoon") Schmitt. The author having had the pleasure of serving on this squad can't emphasize the dedication of these boys reporting to practice every day while not garnering the big headlines. Rich Kellogg shows fine shooting ability and as he is only a sophomore will be sure to make his presence felt. Segal hobbled by illness at the season's end, will probably take a sabbatical next year continuing a fine career in dramatics. Bill Schmitt is graduating and considering a position with the FBI or some other law enforcement agency. A knee injury slowed Bill on the court, but his fine talent was not to go unnoticed. men at a local bistro (Eddie's) voted Bill the "Most Underrated Player" award. Finally, recognition must be given to Brian Corcoran and Dan Greene, two sophomores who came out late this season, and will be heard from next season undoubtedly.

On behalf of the team I would like to thank everyone who supported the team this year and stuck with us in this the "Winter of Our Discontent." Special thanks must go here to Mr. Len Cane, a fine and very talented gentleman.

Future Bright for UVM Puckmen

By Fred Schlapp

The 1966-67 Vermont hockey season has come to a close. The record, despite the fine coaching job by Jim Cross, was a disastrous 4-15. This record is deceptive, as 6 of UVM's losses were by a one goal margin. The first line scored all but 14 of the team's goals. The lack of scoring of the second and third lines handicapped the Cats greatly, and it is a tribute to the this personable young coach that UVM made as good a showing as they did. For those fans who hope to watch Vermont hockey grow, they should not have to wait too long, as the prospects for the next season are excellent. There should be a three-way fight for the goalie's job with Hynes having the inside track because of his Varsity experience. He will be pushed hard by sophomores Jack Lawrence and Russ Watson. The defense should see Schroder and Krebs at the points. The two wings positions on the first line will be held down by three-year veterans Semler and Roy, and in all probability, if he works on his marks, will be centered by sophomore Jeff MacLaughlin. The second line will consist entirely of sophomores. Jimmy Yeates, the first Canadian player to wear the Green and Gold will probably center for Bobby Krebs and John Gussen. The second defense will see George Kreiner at one point, but the other spot is a toss-up between Steve "Jumbo" Lane and Chris "Moose" Uihlein, both of whom have tremendous size and good mobility. Bart Frisbie figures as the sixth defensive man. The third line is completely up in the air, with the exception of veteran center Curt Tobey; the other wing spots will be battled for by Walt Kelly, George Kuntz, Peter Meyer, Bob Martin, Dick Catron, and Eddie Danks.

With all this depth, the Cats can look forward to the best season since Vermont resumed intercollegiate hockey. For the first time, with a 24 man limit, the coach will be forced to cut men from his squad.

WRA Sports

The Women's Recreation Association, this year under the leadership of Nancy Nelson, has increased its membership to include all women students. The hope was that such a change would bring about increased participation.

Besides intramural tournaments in activities such as volleyball, track, basketball, and badminton and clubs in other activities such as skating and dance. WRA has sponsored tennis, swimming, field hockey, basketball, and ski teams on an intercollegiate level.

The Women's Physical Education Department is willing to offer its services for any other sport in which an interest is shown. One of the major problems, however, seems to be that of the un-informed student. This will be one of the front-running problems for next year's president, Debbie Arnold ('68) and her fellow officers.

Lee Roy is Vermont's leading scorer in all-time hockey play. In three years of varsity competition, the native of Denmark, Me., has scored 45 goals.

Students Fight Curfews

Relationship Between Sex And Curfews Questioned

By Larry Myott

The scene is on any campus in the United States where a curfew now exists or has existed in the past. A parked car at the back of a dormitory or sorority house, the action is hot and heavy, and all of a sudden the "clock stops", two minutes to curfew at 11:30 p.m. This is the scene that is repeated on this campus several times each night of the school year.

Now the scene changes and we move to a different campus, a more liberal campus in another era of sex morals thought by the administration.

CORNELL'S OPEN ROOMS

A recent article in the "Cornell Daily Sun" has a headline stated in the following manner: SEXUAL INTERCOURSE PROPOSAL HEARD BY EXECUTIVE BOARD. The Student Government Committee on Open House legislation presented to the Executive Board of Student Government a plan that would allow "sexual intercourse" in the dormitories providing that it did not interfere with the "rights and sensitivities" of others. The Executive Board passed the resolution temporarily providing that some of the wording in the plan be revised and made clearer before it is to be presented to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, for final approval.

This new proposal would change the existing rules to allow the light to be turned off and the door of the room to be locked during the co-ed study hours, now existing at Cornell, every Wednesday night between the hours of 7 and 10:30 p.m. This proposal states that the door may be locked and the light turned off if both the male student and his date desires. The only person that could bring a case before the Men's Residence Hall Judiciary Board would be the person directly offended by the action within the closed and darkened room.

FRATS OPEN TOO

Another part of the proposal is that open houses be scheduled every Friday and Saturday night from 8 p.m. until one-half hour before the girls curfew.

Recent interviews with some of the Cornell undergraduates point out that only a small portion of the 14,000 students at Cornell are behind this proposed action. The reason is obvious, Cornell male students are members of fraternities that already have a similar plan in service.

Seventy-two per cent of the undergraduate men at the institution are active members of the fifty-two fraternities on campus and each fraternity sets its own rules and regulations concerning the actions of its Brothers and their dates in the house. At the present time one of the big issues in one house is whether or not they should be allowed to lock the doors of their rooms while they have a woman in their company.

The curfew hours at Cornell are very similar to those here at the University of Vermont, but with the existing regulations one student has stated, "If a girl has not lost her virginity by her senior year, she won't lose it in an extra couple of hours".

Another school has given its senior girls an unlimited number of late passes, while the underclass women still have their 11:30 curfew. However, they are allowed seven 2:30 curfews and five 1:30 curfews throughout the school year.

The Dean of Women at this particular college says that the passes are subject to review at any time and the privileges can be revoked if it is felt that they are being abused. It seems to be the general opinion at this school that the studies would not suffer because the girls can regulate themselves to meet their study needs and requirements.

AND AT UVM?

Is this in the future of UVM, or will we continue to have the same standards in the future?

Rep. Stafford Introduces Draft Bill

Congressman Robert T. Stafford introduced legislation into the House February 20th proposing substantial changes in the Selective Services laws.

His first suggested change was in age priority. Instead of taking older registrants first, Congressman Stafford's bill stipulates that 18 1/2 year olds would be drafted first.

College deferments, under his bill, would be continued, but once the deferment expires these individuals would be placed back in the pool (Continued on Page 5)

Judge Douglas To Speak Here

Justice of the United States Supreme Court William O. Douglas will speak on "Points of Rebellion" on April 3 at 8 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel.

Justice Douglas, a Democrat, was appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Justice Douglas has served almost 28 years as a Supreme Court Justice and is an acknowledged expert on corporations, bankruptcy and business regulation.

As one of FDR's inner advisors on business and trust busting he has been considered a liberal or left-liberal, yet, he was once quoted as calling himself "... conservative sort of fellow from the old school, ..."

The author of numerous books, an outdoor enthusiast, Mr. Justice Douglas is a man of diverse interests.

This talk will include topics on personal privacy, curtailment of individual rights, invasion of privacy, methods of government investigation and the relationship of the CIA to the modern campus. The talk will be open to the public.

Should Prestige Supplant Ability In Faculty Tenure?

By M. Furst

During the past week, the CYNIC has conducted a survey concerning the teaching ability of Mr. John Eurich, who is being dismissed from the faculty at the end of this semester because he has not made enough progress towards his Ph.D. in the four years he has been here.

Of the 76 students in Mr. Eurich's 4 classes, 44 were contacted. Each student was given a choice of four possible answers to the question of Mr. Eurich's ability, excellent, good, fair, or poor.

Thirty-three of the students rated him as excellent, and four said that they felt he was a good teacher. Seven of the students responding put Mr. Eurich between good and excellent. No students answered either fair or poor.

Paul Ryan, Phi Delta Theta, said that he thought "... the University is putting emphasis on the wrong aspects of teaching when they require a teacher to have a degree after his name. I know of many Ph.D.'s who are less capable in the classroom than Mr. Eurich.

"... Mr. Eurich is capable not only with the material he teaches, but also provides a stimulating and intellectual atmosphere within the classroom."

Ryan said that he was an average student in German and that, although the grade he received in German last semester kept him off the Dean's List, he chose to be in one of Mr. Eurich's classes again this semester.

Other students stressed the individual attention Mr. Eurich gives them, his thorough knowledge of the material, and the clear and interesting way he teaches it.

Second Leadership Conference Held

MIDDLEBURY - "Regular student groups are on the sidelines of the central concerns and needs of a substantial number of today's students," declared William Pickens, UVM alumnus, in his keynote speech to the second annual Leadership Training Conference here Friday.

Pickens, a personnel and labor relations specialist with Western Electric, addressed some 50 UVM students at the SA-sponsored meeting. The conference was aimed at increasing the participants' awareness of student leaders' responsibilities.

The former SA president who graduated in 1958, went on to say, "Protests and demonstrations seem legion, even commonplace on our campuses. But the leadership of these movements is apart from the more traditional student leadership.

"If I were a student leader," Pickens continued, "I would be deeply troubled by the informal leaders who seize the forums of concern and express the sentiments and passions of the student body.

"I believe I would want somehow to incorporate these interests, goals and needs into my general programs," he said, "and exercise real leadership."

Following his address, the conference delegates formed discussion groups to study issues of student government and organization.

President Lyman Rowell and Dr. Clinton Cook, vice president for academic affairs, together with several other faculty representatives, attended the meeting.

The conference was chaired by Richard B. Kabat, '69, of Long Island.

WHODUNIT?

To whom it may concern:

We, a select group of respected students who wish to promote fun and games on the University of Vermont campus, have requisitioned for an indefinite period of time a large sign which only a few days ago hung above the counter outside the Director of Student Activities office.

Oddly enough the sign read "Director of Student Activities."

The sign has been hidden on campus and we will be sending clues to Mr. Bain which will assist him in recovering the sign.

Clue #1 reads:
My dear Mr. Bain,
This is all not in vain.
So, we'll say it in rhyme

You may get back your sign

To make you feel better,
In a subsequent letter.

Our clues are quite clever,
Our brains are the best.
Within the next week
Clue two's on your desk.

We are writing you (the CYNIC) for three reasons:

1. To inform Mr. Bain that he should not take this personally.

2. To inform the University Administration that we will be requisitioning other things from them before the end of the semester (President and Dean included), and clues will always be given.

3. To allow the students to take part in the hunts if they so desire.

Many UVM Students Join Peace Corps

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The University of Vermont is the nation's 117th ranking source of Peace Corps Volunteers, according to figures recently released by the agency.

In 1967, 64 former students, including 32 now overseas, had served in one of 56 countries that have hosted Volunteers since 1961.

After adding eight host countries to its roster in 1966, the Peace Corps is expecting continued expansion — by as many as ten countries — in 1967.

More than 13,000 Volunteers currently serve in 52 nations and territories, including about 4,000 in the five largest programs — India, Nigeria, the Philippines, Columbia and Brazil.

The past year was one of milestones for the Peace Corps as it marked the return of the 10,000th Volunteer to complete service and the dispatch in November to Micronesia in the Pacific of the 25,000th Volunteer to serve overseas.

THE DRAFT

Lehigh University — A radical change of the draft has been recommended to President Johnson by the National Advisory Commission on Selective Service. After a seven-month study on the draft, the commission concluded that the youngest of all qualified men should be drafted first, starting at age 19, and that they should be inducted in a random and impartial order. The majority of the commission would not cancel the deferments of students who were already enrolled for degrees when the system changed.

The recommendation that the biggest proportion of draftees come from the 19 year-old group followed suggestions of Col. Samuel H. Hayes, director of military psychology at the U.S. Military Academy. He stated last December that "if not inducted after their 19th year or not deferred for cause, they should be excused from further liability for military service."

The commission, besides rejecting the elimination of the draft, also rejected proposals for compulsory national service of some kind such as the Peace Corps or VISTA as alternatives to military duty.

University of Miami — Polls of college and university student opinion regarding the draft were released February 2 by the United States National Student Association. "The results of campus-wide referenda on over twenty campuses were strikingly consistent.

More than 90 per cent of American students feel that a nation can be justified in conscripting its citizens into the military.

Honors Day Recognized Soph. Aides

By Judy Knowlton,

Secretary of Sophomore Aides
New Sophomore Aides will be elected in the spring and will be recognized on Honors Day.

Sophomore Aides is a Sophomore Women's Honor Society and Service Organization, whose aim is to give recognition to outstanding sophomore women, and to render service to the University. It represents a group of girls who have maintained good scholarship, and have promise of potential leadership and willingness to serve.

Sophomore Aides was organized with Staff and Sandal, the Junior Women's Honorary, to assist Mortar Board in many of its functions. The Sophomore Aides work under the Assistant Dean of Women in performing various jobs on campus.

When Sophomore Aides was first organized, it assisted WSGA and SA in the Freshman Orientation Program, then held in the fall. The girls were also in charge of a Big-Little Sister Sing.

Today, the Sophomore Aides still carry on the tradition of helping orient incoming students with their publication of the "Dear Susie" booklet.

In the fall, these girls assist Staff and Sandal with Homecoming. They help decorate the gym, sell Mums, and sell tickets to the Homecoming Dance.

The Sophomore Aides aided in the President's Reception last fall, and with the recent tea for Dean Gribbons. Throughout the year the girls staff ballot tables for several campus elections.

Last week many UVM coeds took advantage of the Redstone — Main Campus bus service according to Vermont Transit Line officials.

The bus line reported that they served at least 350 students per day, except one. The amount they were guaranteed by the S.A.

Service has been discontinued until cold weather strikes again. Warm weather, vacations and upcoming finals render further service unnecessary.

Joan M. Hagerty and Judith P. Blackburn, both junior Home Economics majors at UVM, are spending their second semester at Merrill-Palmer Institute in Detroit, Michigan.

The Merrill-Palmer Institute is the only center of its kind devoted to teaching, research, and community service in the special fields of human development and family life. Its worldwide reputation is based upon more than forty years pioneering in the study of individuals and families, and their relationships with each other and with the community.

Joan, from Ann Arbor, Mich., and Judy, from Washburn, Wisconsin, will receive credit for their work at Merrill-Palmer and will be returning to the University to complete their degree.

Tag Day Called Successful By Chairman

Tag Day, the fund-raising event for the Student Ambassador Program, was hailed successful by Barry Anton, '69, from Deal Park, N.J., chairman of the fund-raising committee.

Members of the PCIL Program wish to extend a note of thanks to all who participated in the drive, and to the student body for their cooperation. With this money, the outlook for sending another ambassador on a nine week summer stay in India or Japan looks bright.

Tag Day is an effort to procure money from the student body to send a UVM student abroad every summer under the Student Ambassador Program, nationally located in Putney, Vermont.

Class officers form committees of students to try to obtain money from the student body for this event. The donor receives a PCIL bookmark.

The class officers and members of PCIL hope the student body recognizes the purpose of the program and if anyone has any questions, the members will be glad to answer them.

779 Earn Dean's List During Fall Semester

University of Vermont dean's list honors were earned by 779 undergraduate students in the fall semester.

Of the total, 443 came from within the state. A dean's list student must have earned an average of 3.0 (85 and above) or higher and carried 12 or more hours.

To The Editor.

Assuming that examples are the best evidence I will cite four. The first occurs on page one of the March 17 issue where it was printed that Mr. Randolph Blackwell holds a B.S. degree in "Sociology" from North Carolina A & T College. I hope this is not the case. The second was your heading of the article concerning the campus group creative drama UPSHOT and Mr. Quackenbush which read "Upshot Paused". Taken from con-

P.S. I particularly enjoyed the

it was very well done. Mr. Minsatirical adeptness to write his column. Now I hope for con-

CYNIC

UPON

To The Editor:

Last week's Cynic was the funniest I have read since the squabble over the legitimacy of Gordon Sprotwell, his wife and/or widow and his mother. Mr. T.R. Varricchione's letter about journalistic responsibility was a masterpiece of comic doubletalk, especially his bit about the need for "objective" viewing in M. Minsky's column. I mean, Mr. Varricchione's primary objection to Minsky is Minsky's "ugly pallor" and his "pseudo-psychedelic appearance." The contrast of this highly subjective dislike with Mr. Varricchione's plea for objective writing proves to be highly comic. Unless, of course, it was unintentional. It would be interesting to run a picture of Mr. Varricchione alongside one of Mr. Minsky to see which one of them is truly psy-

ANTISEPTIC

By Howard Savin

Spring is just around the corner. Soon the grass will reappear, as will budding new leaves, maple syrup, and the throbbing drone of the campus motorcycle sportsmen. Freshness and rebirth will seem apparent as reflected by the annual upsurge in sexual promiscuity, drinking, and stockingless feet sprouting from Bass Weejuns. Things will again be joyous on the UVM campus and 5000 kids will go about unrestrained for four or five frantic weeks. The sun will shine and the beer will flow (illegal at fraternity parties)!

To be young is joyous. There can be no doubt about the pleasures derived from a brief pause in the academic regimentation. Unfortunately all is not a bed of roses. Both petals and thorns await the adventurer. The Spirit of Daytona and Fort Lauderdale will soon give way to Burlington, final exams, graduation (for some), and the outside world of real people and their problems. As a matter of fact, it may be said that nature, in her own special way, serves to lessen trauma in those still naive and unprepared. It may be noted with caution that the time is fast approaching when each of us will have to venture out from the toy cradle and play a part in the never-ending game. In any case, let us hope that April showers will bring May flowers.

chedelic and which only pseudo-psychedelic. It might be fun also to include a picture of Miss Kitty McGinniss, who criticized Mr. Minsky's methods of criticism on the basis that he is (to Miss McGinniss) personally repulsive. I wonder how Mr. Minsky finds Miss McGinniss — repulsive, aromatic, stacked? or maybe he doesn't find her at all because she spends all her waking hours in in front of a mirror making sure she doesn't look repulsive. Perhaps it's better to be repulsive and not look so, and vice versa.

And there was excellent satire in last week's CYNIC also, especially by the anonymous author of the Antiseptic. I wonder if anonymous realizes that there are actually people who feel in earnest the tongue-in-cheek things said in the Antiseptic? I mean, his statements about the unbelievable of "someone" daring to "attack the 'Esprit de Corps' which enables mento face death without question" are not really such ironic overstatements as they are obviously intended to be; there are patriots and chauvinists around who go really gungho for this "dying without question" bit. But I think the author of this excellent satire, the Antiseptic, needs to be identified. Author! Author!

Of course there were other goodies, such as poor Mr. Peter Gross' letter, in which he took a satire on the Marines all too seriously and tried to prove that the Marines are in fact very good killers . . . I think this is all too obvious in the eyes of the world. One of the funniest things about March 17th's CYNIC was the setting of the type, with a double-spaced headline that if scanned quickly came out as "DRUG PATZER," and columns that were abruptly cut off and ended up at the bottom of another column several pages away. I would also like to point out a great catch-all word that has been appearing more and more frequently in the CYNIC as a descriptive prefix for the explanation of anything apparently bad: pseudo. Next week Mr. Minsky will no longer be repulsive, he will be pseudo-repulsive.

KENT SPEAKS ON LEADERSHIP

Dear Editor:

A friend of mine asked my wife if Peter Gross was for real. (He thought Mr. Gross's letter was satire). To my friend's amazement, my wife informed him that I knew Mr. Gross and that he was indeed for real.

I do not plan on joining in on the current mud-slinging. I am sure Mr. Gross can sling it much harder than I can. (Any way I am saving my mud for Mr. Klonsky, our resident critic).

Yet, I would like to say a few things. First, there are many kinds of leadership and many ways of leading. Standing in front of 500 men and having them ask how high when you say jump is only one form. It is in the same category with a horse trainer or the operator of a Skinner Box (as Mr. Franzoni suggested).

I have had the feeling of leading a group of men and having them respond to my command and I detest it. I do not want to be the controller of mechanical things and I do not want to be a mechanical thing. I refuse to command and I refuse to be commanded. I also refuse to lead killers and I refuse to be a killer.

Yes, Mr. Gross, that is Pacifism! And so be it.

All I can say about Mr. Gross and his "leaders" is "O brave new world that has such people in it." (That is satire).

Sincerely,
Jeff Kent '68

QUACKENBUSH EXPLAINS UPSHOT

Dear Sir:

In reference to Mr. Klonsky's article about myself and UPSHOT, I wish to correct his assumption that I "initiated" UPSHOT, while simultaneously thanking him for his review and Mr. Minsky's as well.

I did not "initiate" UPSHOT. It was begun last year by M. David Storti who is now doing graduate work in Drama at Arizona. It is part of the University Players and it will not be allowed to "die" as long as it fulfills a need — the need to express.

Sincerely,
Jan Quackenbush, '67

HAMMER-THROWING DEFENDED

Dear Mr. Minsky:

It behooves me to justify my one hour-a-day workout for the past two years at UVM.

Last week, you placed hammer-throwing with other mentally-taxing outdoor sports such as leap-frog, fox-and-geese, and hide-and-seek.

I would refer you to the February, 1967 issue of Athletic Journal. It would seem, after reading the article on this event, that there is more to the hammer-throw than the other sports above mentioned.

EDITORS'S NOTE:
The CYNIC wishes to apologize to Peter F. Gross, '67 for the misspelling of his name.

Are you addicted to the Dew?

MCCUNE SIGNS OFF

To the Editor:

The articles for the CYNIC have been interesting to do. I hope that they have been diversified enough to have been interesting. As you know my major purpose has been to help in the broadening of the horizons of the UVM students.

In Singapore, I visited the University and had a good tour of the island as directed by the local geographers. I saw the training college for teachers at Penang. Hopefully, I will see the technical university in Bombay today.

Most of my time on board ship has been devoted to trying to organize my notes. I've been using a tape recorder for taking field notes and these have to be transcribed and analyzed. I've certainly gathered enough material to keep me busy for many months to come. The research project really has gone much better than I anticipated it would.

We expect to spend most of April traveling in Europe, including a tour of Germany and, hopefully Czechoslovakia. I'll be visiting UNESCO in Paris to get some more material for the project.

Please give my best to all my friends at the CYNIC. I presume that new editors have taken over. I wish them well in their task of helping to educate the UVM students. I hope that this series of articles has helped to do that.

Sincerely yours,
Shannon McCune

SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

It has become fashionable in certain left-wing political circles to speak of the United States as being a new Nazi Germany, eager to spread "Pax Americana" upon a helpless world. These critics take delight in pointing out such an obvious case of American "aggression" as the Bay of Pigs, the Dominican Republic, U.S. supported actions in the Congo, the Laotian affair (during which the CIA supported two of the opposing parties,) Guatemala, Indonesia, Egypt, Iraq, (the last three incidents being simple attempts at subversion and/or overthrow of unco-operative governments). Needless to say, these actions, far from being aggressive, were simple actions of "advance protective defense." The war against Vietnam is the result of a highly sophisticated "Pataphysical philosophy which declares that the only way to prevent aggression is to escalate one's defensive actions.

Furthermore, Germany indulged in genocide, killing an estimated five million Jews. This figure is open to doubt and in a recent article in the "American Mercury" the thesis was offered that a mere million were slain. In the sixteenth century the estimated Indian population of North America was about one million two hundred thousand; in 1950 the population was 300,000, and it has been rising ever since. Thus, about 900,000 Indians were destroyed by the white invaders, directly or indirectly. Simple mathematics proves that the Germans killed 5.55555 times more people than the Americans and hence we are 5.55555 times better (more moral) than they were. In central Mexico the Indian population, which consisted largely of Aztecs, declined within a period of seventy years by sixteen million. Of course, it must be remembered that the barbarous Aztecs indulged in the pagan ritual of human sacrifice, which involved the removal of the heart from the still living victim; the Spaniards loathed such immoral practices and did their best to prevent them.

During the Second World War the Germans employed some four million prisoners as slaves. During the Nineteenth Century some three million negroes were used for similar purposes. Of course, since the emancipation, our colored folk have been allowed to flourish and thrive and now their population stands at some twenty million and they occupy large sections of American cities, where they lead productive and meaningful lives, providing middle and upper class America with much needed domestics, sports figures, and entertainers.

In Nazi Germany, as in Czarist Russia, oppressive and totalitarian draft laws forced thousands of conscientious people to flee the country or accept harsh imprisonment. Imprisonment was often the sentence for the most harmless actions, such as the desecration of a flimsy government document. Czarist Russia, in particular, indulged in a policy of selecting members of certain minority groups to serve in the army; people of better standing were allowed to receive certain exemptions or if drafted were offered secure positions as officers. Such situations could hardly exist in America where dedicated and devoted citizens, all representing the people, personally, and not arbitrarily, select those who are to be honored by serving in the Armed Forces.

Those who compare America to Nazi Germany only reveal their fantastic stupidity and lack of thought. Frankly, such beliefs are nothing but desperate bull, which they continually spout. I think (furthermore) that they are repulsive.

"Confront the Basic Irony"

By Larry Myott

Cornell didn't blush. They faced what to everyone is becoming increasingly clear. They were willing to openly confront a basic irony in our culture.

The materialistic excuse for condemning pre-marital sex no longer exists: Contraceptives are readily available. Religious bans are lifting. It is no longer the duty of every man to produce children, but quite the opposite, the world is overpopulated and there is the vital need to reduce the population or we will soon destroy ourselves.

These are the issues which have been continually confronting us in the last few years. The irony of it all lies in the basic attitude toward sex which remains dominant. In effect this is: 'A great percentage of the young are revolting against the moral ban on pre-marital sex passed down to them by the older generation. We are willing to face the fact that they are justified in rebelling. What are we going to do to replace this moral code?

The very fact that the old moral code needs replacing automatically assumes that our basic sexuality is somehow wrong, that if the nasty god Eros were let loose in the world at large, there would be some sort of deterioration.

Instead of using subversive measures such as the revolt of Berkeley's free-sex movement, Cornell has merely faced the truth, lifted rules which were created under a passe moral code, and in effect accepted what was obviously already there.

They have let Eros loose at Cornell.

Will intellectual goals and material advancement really corrode because we openly accept our other basic nature?

Stafford on Draft

Local boards, who would be furnished national standards on which to base deferments, would submit those found eligible to a national pool from which draftees would then be picked at random.

When President Johnson sent his recommendations on the draft to Congress on March 6th, he ducked the issues of the national lottery and student deferments; however, he was in favor of calling up younger men first.

The Committee on Armed Services, of which Congressman Stafford is a member, will be holding hearings on this important issue. In his report Stafford writes that he "is sure the Congress will be quite specific in any changes which it makes in the draft laws, not allowing the President to make changes by 'executive order'."

UVM Students Visit Capital of Canada

By Alice Dupuis

Twenty-one UVM students saw the government of Canada first-hand recently on the annual Canadian Area Studies trip to Ottawa. The schedule included a tour of Parliament Building, observance of a session of Commons, and luncheon with members of Parliament.

During the tour, the group met Speaker of the House of Commons Lamoureux. He explained the session to be held that morning and what his duties were. He then invited the group back at the end of the session to answer any questions they might have.

The luncheon in the afternoon was very interesting and exciting. It was informal. Each of the MP's gave a short talk on his party and answered questions ranging from Canadian elections to Canada's view of the Viet Nam situation.

The MP's were a representative group. They came from Nova Scotia and British Columbia. All important parties were represented and the major nationalities. The diversity provided a wide area of possible discussion.

A visit to Carleton University, was also scheduled. Built within the last 25 years, Carleton seems to lack the tradition of UVM. The buildings are concrete, glass, brick, and tile. A network of tunnels connect the buildings.

Here, the group attended an inter-disciplinary seminar - something similar to the Area Studies - in which a situation is observed from the views of the various disciplines.

In the evening, there was a discussion by Gad Horowitz and Claude Ryan on "Canadian Nationalism and National Goals." It was part of the Centennial Celebration.

During the entire, three-day trip, the group was given the royal treatment. The Canadians are very pleased with the UVM program. They enjoy seeing the students and explaining just what Canada is.

Canada is a nation of diverse culture and geography. It is something very different from the U.S. yet in some ways very similar. This reporter, for one, hopes to visit Canada again next year.

Playtimers 1967 Tour Features "Many Moons"

Three Performances Scheduled At Arena March 23, 24, 25

This year a small company of dedicated students will again devote their spring vacation to bring live theater to elementary school students in Vermont and Quebec.

"Many Moons", written by James Thurber and adapted by Charlotte Chorpenning is this season's offering.

The plot is about a Princess who wants her father to get the moon for her. "It's a fun show" Director, Ann Goyette '68, enthusiastically declared, "It's a lovely world the characters live in."

The joy and beauty of that world is more fully realized by a portable set of black and white with pink and blue accents. The set pieces consist of a series of standing arches and windows, with the many arches being the constant motif. The technical director is Lou Blumenfeld '68.

The all-student cast is as follows:

Cynicia - Jill Bosworth.
Royal Nurse and Paretta - Diane Birt.
Lord High Chamberlain - Fred Finkelstein.
Royal Wizard - Bill Levy.
Mathematician - Ann Goyette.
Jester - Roy Zuckerman.

King - Bruce Woods.

For the first time in Playtimers' history, three performances will be given at the Arena Theatre before the show goes on the road.

Performances will be on March 23 and 24 at 7:30 PM, and on March 25 at 2:00 PM.

Tickets will be on sale at 50¢ at the Box Office in the Arena Theatre or can be reserved by calling ext. 711.

The first performance of the tour itself will be March 27 in Middlebury and Rochester.

During the following week the group will appear in Bennington, Brattleboro, Guilford, Putney, Londonderry, Chester, Perkinsville, Hartland, Hartford, and Fairlee. The tour will end with one performance in Granby, Quebec, on Mon., April 3.

The entire company is preparing eagerly for the widely known and extremely popular annual University Players Playtimers Tour. Though much work and long hours go into production, the company always finds it a very rewarding experience for themselves and the eager young spectators to whom they play.

Cleveland Orchestra Is Superb

By K. Klonsky

The final Red Lane Series was fortunate to have Szell and his magnificent Cleveland Orchestra for the evening of March 16.

Carl Maria von Weber's "Overture to 'Oberon'" was the first offering on the program. Inspired by Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Weber's overture is both a precursor and an example of Romantic and suggestive music.

The orchestra excelled in the challenging "Symphony No. 41 in C Major ('The Jupiter') by Mozart. This masterpiece is the last symphony of an incomparable musical genius. The touching and deceptive simplicity of the first three movements leads into one of the greatest final movements in all music. This allegro molto finale, with his numerous contrasting themes audits spirited motion, was interpreted with Szell's usual reverence for the composer.

The second half of the program consisted of two works, Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan," and excerpts from Maurice Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis et Chloe." The orchestra was at its best with Ravel's flowing and impressionistic dance suite.

The standing ovation for Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra was ample testimony to an evening of superb musical entertainment.

McCune Visits Korea Joint Security Area

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor Geography

One of the most moving experiences an American may have in these days of international tension is to visit the Joint Security Area near Panmunjon in Korea. Here American and other UN officers are literally eye-ball to eye-ball with North Korean and Chinese Communist representatives. Enjoined from speaking to them, American and South Korean tourists walk past Chinese and North Korean observers in stony silence. I was there on Friday, the 13th of January, - a cold day with a biting north wind. The meeting was being held at the request of the North Korean senior member to protest a claimed violation of the truce in the off-shore waters of Korea.

The meetings of the Military Armistice Commission are highly formalized, like some ancient ritual dance. UN statements are fully translated into Korean and Chinese, Communist statements into English and Chinese. The two groups were separated by a narrow table set exactly on the truce line. On the day of my visit on the north side sat four Korean generals. The fifth seat was vacant; it was that of the Communist Chinese general who had walked over a protocol matter some months ago. However, behind the Korean generals there was a table of Chinese Communist observers; they were wearing Red Guard buttons for the first time. Other tables were filled with North Korean observers. All of them were impeccably dressed in warm sharply pressed uniforms and appeared to be a highly competent and alert group.

On the south side of the table were the UN representatives. The Senior Member was an American Major General (the post rotates every six months among the U.S. service). Flanking him were other UN officers, including representatives of the fifteen other nations who fought in the Korean War and representatives of the Republic of Korea, though the ROK did not sign the Armistice. In tables back of the UN representatives were staff officers and observers from each of the nations.

The stark wooden meeting building is lined with narrow windows through which visitors can peer down on the tense participants. The day of my visit there was a group of well-dressed Communist visitors; the meeting may have been called in order to impress them. They were countered by a larger group of South Korean tourists, including a number of well-dressed elderly ladies. A bus load of American soldiers and a handful of American civilian tourists made up the rest of the group peering in the windows. The spiel which we were given before the meeting by the U.S. military guide left much to be desired, for with numerous snide remarks it emphasized the funny and bizarre aspects of the truce talks and gave practically no emphasis to the deadly serious nature of this type of negotiation and confrontation.

Also observing the talks and walking around the area were members of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission; Czechs and Poles (who conversed mainly with the North Koreans), Swedes and Swiss. They added a variation of uniforms to the scene and were the only persons who were at liberty to talk to all groups. Even the buildings in the area became part of the confrontation. First, the Communists built a small Pagoda-like affair for tourist use; the ROK countered with a more elaborate structure - Freedom House, with similar observation platform but a few feet higher. The height of flag poles and even chairs became a part of the contest.

Though we could not converse except among ourselves, we could walk freely in the area and take as many pictures as we wished. From an observation point set along the truce line we could look across at the mountains of North Korea and could see the bridge across which the exchange of prisoners had taken place in 1953.

To reach Panmunjon one goes north from Seoul and soon comes to the first check point. This part of the 151 mile truce line which stretches across Korea is defended by American troops. In this area are different types of military installations, many camps and much military traffic. Finally one comes to the Demilitarized Zone, - a strip 4000 meters wide along the Military Demarcation Line. To a geographer the DMZ is fascinating, for this is a land without people, an example of what the original landscape might have been. The pine trees had not been denuded of their lower branches by wood-hungry farmers. Dense undergrowth made thickets instead of the usual clean-raked hill slopes. Pampas grass covered the unused paddy fields on the valley floors and former dry fields on the lower slopes were left to scrub and grass. Wild life continues to multiply in this unusual sanctuary. I saw a pair of beautiful cranes, a traditional Korean symbol of peace and long life, looking oddly incongruous here.

For over thirteen years the Armed Truce has dominated the life of Korea on both sides of the DMZ. Expenditures for military preparedness and vigilance are very great. A rigidly proscribed number of troops patrol each side of the Line and incidents are common occurrences, particularly as the North Koreans constantly probe for weaknesses in the UN defenses. Close to a 150,000 persons have been guests of the UN for a tour of the Joint Security Area at Panmunjon. I wish many more Americans might visit there, for it is vivid and forceful example of one of the most explosive areas of 'unfinished business' in this tension-filled world.

SNEA MEETING HELD

The Student National Education Association will hold its last meeting of the year, Wednesday, April 5, at 7:30 p.m. in 211 Waterman. Mr. James Cotter, Executive Director of the Josephine B. Baird Children's Center, will speak on the program of the Center and will show slides of the work being done.

The Children's Center is a residential treatment center in Burlington for emotionally disturbed children between the ages of five and twelve.

Preceding the speaker, the election of new officers will take place. All members and other interested persons are cordially invited to attend.

IFC TO HOLD RETREAT

The Interfraternity Council will be holding its annual retreat the last weekend of vacation, April first and second, at Mt. Philo. Attending the day and a half long conference will be the new fraternity presidents, the IFC executive board, Dr. Perrine, Bob Lobel, and Dean Patzer. Workshops will be held in which important topics such as rushing and colonization will be discussed.

ATTENTION SENIORS?

Academic caps and gowns are available for rental in the former Waterman stacks at the head of the stairs on the second floor from April 3 through April 14 at the following times:

Monday-Friday
9:00 a.m. - 11:00 a.m.
1:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.

For further information concerning caps and gowns and Honors Day (April 17) note announcements on the residence hall bulletin boards, and the senior bulletin board, lower Waterman.

CERAMICS DISPLAYED

George Scratchard's one-man ceramic show will be on display March 15-April 9 at the Fleming Museum.

Mr. Scratchard, an established designer-craftsman who is well known for his large-scale architectural pottery, came to the University of Vermont in the Summer of 1966 to develop a new program in ceramics here.

A graduate of Antioch College, he taught at the Shelburne Craft School and in the summer programs at Goddard College. He and his family live in Charlotte next to his workshop and showroom.

FINANCIAL EXECUTIVE INSTITUTES PANEL

The Financial Executive's Institute will conduct a panel discussion on "Careers in Financial Management" on April 3, at 3:00 in 101 Votey.

Professor Gary K. Michael of the Department of Economics and Business Administration will act as moderator for the panel consisting of Mr. James A. Richardson, Comptroller of Kidder Press Company, Inc., Mr. Allen L. Spurr, Assistant Treasurer of Arthur D. Little, Inc., and Mr. Jack F. Sturzenberger, Vice President and Treasurer of Green Mountain Power Corporation.

All interested students are invited to attend.

FULBRIGHT LECTURESHIPS AVAILABLE

The Fulbright-Hays Program for senior scholars is still accepting applications for sixty-eight overseas lectureships for 1967-68 yet unfilled.

Dean William H. Macmillan of the Graduate College, Faculty Fulbright Adviser also has copies of the basic application for the 1968-69 program of overseas university lecturing and advanced research.

A list is in Dean Macmillan's office of senior Fulbright scholars from abroad who are interested in invitations to give occasional lectures on topics relating to their countries or their special academic fields.

COAST GUARD OCS RECRUITING

The Coast Guard Officer Candidate School is seeking qualified senior and graduate applicants. After 17 weeks at the Training Center in Yorktown, Virginia, they will be commissioned as ensigns and serve three years active duty.

Information on the U.S. Coast Guard Officer Candidate School may be obtained from Commandant (PTP-2), U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D.C. 20226 or the nearest Coast Guard Recruiter.

EUROPEAN JOBS OFFERED

The International Travel Establishment "DO-IT-YOURSELF" program provides thousands of job opportunities in Europe without binding students to any program.

They also offer very low cost student tours (less than $100 for three months in Europe including transportation.) The tours specialize in visiting European student haunts by night, while taking in cultural highlights by day.

For full information including a prospectus with job opportunities and application, send $1. (for postage and handling), to: International Travel Est., Dept. "Do It Yourself," 68 Herren-gasse, FL-9490 Vaduz, Principality of Liechtenstein (Switzerland).

YACHTING SUMMER POSITIONS

The North American Yachting Association is soliciting summer job applications. Due to the results of a recent survey of sail and power vessel owners on the East coast, West coast, Gulf area and the Great Lakes, applications from college students or graduates are being accepted (no full time employment). Employment for experienced as well as inexperienced young men and women of good character is available. Facility in cooking or child care is particularly helpful. Crewing affords the opportunity to acquire or sharpen boating skills, and visit new places while earning reasonable income in pleasant outdoor surroundings.

TO APPLY: Send NAYA a resume using the form below and your application will be reproduced and forwarded to over 3,000 owners of large craft.

NOTE: Our reproduction system requires that all resumes be clearly typed with black ribbon (or hand printed with dark black ink) on a white 3" x 5" card using the exact format outlined below including each item with appropriate number (i.e. (1) John Doe (2) 1704 Main St.)

- (1) Name
- (2) Address
- (3) Phone No.
- (4) Age
- (5) School
- (6) Available from: . . . to . . . in (state general area(s))
- (7) Previous relevant experience
- (8) Two Personal references
- (9) Preference (sailing or cruising, etc.)
- (10) Other pertinent facts
- (11) Two or more applicants wishing to work together, state this preference.

THE INSIDER

Editor's Note: Steve Kunken, a sophomore second baseman from Oceanside, N.Y., will be the CYNIC "Insider" during the baseball season.

By Steve Kunken

With spring now three days old and warm zephyrs gliding gently across Lake Champlain, the 1967 University of Vermont baseball team is anxiously awaiting the start of a very optimistic-looking campaign. Having lost only one ballplayer via graduation and with a successful 9-2 fall record sitting on the bench, the Mefarious Nine are ready for a challenging and long-anticipated season.

Spring practice began in the Cage on January 23 with reliable sources reporting no holdouts. Although fully aware that our first opportunity to hit the wide open spaces won't come until the beginning of the Southern Trip on March 25, everyone on the squad has been working diligently, and the morale is augmented with every strike thrown or putout made. A brief look at the principals is necessary to view the total scene of one of UVM's most successful sports.

Coach Ralph Lapointe is looking for possibly his most successful season, coming off a well-earned 11-6 ledger last spring and the fine fall season mark. With 8 starting players back from 1966 and a very talented and hustling bevy of sophomores up from last year's 8-3 freshman team, the Coach has the envious problem of deciding who will be picking up splinters and who will be eating dirt. Most positions are pretty well set, but a few will not be determined until the first ball is tossed out.

The main strength of the team has to be its pitching, with 5 men back from last year's fifth place finish nationally in ERA, plus 3 very adept sophomores. In Len Sheflott, Bruce Bovenizer, and John McCord, the Catamounts again have the nucleus of last year's strong staff. All seniors, each has 2 years of experience in the mound war and the invaluable wisdom and guidance of Coach Lapointe. Lenny is considered by many to be the best fielding pitcher on the team, and "Spider" McCord is especially effective from the stretch because he is so hard to see. Juniors Don Schneider and John Packard come back with one year's experience and are looking good. Rookies "Mac" Adams, Charlie Brucato, and Terry O'Leary are sure to see work and will comprise the backbone of the Cats in the years to come.

The catching corps is also very well set with Rick Aldrich, Bob Neild, and Joe Soldano. Rick is this year's team captain. An excellent leader, he is ready to show everyone that last summer's Cape campaign was just a fluke. Bob ("Canuck") Neild, who can play third as well as catch, was designated to try out a new cup this year and passed with flying colors. Joe Soldano has not played baseball in almost 4 years, but he is catching up rapidly and already leads the Cage league with 2 homers.

Turning to the infield, 3 positions look solid and the fourth is still being fought for. Bill Leete returns to third base after culminating a fine football career last fall. "Rabbit" is one man who really sticks his nose into the ball on grounders and is often used for demonstrations by the Coach. Dave Lapointe appears to have fully plugged the gap left by graduating Bobby Cronin, last year's shortstop and captain. A switch-hitter with fine range and a good gun, Dave's major problem right now is keeping dust out of his contact lenses. When John Packard isn't pitching, he will be employing an excellent glove at first base. Second base is sliding back and forth between Junior Bruce Lombard and this author. Lombard was the Team's starting second baseman last year, and I wish to personally thank Bruce for sharing his experience and baseball talent with me.

The outfield finds all three starters back from last season. Don Fitts in left field has proved that he can hit for power. Senior Dave Wayne is ready for his second year in center. Brad Stevens, last year's right fielder, has successfully overcome a foot injury incurred last fall, but he is being pushed by sophomore O'Leary. Redcap has the dubious distinction of being the only member of the squad to get into every single picture during Press Day held last week.

The Catamount bench appears to be the strongest it's been in several years. Aside from the off-day pitchers, footballers Dave Lucaroni and Bill Dorozenski add a lot of weight (about 425 lbs.) and are primarily pinch-hitters along with Soldano and Neild. Dave Cronin will also be available and backs up packard at first base.

A special tribute must go out to managers Joe Eckl and Al Wilson for their dedication and hard work in keeping practices running smoothly.

The key to this year's team is PRIDE, and DISCIPLINE THROUGH PRIDE: in our coach, in our team and in each other. For a few, this season marks the beginning of the end: for the juniors, the end of the beginning; and, for the sophomores, the very beginning of a very unique experience. If baseball depended on ability and desire, I would not hesitate to make a prediction, but the final outcome of a ballgame depends on a myriad of uncertainties. Let me say simply that we welcome your support and your participation on a journey that hopefully will terminate with a very profitable season.

Tennis Team Has High Hopes

By Jeff Aronson

The Cats' new tennis coach, Guy Cheng, is moving into a position which would be the envy of any new college coach. This year's team is one of the finest UVM has had. Only two men were lost through the graduation route, and this year's squad will be composed of at least 5 seniors and 1 junior. These 6 men returning will form the nucleus of a strong, talent-laden team. The squad will be lead by Capt. Paul Ryan, from Winchester, Mass. Paul has always been a serious contender for ECAC honors, and has taken the championship once already. Last year, Ryan was one half of the Yan Con doubles championship team, in addition to taking Yan Con honors as a sophomore. Senior Laddie Cook is probably the number two man on the team. He, too, took Yan Con honors at last year's tournament at UMass. He will probably pair with Ryan on the first doubles team. Senior Bruce Hanna, captain of the Cats basketball team this year, was the other half of the winning Yan Con doubles team. A consistent, fast player, he will probably be teamed with Senior Dick Sachs, from Yardley, Pa. Sachs is a summer teaching pro, as are Ryan and Cook. Rounding out the probable starting squad are Dutch Curtis, from Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and lone junior Ted Joslin, from Montpelier, two fine players who performed well on last year's squad.

The other spots on the team are still open, as only the returning men have started practice. Nevertheless, they should prove to be tough to dislodge.

New coach Guy Cheng, a member of the Chinese Davis Cup Team in 1937, replaces Brud Humphries, who accepted a position at the Kent School in Connecticut. Coach Cheng has a powerful squad under him, and should be able to top last year's 8-1 record.

The single defeat last year came at the hands of Middlebury, when the Cats defeated later that year at Middlebury. They remain the Cats chief foe. Despite the fact they lost their number 4 and number 6 men, Sam Gillespie and Tom Trafton, last year, this year's squad, led by Junior John Maluke, has an excellent crop of sophomores ready to take their places.

The season does not get under way until early May, but the team wasted no time in beginning practice as soon as the ice was removed at Gutterson. Things look good for the Cats this spring; perhaps they'll finally get some of the recognition they deserve.

Intramural Scoreboard

By Jack Berry

Madonna Mountain was the scene of the intramural ski meet last Saturday as Delta Psi claimed another victory. Pierce of MAT was the individual winner. Delta Psi was followed in team scoring by Phi Delta Theta, Acacia and Sigma Phi in that order. Sigma Nu and Phi Mu tied for fifth place. Sigma Alpha Epsilon lost their lead in the All-Sports Trophy standings as they finished out of the running. The winner, Delta Psi, is the new leader.

The winter bowling leagues came to a close last week with a play off between Phi Delta Theta and MAT. These teams led their divisions during the regular season. Phi Delt came out on top in a close match to win the championship. The winning team consists of Bob Nadler, Paul Leake, Reg Rhodes, Gene Yarnchels, and Steve Douglas.

At the beginning of the Paddleball tournament several weeks ago, Coach Strassburg seeded the teams of Dorsey and Pravata of Delta Psi, and Burgess and Cook of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, as the teams to beat. This week these same teams will meet for the championship. For once the oddsmakers were right. Las Vegas could probably use Strassburg.

New All-Sports Trophy Standings as of March 20 are as follows:

1. Delta Psi	616.5
2. Sigma Alpha Epsilon	606
3. Sigma Phi Epsilon	449.5
4. MAT	420
5. Phi Sigma Delta	416

Riflens Runnersup

By David Keenan

The Varsity Rifle team of UVM put away its rifles for another year after placing second in the Yankee Conference match Saturday at Durham, New Hampshire. Faced with the seemingly impossible task of defeating a superb Maine team, the Catamounts did not do as well as expected. The team scores were wide spread, as Maine placed first with 1305, Vermont second with a 1238, followed by UMass at 1225 and UNH with a 1178. URI drew a forfeit as they failed to appear. (UConn does not have a varsity team.)

High for the match was Burgess of Maine with a respectable 267. For Vermont, Bob Walker led the charge with a 264, followed by Dave Keenan at 251, Captain Jim Bellino at 248; Dick Walker at 240 and Bob Cavoretto at 235.

The final averages for this year's edition of the Varsity team were very close. Sophomore Bob Walker squeaked by captain Jim Bellino, with a 255.6 against Bellino's 254.3. Next, in a tie for third place, were Dick Walker and Dave Keenan, each having a 249.9, followed by Steve Curland at 235.0 and Bob Cavoretto at 220.8.

This match, the last for seniors Steve Curland and Dick Walker was the match which the Cats have been waiting for all semester, but the Black Bears of Maine whipped the Catamounts to keep their supremacy for the third, and hopefully the last, year in succession.

Cats Set For 56th Trip South

CAT-NIPS

Pitching Strong; Hitting A Question Mark

BY BOB BLOOMENTHAL

Two UVM stars of the past football season have not been overlooked by the keen eyes of the professional football scouts at the recent meetings which included the college draft.

Senior halfback Dick Hebert, who was sidelined for the season by a broken ankle in the third game of the year, was signed as a free agent by the Pittsburgh Steelers. Hebert, a 6-1, 205 pound St. Albans, Vt. native, has thrilled Catamount fans with his extremely shifty running ability and his glue-fingered hands. The Steelers intend to try Dick at the split end position made vacant by the trading away of All-Pro receiver Gary Ballman.

The other former standout for coach Bob Clifford is open end Jack Schweberger, another three year starter for the Cats. Schweberger will be given the opportunity to handle the rifle-like tosses of golden boy Joe Namath as Jack was nabbed in the fifteenth round of the draft proceedings by the New York Jets. Schweberger, at 6-2 and 197, is bigger than any of the current Jets at his position, and he plans to work on his speed from now until the rookie camp opens.

The last UVM player ever to be selected in the pro-football draft was Paul Harasimowitz, a 260 pound tackle who played under current Athletic Director Ed Donnelly in the mid-1950's. Harasimowitz was picked by the Philadelphia Eagles in the 22nd round, but decided to go on to dental school instead.

Two Catamount basketball players have also made the news lately for being cited on all star teams. 6-5 Russ "Skull" Boardman has been named to the All-American Name first team for college players with names most appropriate to the sport of basketball. Other first team members include Willie Cager, Bill Cutter, Key Hooper, and Bill Tapper.

Sophomore Bob Jacobs, the CYNIC's "Insider" for basketball, was also honored recently by being selected to the Yankee Conference All-Scholastic first team for YC players whose averages are 3.0 or higher. "Jake", who sported a 3.2 scholastic average along with his 5.9 scoring average, was joined on the team by UConn's Wes Bialosuknia, UMass's Jim Girotti, and Maine's Terry Carr and John Eisenhard.

Last weekend, one of the top high school basketball players in New England, 6-5 Nick Scaccia from Maine, visited the UVM Campus. Coach Art Loche is trying hard to convince Nick that UVM is the school for him as the lean and mean hardcourt performer is looking for a good pre-med college. Although the Downeast star's other choices include the likes of Holy Cross, Davidson, and Princeton, we are sure that Nick would be very happy at Vermont and that Coach Loche would be equally happy and thrilled with the idea.

As for the NCAA finals at Louisville, Ky., we look for UCLA to beat North Carolina's Tar Heels by 30 in the finals. Lew Alcindor will probably make UNC's dynamic duo of Larry Miller and Bob Lewis eat more basketballs than food in this one. If Coach Dean Smith of Carolina asks 6-10 Rusty Clark to handle Lew man for man, Alcindor should break Bill Bradley's NCAA tournament scoring mark. Also look for the Houston Cougars, behind the "Big E" and "the Duck", 6-8 Elvin Hayes and 6-5 Don Chaney, respectively, to cop third place honors over the Dayton Flyers.

The CYNIC extends congratulations to the Philadelphia 76ers for winning their second consecutive Eastern Division title, and for setting a loop record for victories en route. We also strongly second the NBA players' choice of Wilt Chamberlain as the league's outstanding player. We must admit, second thoughts, however, on the decision of Detroit's Dave Bing over Lou Hudson of St. Louis as the Rookie of the Year winner. If it were up to us, (even after seeing Bing's performance against 'Frisko on the tube last Sunday) we would award a co-honor to each of these outstanding rooks.

In the playoffs, we see the 76ers besting Boston in a series as hard-fought and exciting as their famed "down to the wire" battle of 1965. No matter who wins in the East, the victor should have little trouble with the Western representative, either San Francisco or Los Angeles. In the West, the outcome will probably be decided by the superstar who is more effective while playing with an injury. Nate (the Great) Thurmond of the Warriors will be playing with a cast on his left hand, while the fantastic Jerry West of the Lakers has been slowed down considerably by a recent injury.

Former University of Vermont basketball coach Fuzzy Evans' college roommate at the University of Illinois was New York Times columnist James Reston.

The University of Vermont has never had a losing baseball season since Ralph Lapointe became coach in 1952.

By Hugh Brown

As the 1967 baseball season begins, Vermont will once again field a strong contender for the Yankee Conference championship. Although Coach Ralph Lapointe and the Catamount ballplayers have a rough season ahead of them, we are sure that in the back of their minds is the playoff berth for the N.C.A.A. Little World Series in Omaha, Neb.

UVM lost only one starter from last year's 11-6 squad. With the entire pitching staff and seven of the eight regular fielders returning, coupled with five sophomores and three other new faces, the Catamount nine can only expect to be stronger than last year.

On March 25 the team will start south for their annual Southern trip. This trip includes a series of exhibition games against teams from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York City. Most of the teams on this year's schedule have been playing ball outside for nearly a month now. At the time this article is being written, a week before the tour, Vermont's outfielders, working out in the Gutterson Field House, have not had a chance to see a fly ball, much less catch one.

The schedule includes eight contests. Games will be played against Seton Hall, a perennial mid-Atlantic Coast Power, Catholic University, and a strong Naval Academy team. Also scheduled are Farleigh Dickinson, a twin-bill at Richmond, Villanova (a strong Philadelphia area team), and Columbia. In addition, a team workout will be held on Easter Sunday at Seton Hall. The tour will take nine days, ending on April 2 at Farleigh Dickinson.

These games will not count as part of the Catamount's season record. Their purpose is to give the players a chance to work outside under game conditions, and to give the coaches a good look at the players before the official season begins.

Coach Lapointe plans to go with Len Sheflott, Bruce Bovenizer, John McCord, and John Packard on the mound. Two promising sophomores, Terry O'Leary and Charlie Brucato, will also see a lot of action. O'Leary is Vermont's first lefty hurler in seven years, and will be used against predominately left hand hitting lineups.

But the tour, and ultimately the season, will depend primarily on the team's hitting. The pitching strength is there, but the team proved to be weak at the plate in several occasions last year. Coach Lapointe is optimistic when he says, knocking on wood, that the hitting in practice has been good and everything is shaping up well.

Speculating on an opening game lineup, it looks like John Packard at first base, either

Bruce Lombard or the hustling Steve Kunken at second base, Dave Lapointe at shortstop, and Bill Leete at third. Captain Rick Aldrich will back up home plate and Don Fitts and Dave Wayne should have outfield slots nailed down. The remaining outfield position is up for grabs between Brad Stevens, O'Leary, and Dave Lucaroni. By the way it has been reported that Dave, a starting tackle on the football team in the fall, is the fastest man on the baseball squad.

Looking ahead even farther, the Yankee Conference should be well balanced, with Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Maine all fielding strong contenders. Connecticut was already in Florida last week, playing a series of exhibition games.

Although the Southern trip games will not go on UVM's season records, the Catamounts would like to follow up on last fall's 8-1 exhibition record. However, the main purpose of the games will be to get a good look at all the players. A split of the eight games, against teams which have been practicing outside for the last month, would be considered a successful tour. But the Cats would just as soon return north with eight victories notched on their bats.

Kabat YC Vault Champ

The UVM track team completed its indoor season on March 11 with a sixth place finish in the Yankee Conference meet in Durham, N.H. Five Catamounts took part in the UVM scoring (15 points), including one first place, one second, a third, and three fifth place efforts.

Sophomore Richard Kabat had the top performance of the day as his 13 foot leap in the pole vault topped the field. The versatile, Great Neck, N.Y., native also took a third in the 60 yard low hurdles.

Other scorers were Ed Childs with a second in the high jump and fifth place finishers Jack Farley (long jump), Paul Ardell (shot put), and Jim Yendrzeski (60 yard high hurdles).

The thinclads will be at home only once during the outdoor season when they host Southern Connecticut. A good student turnout at the meet would be greatly appreciated.

McCune Returns; Purge Feared

By Richard Burke

In a striking reversal of his ouster last summer, Shannon McCune appears to be on the verge of a dramatic return to power at the University of Vermont. Unconfirmed reports indicate that McCune, apparently returning directly from the Far East, appeared suddenly during a violent thunder storm last night after thrusting aside the UVM boulder in front of the Tomb of the Unknown President. A later report claims that McCune was sighted crossing Lake Champlain. He was said to have been on foot.

When questioned about McCune's immediate destination, a close associate and colleague said, "Well, I'm not certain, but judging from Shannon's position on the map and his knowledge of the terrain, I would say, geographically speaking of course, that he is most likely headed for Plattsburgh for a secret meeting with his administration-in-exile. But don't tell anybody I told you. Besides, that's just a rough guess."

News of McCune's arrival appears to have thrown the campus and the city of Burlington into a state of complete confusion. The Green Guards, a student group supporting Rowell, seized control of the campus radio station during the pre-dawn hours and have subsequently jammed all local frequencies with a recording of "Moonlight in Vermont." Similarly, the Security Police, President Rowell's personal legion, have rounded up all suspected McCune sympathizers, stripped them of their student identification cards, and carted them off to a POW camp in Winoski for interrogation and processing. At the same time, McCune forces are reported to have hijacked a Lake Champlain ferry, and are at this moment approaching the Vermont shoreline flying a South Korean flag. They are expected to hit the beach at 0600 hours (abstract 0010 if you are on Votey time.).

The Office of Student Personnel issued a plea for student restraint, fearing an outbreak of mass suicides in the face of the impending invasion from the north. When asked if such an occurrence were likely, Ellen Goldman, the university's student counselor said, "You don't know these people the way I do; They're crazy." Recently, the UVM infirmary has been authorized to dispense suicide information to interested undergraduates, while a recent ad in the Burlington Free Press ran: "Finals got you down? Try Dial-a-Death, the academic headache remedy. (Now available in suppository form)." Fortunately, however, this year the University of Vermont included group life insurance in the price of tuition, a sort of progressive scholastic package plan, as the Office of Public Relations described it.

Meanwhile, at the UVM Book-

Anarchist Students Seize Waterman Building Today

Swift Rebel Coup Successful

Anarchistic students today seized Waterman and WRUV in a partially successful campus revolution. They immediately established the Peoples Democratic Society of Vermont. There are rumors that the Vermont National Liberation Front, headquarters in Plainfield, will try to send aid to the rebels who are surrounded by members of the ROTC. President of the University managed to flee the building minutes after the rebels entered. In an official statement he declared that "the situation is grave and will in all probability require careful action." Larry Van Benthuyzen, public relations man for the University, declared flatly that "this is definitely a situation." Roland Patzer declared that he "supports free exchange of ideas, however..."

The anarchists claim they will begin free distribution of all goods found in Waterman. All materials in the bookstore will be given away to any one who can pass through the line of armed ROTC students. In an official release the anarchists declared that "the bookstore in co-operation with the reactionary stooges of the administration have robbed and exploited the student masses for decades. Now that era has passed. A new world rises on the ashes of the old." However, a group of dissenting anarchists declared all books "must be destroyed so that lineal thinking will make way for pychedelic McCluhanist thought-clusters."

The commander of the ROTC declared that these "filthy reds" have committed a great number of "atrocities." Several secretaries were badly bruised when forced through the windows by the rebels. "This foul deed, the Defenestration of Waterman", claimed the ROTC commander, "marks a day that will live through infamy."

Students: Are You In Arts an' Partees

This heer University is pritty good in some respects, like the engineers is whar first comes to my minde. The rest of it isnt living up to specerficashuns thoe. What I am tokking about is them stoopid Arts an Partees.

Arts an Partees is what us engineers calls them stoopid people that are going too this University who is'nt engineers. Them is the stoopidest gies you ever seen. They sit around drinkin and water fights all the time so us pore engineers cant study. And I know persinly thats a fack to, cause our engineere proff told us so today in class.

Arts an Partees dont get anythig out of college eksept a degree as the saying goes. They never haff to studee. All they haff to do is reed a hole bunch of books. No I dont mind a good book now and agen myself but I think college should be a place for nolledge as the saying goes not idol entertainment.

Also they are allways riting papers witch evybody knows is just a bunch of bullrore anyway.

What ide like to know is what woud happin if there was a war someday and evything on the face of the earth was destroyed eksept for a computer, a slide rule, a 100-foot steel tape, a bunch of l-beams, some workers, and a man. Now if that man was a Arts an Partees can you imagine what woud come of this world as we know it?

But if that man was an engineere why hede have you a new civilization bilt in no time and if there was enouf l-beams I'll bet hede bilt a nyer and a stronger sivillization then a Arts an Partees ever saw in his hole life. This here I just written has a point.

Engineers come to the University with a 'golé for their life. An engineere goes to the Univer-city for five years and sometimes even four years and when he comes out he knows how to do thins. He knows how to build a rode or a engine or a radio. I mean he mite not know how to bilt a rode hisself but thats not the point.

The workmen know how to bilt the rode and the engineer tells them the best way and what he done wrong. The engineer has the nolledge he gained from serious study.

If the bilding falls down or the rode washes out or the airplane crashes the engineer has the nolledge so that he can go back and fine out what he done wrong so when he makes the bilding or the rode or the plane over again he wont make the same mistake and so he saves the contrakter a lot of money.

But look at a Arts an Partees. When a Arts an Partees graduates (which hes lucky to do hes so stoopid but Arts an Partees colledge is so easy an engineere can even pass some of their courses).

Now a engineere is usually patriotic so he works in a defense plant but a Arts an Partees is usually a ajitator and a V-mecel as the saying goes and so he has to pay the punishment, which is to get drafted an pele potatoes and get shot for his Uncle Sam.

This just goes to show you the udder folly (as well as the price for unloyalty) that a Arts an Partees is. I'm not saying that all Arts an Partees are bad gies. This woud be an assinin thing to say because, for instance, most of the Arts an Partees I know are pritty good gies.

I just thot, you editors probly are Arts an Partees but you

Run on Bananas - Green and Gold Forever

For some ridiculous reason, Burlington has had a drain on bananas, with the demand far surpassing the supply. The students of UVM realizing that this situation was outside the control of Burlington officials, administrators of the university, and the Board of Trusty's, took matters into their own hands.

They have diligently saved their pennies all year, and on April 1 sent down the last payment on their long desired goal - two thriving banana plantations, one in Costa Rica and the other in Nicaragua.

Main campus was the scene of joyous ecstasy, as students sent gum banana peels and other ingredients flying high.

Several changes were prompted by this business deal.

The Student Ambassador Council held a short meeting, voting unanimously to send their Ambassador to either Costa Rica or Nicaragua, and placing several supervisory responsibilities on him.

The Art Department painted our mellow statue of Ira Allen a certain shade of yellow.

store, prices dropped sharply in early trading. Some observers speculated that the fear of an anti-intellectual trend had put a scare into the student body, resulting in a buyers' market in the light of the lowered book value. This morning apparently reflecting the panic, the store offered a new special, advertising "Any Five Textbooks for 99¢."

Speaking at a farewell rally in the new Lenny Bruce Memorial Chapel, President Rowell said, "It is with regret that I must welcome you all to my house for the last time. It has become bitterly apparent that my position is unsalvable." He went on to deny for the last time, the popular rumor that Shannon McCune is really his son. He then left for the state house in Montpelier where it is said that he has been granted academic asylum.

Concurrently, members of the Medical School faculty and the Board of Trustees were preparing to go into exile. When confronted in the vault of the Essex Junction branch of the Howard National Bank, Mr. "Lee" Marvin, chairman of the Board of Trustees, broke his long silence. In response to our queries he said, "Go away."

Perhaps the best overall description of the situation as we go to press was offered by one faculty member in the College of Agriculture. Speaking from his office in the Dairy Building he said, "It's utter chaos."

shud ekept the situation as you got it and not be bitter. I hope you dont decide to not print this letter because I spent several months making it and this shoes lme sinseer in wanting to help Arts an Partees. They will no dout want to all be engineres now but they must pay the prise for choosing to come to colledge to get drunk and a degree insted of usefull nolledge.

If yore going to go to colledge you might as well get nolledge cause then youll have some money to earn but a stoopid Arts an Partees never learns. Thats a poem they taut us in enginere class this week.

That mite seem to be an egsajeration to a Arts an Partees but theyve gotto admit its true.

If this letter dossnt convince those Arts an Partees then it goes to show they are pritty stupid. They should be learned that befor they can shoe true nolledge like a enginere they must be able to see other peeples point of view.

IFC Conference Held Last Week

A group of worthy souls willingly gave up their last week-end of vacation to attend a highly successful Interfraternity Conference at Mt. Philo Inn. Dr. Perrine, IFC advisor, led an enlightening discussion on various problems facing the IFC. The essence of the discussion revolved around the question of whether or not the IFC should expand further, and if so, when. Dr. Perrine submitted that we have institutionalized change and movement in our culture, and if the fraternity system is to flourish it has to do more than just tread water. There was a consensus of opinion on the part of the attending house presidents, and the IFC Executive for future additional expansion of the fraternity system. Dean Patzer, as evening speaker, aroused many thought-provoking issues. Questions such as, "What does the fraternity system stand for?" and "how can communications between Greeks and non-Greeks (including the administration) be improved?" were raised and many constructive ideas were put forth. Bob Lobel, director of the Fraternity Manager's Association, led the Sunday discussion on Rushing. Past, present, and future rush policies of the IFC and the houses were discussed with a strong likelihood that future debate on these policies is far from over. Acting Dean of Men, Hewitt, and Dr. Miles, Chairman of the Geography Dept., also attended the conference and provided many beneficial suggestions that were well appreciated. The conference successfully accomplished its two primary goals; firstly, it built a spirit of unity among the attending members and secondly, it examined basic fraternity problems and possible solutions.

DEAN PATZER addresses IFC Conference.

Kake Walk Directors Advocate Changes

In an interview Monday Kake Walk directors Nick Rowland, Ted Rowen and Pete Ambrose suggested some changes for next year's directors to consider.

The quality of the entertainment could be improved if the students were willing to pay more for it. The staff would be permitted to spend more money only if they could prove the returns would cover the expenditure.

The point was made that with UVM constantly expanding, walking nights are now filled to capacity. The original aim was to maintain good public relations with Burlington citizens and include them in university functions. No tickets are now sold to non-university persons because of lack of space. Perhaps the administration should consider allotting a third night for walking. This could also serve as a kind of rushing for UVM itself.

It was suggested that next year the judges and walkers get together earlier so more time could be spent correcting form.

There are 500 feet of Kake Walking films available and it is recommended that these be used as training films.

Other suggestions were made concerning Pops Night. It was mentioned that the skits showed a lack of imagination, but this was understandable since the best skits don't necessarily win and the candidates are often chosen on appearance rather than personal merit.

The skits should be written for the audience present and be appropriate for the occasion. Since houses do not run a skit every year it is easy to lose sight of the necessary qualities which make a good skit. The directors advised circulating copies of past well-done skits as examples to the houses.

This year only a few of the many houses which wanted to run a king or queen candidate were able to participate in Pops Night. These houses were chosen by drawing names. It was suggested that houses be allowed to run a candidate on alternate years only. The other solution was to use a panel of faculty judges in a process of skit eliminations. The skits would be submitted by number and not by house, and voted on. The best ones would be chosen to participate, thus improving the quality of Pops Night.

Concerning censorship, a liberal policy was advocated. "Pops Night is a fun night, but we would like to prevent anything which could be construed as being in poor taste." Various houses have been penalized votes for this offense in the past. Perhaps skits could be submitted in triplicate to several panels of judges, read, and censored.

They would like to see more people at the king and queen elections, and attributes the moderate attendance to lack of efficient publicity. It was advised that the S.A. banner trees which remains unused this year be utilized.

Coffee Shop skits are a second and usually shorter skit run by the house as a second presentation of their candidates, and held in Southwick gymnasium. These skits need more publicity as attendance is low. They are also of poorer quality than Pops Night skits, and an extra burden on the houses which run candidates. The idea of abolishing Coffee Shop skits was tossed around but the directors seem to think this is unlikely.

Rollins Accepts Arts And Sciences Post

BINGHAMTON - Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr., who was offered the post Tuesday of Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has accepted the position as of Wednesday, April 5. He will still have to go through the formality of being accepted by the Board of Trustees, who will meet Saturday.

Dr. Rollins was quoted by the 'Colonial News' as saying, "I have today accepted the invitation of President Lyman Rowell to take up the leadership of the College of Arts and Sciences there. Subject to final action of the University Board of Trustees, I anticipate becoming Dean of that College, and professor of history on July 1, 1967."

He went on to say, "UVM has a great tradition of quality and responsibility, and I am delighted to join its distinguished community of scholars, in facing the challenges of expansion to which Universities everywhere must address themselves. But my enthusiasm has been with a good deal of sadness in leaving Harpur College and SUNY Binghamton. I have worked for the people of the State of New York in higher education for almost 20 years. And, in 4 brief years in Binghamton, I have been blessed with fine students, brilliant and warm hearted colleagues, great challenges, and firm support in meeting them, great hopes, and many more fulfillments than frustrations on the path to their realization. Already distinguished, Binghamton can become a great university."

Of UVM Rollins said, "My decision to take on the new responsibilities at Burlington has been a personal one. Vermont and its universities have a great attraction for us. But the decision has been made deeply difficult by the fact that I must leave a fine history department at its 'take off' point and will not be able to share with my friends and colleagues here the demanding but immensely rewarding tasks of the future."

Of Binghamton he said, "In the past I have bet heavily on SUNY Binghamton, and I have learned that there is no risk involved in such a bet. I shall watch this great University develop with a deep pride, that I was briefly able to be a part of it."

We are proud to have Dr. Rollins with us. And we hope UVM will live up to his expectations. To quote Barry Kramer, Editor of the 'Colonial News,' the Harpur College paper: "You people are Damn lucky."

Three Day Vermont Conf. Discussed Poignant Topics

By Bob Williams

The Vermont Conference of 1967 opened the evening of Tuesday, March 21 in Ira Allen Chapel with introductory addresses by Joseph Badgewick, '67, chairman of the Vt. Conference executive committee, and UVM President Lyman Rowell. This year's conference theme "...and Justice for All," developed into the course of the three evenings into a discussion of various racial, economic and judicial crisis that besets the United States in the 1960s.

Judge Sterry R. Waterman, a Senior Justice for the United States Court of Appeals was Tuesday evening's keynote speaker. He emphasized his belief that "the United States Supreme Court is meeting the demands of our society and has taken an enlightened position toward the administration of criminal justice. Much of the excitement that has been engendered by recent decisions of the court in the criminal justice field is misguided, and many of those commenting thereon are apparently misinformed."

Judge Waterman felt, however, that in the past dozen years there has been a notable increase in the general public's concern with the workings and decisions of the Supreme Court, and this growing concern, he stated, must be regarded as a very healthy trend, especially since the Court has become involved in matters with which it would not have been so intimately concerned a couple of decades ago.

"We have provided a great deal of protection for the criminal in court, but we have done nothing to protect him before he comes to trial," Judge Waterman stated. Much of the discussion of judicial inequalities in this country have come to a head in the argument over the use of confessions. "I am in complete sympathy," Waterman said, "with the problems of the Metropolitan police in a city like New York, and yet I'm also in complete sympathy with the tenet that a man is innocent until proven guilty."

Waterman discussed the conflict between state and federal codes regulating the use of wire-tapped evidence in court and, throughout the hour-long talk, repeatedly emphasized his belief that Vermont, a manageable small state, has long been noted for the humaneness and perspicacity inherent in its judicial system.

Following Judge Waterman's address, a panel discussion was held in the Waterman Cafeteria: Michael Harrington, Chairman of the Board of Directors, League for Industrial Democracy; Randolph Blackwell, Program Director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference;

Harry Levin of the "Rutland Herald," and UVM professors James Chaplin and Jeremy Feld served as panel members.

Urban Center Needs Help

Urban Youth Specialist Mrs. Elizabeth Davies has expressed the need for volunteers to work at the Urban Center on North Street.

The Center, serving about 600 underprivileged Burlington children, provides recreation and teaches handicrafts. Mrs. Davies said there are another 12 boys who would like share this experience but cannot for lack of volunteers.

An hour or two in the afternoon each week volunteered to help these children would be greatly appreciated. The center is within walking distance and transportation can be provided back to campus around 5 p.m.

Any fraternity, sorority, or independent group of Students interested in taking responsibility for a group of young people evenings or weekends - your help will be welcomed.

Alpha Gamma Rho is presently involved in the program; their participants have been Scott Leake, Dick Frantz, and Bill Moran.

Other students who have worked at the Center are, Russel Boardman, Carol Carpenter, Mamie McNall, Eric Nichols, Lucy Burnap, and Pieter Van Shaik.

Mrs. Davies is also looking for new ideas on helping children aged 9-13. The boys are now doing basic woodwork; the girls are sewing and learning arts and crafts.

The Urban Center, sponsored by the University Extension Service, will continue to operate with volunteer help during the summer.

Persons who wish to offer services or ideas should contact Mrs. Davies, at Ext. 228.

UVM To Have New Frat In 67

During the past few months the Colonization Committee of the Interfraternity Council has interviewed representatives from seven national fraternities in order to select a new colony for the University of Vermont campus. Pending approval of the administration, Phi Gamma Delta will begin operations in the Fall of 1967. The IFC regards the future colony as a potent force in providing new blood and spirit to the fraternity system, and as an excellent opportunity for those who wish to build a house to their own liking.

Phi Gamma Delta was founded in 1848 at Jefferson College and presently there are ninety-one chapters and seven colonies in the United States and Canada, of which over 60,000 undergraduates are members. More information on Phi Gamma Delta and its establishments on the university campus will be made known in the immediate future.

Letters to the Editors

A student publication should be written by and for students -- not faculty. But, after all, it seems to make no sense to try to get people to understand some fundamentals of history in the classroom, and then to remain silent when history is so grossly abused by another component of the University. Thus I will try to refrain from any further interventions, but I'm not promising anything.

repeatedly maintained the function of a bill collection agency for extracurricular claims against undergraduate students. It seems totally repugnant that the Administration should honor the valid and invalid claims of businessmen, landlords, and public utilities by threatening social restriction and doubtful graduating status to those students unwilling to make amends to the total satisfaction of the claimant. There seems little doubt that civil liberty and constitutional privileges deserve to win out over the public relations phobia at the University Administration.

To end on a cheerful note, let us all sit back and think of the pleased expression on the face of the local merchant when you asked him to cash your last personal check.

SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

Recently, I took a survey of various people, asking them what they thought about the war in Viet Nam. Here are some of the replies:

Martin Cijerewski, Cicero, Illinois: Well, I read in the Free Press that the Viet Cong are just plain killers. I mean they've killed at least ten thousand people. They're commies and we just have to stop them even if we have to kill a million people else we'll never be able to sleep at night knowing we failed the people in Viet Nam.

Suzu Creamcheese, Port Bland, Conn.: It gives all Americans the opportunity to prove themselves. I suppose its good in that. Last Christmas I baked some cookies for them and my girl friend gave blood.

Mauve Whisper, Greenwich, Conn.: Really, I think its just awful for all those people to get killed.

Hilda Hippee, New York City: Like I'm a pacifist. Maybe not really a pacifist, but I just couldn't kill any one for political reasons. I've done everything I could to end the war. I've marched and participated in sit-ins, teach-ins, exist-ins, stand-ins, lie-ins and smoke-ins. Tomorrow all us liberals are going to participate in a sleep-in. It's a gas.

Jack Smith, Gatch, Vt.: Sure I'm for the war. Everyone in my frat house took a vote saying they were patriotic and for the war. It was real democratic and I voted the same as everyone else because unity is the only way we can win.

Calvin Plumb, RFD3452, Vt.: What war?

Dr. Freddy Fossil, University professor: Well sonny, that's a complicated question. Perhaps it all starts with the revolt of the central tribes in 1768, that was the third revolt and for more information you might consult my book. Now as you know the Mekong delta until recently was a major rice producer for south east Asia. But, back in 1768 the rice producing region extended further to the north. Now when this revolt broke out - would you mind asking your question again?

Liman S. Rule, University President: I thought I was going to be asked that question, so I had this statement prepared for me:

The war in Viet Nam, it is my own deep personal feeling, has been long and costly. I am deeply committed to the belief that every student should find out as much as he can about the war and to whatever he thinks is right so long as it does not violate the law or tarnish the reputation of the university. My own personal feeling, and I mean this with all my heart, is that the problem is both complex and confusing and when I have more time I shall be more than glad to look into the matter further.

Will Speak Tues

The University Lecture Series will present Dr. Lewis S. Feuer, Professor of Sociology at the University of Toronto, and his wife, Mrs. Kathryn R. Feuer, Chairman of the Department of Slavic languages at Toronto, in a series of lectures on April 10-12.

Mr. Feuer, a former UVM faculty member, who left a teaching post at the University of California, Berkeley, during the "academic freedom" upheaval there, will speak on "Problems of Student Movements in Modern History" in Waterman lower lounge on Tues., April 11, at 7:30 p.m.

Earlier Tuesday, from 9:30-11 a.m. Mr. Feuer will meet students informally in Billings Center for a coffee hour. From 9:30-1:30 a.m. on Wednesday, April 12, in lower Waterman lounge he will participate in a faculty coffee hour.

Mrs. Feuer, who is an author of articles and a novel, "Strike For The Heart," will also give a lecture in this series. She will speak on "The Writings of Tolstoy's 'War and Peace'" on Monday, April 10 at 7:30 p.m., which will also be given in the lower lounge of Waterman.

Upshot Presents Two Plays

Speech Instructor James MacDonald will direct two plays — one a new work — for an April 20-23 production by the University of Vermont speech and drama department.

The plays are "The Room" by Harold Pinter, and a new piece by Edmond M. Stevens called "The Sink." At present, Pinter's "The Homecoming" is in its second month of performance in New York City.

MacDonald is completing his first year at the University. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa, where he also earned his master's degree.

Stevens, 20, gives his address as Stockbridge, Mass. The young writer worked as a reporter with several New England newspapers before resigning late last year from the staff of the Hartford, Conn., Times to give more time to drama.

He was previously produced at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge in the summer of 1964 where he worked as an actor. His first play was called "The Bout."

UPSHOT, a theater group which works within the speech and drama department, has also agreed to produce a second Stevens play in May, and "A Crack in the Mirror," a play by Henry P. (Hank) Albarelli, on the May production date. Albarelli, is presently serving in North Carolina on a 4 1/2 month tour of duty with the Army.

A third play, by UVM senior Susan H. Noble, called "The Strange Arrangement" will also be staged on the UPSHOT play night.

Production of the Stevens plays was arranged through Dr. Edward Feidner of the speech and drama department.

The curtain on the April 20-23 performances will rise at 8:30 p.m. at the Arena Theater.

"Odd Fellow" Coming Saturday

By Judy Beeber

As a finale to the 1966-67 Blue Lane Series, Lane Series presents "The Odd Couple" which will be performed on Sat., April 8 in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. The play was produced by Saint Subber, written by Neil Simon and directed by Mike Nichols. The play opened on Broadway in 1965 starting Art Carney and Walter Matthau and it is now in its 107th week of production.

Saint Subber is a familiar name in the theater. He has produced Cole Porter's hit "Kiss Me Kate", and later "Barefoot in the Park", "Odd Couple" and his latest production, "Star-Spangled Girl."

Neil Simon is one of Broadway's most successful comedy writers. He is the author of five Broadway hits, "Come Blow Your Horn", "Barefoot in the Park", "Little Me", "Odd Couple", "Sweet Charity" and his latest achievement "Star Spangled Girl".

Mike Nichols, director of the original production of "The Odd Couple" has also been successful in the past. He has directed "Barefoot in the Park", "Luv", "The Knack", "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf", and "The Apple Tree". For his achievements, Nichols was awarded the Tony Award and the Sam Shubert Award.

Lyle Talbot and Harvey Stone have the leading roles in the show. They will be playing the "odd couple", one divorced, the other newly separated from his wife. They decide to share an apartment together and then discover that the traits that had caused their marriages to blow up, also make their living together as bachelors, a disastrous experience. Also appearing in the cast will be Dutch Miller, Art Vasil and Edmund Williams as cronies of the two bachelors. Kathryn Blythe and Peggy Winslow portray two pretty neighbors who complicate life in the bachelor apartment.

Lyle Talbot has acted in over 150 Hollywood films, 78 of them major feature pictures, 78 Westerns and 15 episode serials. He has appeared in "Forty-second Street", and "Sunrise at Campobello".

The second bachelor, Harvey Stone, in addition to acting is a comedian and raconteur. He has appeared at the White House in order to entertain the President and his guests. Stone has just returned from a four month world tour for the State Department.

MARSHAL YOUR SENSES!

"Damn Yankees" will massage them like no TV show ever has. The music from this all-time Broadway smash has been completely rescored, arranged for a great newsound. The visual techniques take the step beyond "pop" and "op." It's the kind of innovation you associate with GE and that's why we're part of it. That's why we're putting "Damn Yankees" on the air. Don't miss it.

THE PHI MU DELTA PHILOSOPHY

To the men of Phi Mu Delta the concept of fraternity means the aggregation of individuals tied by a common bond of inner satisfaction known as brotherhood. Brotherhood at Phi Mu Delta means unceasing pride in our membership and its accomplishments. In our fraternity, lasting friendships are born, experiences are shared, and a lifetime of dedication to, and belief in, the worthiness of a Greek fraternity system is established. Emphasis is on constant development of the individual. Our national constitution states: "Character, ability, and willingness to support the fraternity and its principles shall be the basis of eligibility to membership." The creed of "Fraternity, Democracy, and Service, is the basis for our commitment to the TOTAL MAN. We the brothers of Phi Mu Delta have pride in our past and faith in our future.

Golf Team Delta Psi Leads Wins Field

Coach J. Edward Donnelly's golf team finished up a successful trip to the Washington D.C. area by winning 2 of 3 matches. In a match held in Riverbend, Va., the Cats suffered their only defeat of the trip at the hands of George Washington University, 13 1/4 - 4 1/2. Then, UVM easily defeated Va. Union U. 12-2. The other UVM victory came in a match against American U., with final score being 12 1/2 - 5 1/2. Mr. Donnelly expressed satisfaction at the performance of his team. He was especially satisfied with the play of three senior lettermen, Lloyd Hier, Art Shields and Bob Nadler. Coach Donnelly also praised the play of sophomore Bruce Fay.

Although Mr. Donnelly appeared optimistic about the coming spring golf season, he stressed the fact that he could use more good golfers on the team, and that it is still not too late to try out for the squad. Any interested low handicap golfers should contact Mr. Donnelly at the athletic office or leave their name with the secretary at Patrick gym.

INTERVIEWER:

Mr. Bruce Chasan

By Fred Schlapp

Saturday, April 8th, marks the beginning of Vermont's spring football practice during which the Cats are permitted fifteen days of actual practice in a period of twenty-one days. In talking to head coach Bob Clifford about his plans, he said, "We are very weak on defense, having been hard hit by graduation and academic casualties, so consequently we will stress defense more than ever before in this spring session."

The defense may be weak, but such is not the case with the offense. Jeff Kuhman, a 6'3", 220 lb. end who has pro potential, holds down one spot with Keith "Ode" Keiderling on the other flank. Sophomores Dave Martin and Bill Lawrence will be tried at these spots as well as Pete Anderson and Andy Sardonis. The tackle positions are secure with Dave Lucaroni and big Jim Sullivan; but neither is going out for spring practice. Lucaroni is playing on Ralph Lapointe's baseball nine and Sullivan is recovering from illness.

Newcomers Dave Gemelli, Ron Gargano, and Art Williamson will be vying for these spots, but Williamson, a 6'4" 230 lb. behemoth, will also be tried at center. The guard position will be well taken care of by Capt. Danny Martin and messenger guards Bill Crudo and Jay Gallipo. John Wojackowski, Pat O'Reilly, Larry Kelly, and Paul McKane are all up from the freshman squad, but despite the fact that they are all very talented, it is doubtful that they will break into the starting lineup.

Like last season, the center position is wide open. Paul Ardell, who returned after a semester's sabbatical, seems to have the inside track, but he will be pushed by Lou Constantinople and Danny DiRocco.

Looking at the backfield, one can see why any Yankee Conference coach would love to have it's personnel. Coach Clifford has five quarterbacks in his stable, in Dave Shumate, Paul Simpson, Jack Stroker, Frank Mazanec, and Pete Hicks. The rest of the backfield has Mr. Everything Bobby Mitchell at halfback with Pete Clifford at flanker and Jim Culhane at fullback. Returning veterans John Hains and Bucky Doria as well as freshmen Harry Canning, Tom Daigneault, Gene Monahan, Bob Shookus, and Pete Glanacoplos will probably see action as reserves.

On the defensive side of the ledger, prospects are bleak, especially at end where Ron Tice is the only returning player. He may get help from freshman Dick Simmonds, but there is no one else after that. The tackles are fairly secure with big John Gurrieri at one spot and possibly Dick Farnham or Jim Maloney at the other. Maloney remains a question mark because of a bad ankle, but if he is healthy, the tackle situation will improve. Freshmen Dave Gemelli and Bob Stearns should also help.

Gene Carruthers is the heir apparent to Joe Soldano's middle guard spot, but will be challenged by Pat O'Reilly and Larry Kelly. The Catamount defense gets stronger behind the forward wall as linebackers Colin Hurd and Bill Wolff compare with the best in the conference. Tom Dexter and Steve Vukovich will vie for the other spot and will be backed up by freshmen DiRocco and Sanacki. The defensive backfield has a wealth of talent with Bill Lawrence, Dave "Growth" Martin, Paul "Mute" Malone, Jim Dedman, John Varricchione, and freshmen Jim Seder, Bob Shookus, and Mike Boraski.

LITTLE ALL-AMERICAN
Bob Mitchell

The spring season is primarily for evaluation of players and the molding of a team. Both of these objectives will be attained, and with all this talent, Coach Clifford should once again have a successful season.

Tennis Team Preps For First Match

By Jeff Aronson

Although many find it hard to believe, Spring has actually already begun! As the warm breezes off the Lake spread contentment throughout all, the tennis Cats are spending their afternoons preparing for their first match on April 16.

Practice starts at 4:00 each day, and here, new shots, spins, angles, and strategies are tried. Paul Ryan and Laddie Cook were both down in Florida over vacation, ostensibly to play tennis; their tans make them look like they were extras in "Lawrence of Arabia." Coach Guy Cheng was also in Florida, and assuming a great amount of will-power on his part, will return this week.

All the players look quite sharp. Dutch Curtis has a wonderfully improved serve which should help his play tremendously. Ted Joslin is an excellent all-around player who shows at practice why he is the only junior on this all-senior squad. He should have a fine season, and should be able to lead the team his senior year. Other players should be starting their practices soon. It will be very tough to break into this year's starting line-up, but five of these starters will graduate this year!

Rumors from the Yankee Conference opposition, are that UMass and UConn have improved tremendously. UMass lost only two starters - as we did - and has good sophomores and juniors to replace them. However, experience should prove to hurt Mass. this year, who finished second last year UConn, who finished third, in the YanCon, is also reputed to have fine juniors replacing those who graduated last year.

The Cats do have weaknesses this year, mainly involving the individual weaknesses of the players. These, with the expert help of Coach Cheng, should be ironed out before the season starts.

YAN DER HOFF WITH SPRITE

Social-life majors, take a look at Charles Van der Hoff. He can't play the guitar. Never directed an underground movie. And then look at his ears! A bit much? Yes! But--Charles Van der Hoff can hear a bottle of tart, tingling Sprite being opened in the girls' dormitory from across the campus!

What does it matter, you say? Hah! Do you realize that Charles Van der Hoff has never missed a party in four years? When he hears those bottles of Sprite being uncapped--the roars--the fizzes--the bubbles--he runs! So before you can say anti-existentialism, he's getting in on that tart, tingling, slightly tickling taste of Sprite. And delicious refreshment--as well as a good time--is his.

Of course, you don't have to have ears as big as Charles Van der Hoff's to enjoy the swinging taste of Sprite. You may just have to resign yourself to a little less social life.

THE INSIDER Baseballers Sharp On Southern Trip

BY STEVE KUNKEN

This past Sunday's well-earned 8-6 victory over Fairleigh Dickinson University marked the climax of the first .500 Southern Trip since the very successful 1962 season. The final won-lost column reads 4-4, but with a few breaks and a little more help from the ump, the Cats could easily have been 6-2. Every win came via good baseball, and several bad calls reversed contests that were played well.

The trip began last Saturday (March 25) with a rough 14 hour ride down to Ft. Eustis, Virginia. By the time we passed Washington, D.C., everyone was in a daze, and one usually very reliable member of the team (who shall be called Mr. L for my own protection) understandably mistook a MacDonald's Drive-In for the White House and the lights of a passing jet for the Washington Monument, both within 2 minutes. Strangely enough, the bus couldn't quite settle down again until we reached the Fort.

UVM showed its dislike for Army life by dropping 2 out of 3 games to the University of Richmond. With only one day of outdoor practice to get down our timing, we jumped on 2 pitchers for 10 hits to beat them in the opening game, 4-1. Brad Stevens and Rick Aldrich had 2 hits apiece and drove in 2 runs between them. Don Fitts had a single and a double. Len Sheflott started a good week by pitching 5 innings of no-run ball; John McCord finished up with 4 innings of effective relief work. This game showed everything: good hitting, tight defense, and the strong pitching that will be needed if we plan to go all the way in the Conference this year. Tuesday saw a considerable decline in the effectiveness of the Louisville woods as Vermont nailed only 6 hits in losing 2-0 and 3-1. Two perfectly executed squeeze bunts put the first game out of reach, while the long ball hurt in the second. David K. Lapointe's homerun averted a whitewash job. This game had the special distinction of having 4 sophomores in the lineup, including an effective relief stint by C.C. Brucato.

Tuesday night we blew out of the Army and into our most effective game at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. Facing a well-balanced team with its top hurler starting, the Nebraska-minded Nine pitched and defended well and humbled the cream of the United States Navy, 2-1. 2 singles plus a double by Captain Aldrich gave Len Sheflott all he needed to hold the Midshipmen's big guns at bay. On one extra-base hit, a perfectly executed relay from Fitts to Lapointe to Aldrich cut-off the tying run and proved to be the play of the day. Of course, eating dinner that night with 4000 Midshipmen necessitated the posting of guards, but we evacuated Thursday morning for Washington without a single man lost.

Catholic University proved to be a complete fiasco. Out of the goodness of their hearts, they put us up in a motel rivalled only by the Ethan Allen. Shocked into the realization of the hardships of life, the Cats proceeded to wipe out God's answer to the Dead End Kids, 9-2. Bruce Bovenizer and Don Schneider proved to be an effective pitching duo as UVM executed well on the squeeze, hit-and-run, and double steal. After a sleepless night of watchful anticipation, we happily moved to Philadelphia and Villanova.

With Navy as our best game, the day before April 1 proved to be our worst. Our 5 errors seemed like 50 as Villanova scored only 3 earned runs in winning, 7-5. Terry O'Leary and Mac Adams pitched well in relief, but Vermont could never get quite close enough. One bad consequence of the poorly played affair was the loss of Senior Centerfield, Dave Wayne, All-Yankee Conference last year. Pie suffered an ankle fracture and dislocation sliding into home and will probably be lost for the season. I wish Dave, one of the great hustlers and leaders of the team, a very speedy recovery.

We stormed into the Big City late Friday night, not quite ready for what was to come. Saturday was Columbia, and it was not meant to be our day. Playing in a small part with poor facsimiles for umpires, the N.Y. Ivies pulled out a 9-8 victory by the skin of their teeth. With John Packard coming up with a sore arm, Columbia came up with 5 runs before Charlie Brucato could relieve him. The victim of 2 roundtrippers, Chas. finally lost on an unearned run in the 11th inning. Vermont committed only one error, but it proved fatal. Offensively, UVM had 11 hits, including 6 straight during a 5-run fifth inning and 2 homers, one by Packard. It was a hard game to have taken away.

Sunday brought FDU and a satisfying 8-6 win. Facing some tough pitching, the Cats came up with 7 runs in the 4th inning, the big blows being Bruce Lombard's pinch-hit single to drive in a run and John Packard's double with the bases loaded. Don Schneider, who pitched from the fourth inning on, did a tremendous job, downing all 15 men he faced and picking up his first win of the season. We left the balmy weather of New Jersey right after the game and headed back for the snows of Burlington late Sunday night.

By Hugh Brown

The University of Vermont's baseball team completed the 57th Annual Spring Tour with a record of four wins and four losses. This record should be considered fairly successful, as the teams which the Catamounts faced have been playing ball for over six weeks - several having already started their regular seasons.

Vermont opened the trip in top form against Richmond. Senior pitching ace, Len Sheflott, went five innings, giving up only two hits and fanning seven. John McCord finished up, allowing a single run in four innings. The Cats knocked out tenbase hit, two each by Don Fitts, captain Rich Aldrich, and Brad Stevens, as they scored four runs to beat Richmond 4-1.

The game with Seton Hall was called because of snow on the Seton Hall field. The Catamounts met Richmond, on March 28th, for a twin bill. Both games were seven innings. The first game was a pitching duel, as senior Bruce Bovenizer started and pitched four innings of no hit ball. He gave way to sophomore Terry O'Leary. Richmond pushed across two runs in the bottom of the seventh - on two singles, an error, and two perfect squeeze bunts - to edge the Cats 2-0.

Switch hitter Dave Lapointe opened the second game with a 410 foot, lead off, home run. But Richmond stopped the Cats there, as they scored three runs against starter John Packard, to sweep the double header with a 3-1 victory.

On March 29th Vermont met Navy at Annapolis in what Coach Ralph Lapointe termed, "One of the finest college games I have ever seen." Len Sheflott went seven innings, allowing only one unearned run. McCord pitched two shutout innings. Navy scored a run in relief in the second inning, but UVM rallied in the fourth. With one out, sophomore Steve Kunhen singled to left. After another out, Packard singled and Rich Aldrich doubled in Packard and Kunhen. Vermont's hurling held up as the Cats posted a 2-1 victory.

The Vermonters unleashed their hitting attack in the following game, as they crushed Catholic University 9-2. Bovenizer started and got credit for the victory. Junior Don Schneider pitched four innings of shut-out relief. The top of the first inning was highlighted by John Packard's steal of home and by Steven Kunhen's sacrifice fly which scored both Lapointe and O'Leary. The game was marred by four Vermont and five Catholic U. errors.

The strain of the road trip became apparent during the remaining three games of the tour. Villanova defeated UVM 7-5 in a sloppily played contest. John McCord started and gave up six runs, although only three were earned. He was followed by O'Leary and sophomore Mac Adams. Vermont scored single runs in the first, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth innings. Villanova opened their attack with a four run second.

On Saturday, April 1st, the Catamounts invaded Columbia. This writer was able to attend the game, which turned out to be a good one... for the spectators. Columbia's outfield is very strangely constructed, with the center field fence 322 feet from home plate and this being over 400 feet down the lines. It is a long ball hitter's paradise.

Vermont started Packard, but he was relieved in the fourth after giving up five runs, as Columbia led 5-2, sophomore Charlie Brucato took over the mound duties and pitched well. The Cats rallied with two down in the sixth inning, as they pounded out five hits, including a home run by Packard, for five runs. A solo homer by Kunken in the seventh knotted the score at eight all, but Columbia pulled it out in the eleventh inning on an error, a sacrifice bunt, and a sacrifice fly driving in the winning run for a 9-8 victory.

The highlight of this game occurred in the bottom of the sixth inning when Coach Ralph Lapointe had a slight altercation with the umpire concerning the ball in use. Coach Lapointe argued half in jest, but the umpire must have gotten out of the wrong side of the bed. He became exceedingly angry and threw Ralph out of the game, threatening forfeit if he didn't leave. As the umpire ranted and raved, catcher Rick Aldrich asked him to start play again.

The umpire replied, "I won't start the game until your coach is out of my sight."

Said Aldrich, "Then he won't have to go far."

Rick immediately followed Coach Lapointe to the showers.

The final exhibition game was played last Sunday against Fairleigh Dickinson. Bovenizer started, but was hit for five runs in the first inning, although three were unearned. Trailing 6-0 entering the top of the fourth inning, the Cats sent eleven batter to the plate and scored seven runs. Don Schneider pitched the last six innings and only allowed one base runner on a scratch single. Vermont scored once again and posted their fourth victory, 8-6.

The road trip cleared up several problems for the Vermont ball club, but it also uncovered a few. Coach Lapointe was disappointed with his pitching staff, which he believed would be stronger than it showed. He praised Len Sheflott (who allowed no runs in twelve innings pitched) reliever Don Schneider (no runs in ten innings), and Charlie Brucato. John Packard pitched poorly, but was suffering from an arm ailment and did not feel up to par. John McCord (3.60 ERA) and Bruce Bovenizer (3.00) pitched respectively, but not up to their potential. Both had control problems. The staff's earned run average for the trip was a respectable 2.75.

Coach Lapointe plans to work mainly on his team's batting during the up coming week. It is the department that will decide the team's chances for the Yankee Conference crown, and it needs a lot of work. Terry O'Leary led the regulars in hitting with a .263 batting average for the tour. He was closely followed by Dave Lapointe (.259), John Packard (.259), and Don Fitts (.241). Sophomores Bob Neild and Steve Kunhen met the ball consistently, but the ball just wouldn't drop it for the hit often enough. The lack of offensive punch is best illustrated by the team's batting average for the tour - a lowly .199 percentage.

The Cats were also hurt when outfielder Dave Wayne was injured sliding home against Villanova. Wayne suffered a fractured and dislocated right ankle, which will sideline him for the entire season.

On the bright side, the Catamounts have come up with a tremendous defensive key-stone combination, Dave Lapointe; at short-stop, and Steve Kunken, at second, committed only one error in the eight game series.

The team was exhausted by the road trip and will work out lightly. Coach Lapointe pointed out that Vermont was very much in every game they lost, and that his ball players came back time and again after falling behind by several runs. This is very encouraging and necessary in a championship club.

Vermont's varsity will next play the freshmen Saturday in preparation for their games against Connecticut on April 14th and 15th at Storrs.

VERMONT CONFERENCE

Harrington professed his view that "justice in the United States discriminates against the poor in favor of the rich." Recent Supreme Court decisions have been helpful, he stated, "but enormous (economic) inequality is still a powerful element in promoting inequality before the law." Harrington said there is a tremendous amount of white collar crime which never reaches the arrest stage at all in this country today.

Harrington was very much in sympathy with the task facing the policemen in urban slums. "Slums have the highest rate of murder, rape and aggravated assault of any socio-economic area in the country. In any big city, police are the fall-guys, told to step in and accomplish by force what we have failed to do in any other way. A good society would not have the problem of police brutality because there would not be the social basis for it."

The problem of crime in the United States is in many ways an ironic one, Harrington implied. Those people most consistently condemned, and often erroneously so, for criminal behavior, are in most instances more fearful than anyone else of being the victims of crime.

"We have not yet made a commitment to abolish the slums of America," Harrington stated. "We are going to have more, and not less crime, in America, because slums breed crime, and we are creating more slums."

Is Income Tax Credit Bill As Beneficial as it Seems?

By Karen Kiernan

Students and parents beware! What looks like a good idea and a boost to the college financial situation may be a lie! The matter at hand; a federal income tax credit for those footing the bills of higher education. At first glance one might give the government credit for at last doing something to alleviate the burden of college costs. Many would be allowed to slice a sizable amount off of their income taxes and $1.5 billion would be allotted to institutions to help students meet some of the charges of tuition and fees, books and supplies. Also, government money, instead of being rechanneled by hands of congress, alumni, businesses, and big foundations, would reach schools directly.

The plan, proposed by Senator Abraham Ribicoff, works like this: for the first $200 paid, 75% or $150 is credited. The next $300 is allowed a 25% or $75 credit. On the next $1000 paid a 10% or $100 credit is given. This applies to anyone with an adjusted gross income of up to $25,000 a year. Over that, credit is reduced $50 for each $5,000 income.

A beneficial proposal? Look closer. First of all, the maximum credit allowed is $325 and to get it your payments must total at least $1,500, not counting board and room. Secondly, tax support would be proportional to the fees charged. Hence, few institutions would resist the temptation to raise costs and glean for themselves more aid than the tax payer. It was estimated in a mid-western private school with 5,000 students each paying $1,500, that an increase of $1,625,000 a year could be realized by hiking the tuitions the full amount, of the tax credit. Thirdly, will this extra $325 a year remain in parents' pockets? Senators such as Aiken, Smathers, Bayh, McCarthy, and Mansfield, having twice been instrumental in the bill's congressional defeat, believe not. They see through the plan as a clear-cut maneuver for raising tuitions without fear of over-pricing. Waldo C.M. Johnston, associate director of alumni relations at Yale, admits that the idea started as a way to aid colleges, but in order to gain the support of the American Council On Education the emphasis had to be placed on the side of the parents. A fourth question was raised: If the government "gives away" $1 billion, no strings attached, who in the end makes up the deficit? The tax payer who got the "relief" does. States spending a lot on their state colleges (i.e. California) are getting gipped. Low tuition rates are already guaranteed by high taxes. Such states would receive smaller tuition credits and would pay more of any increase in federal income taxes to make up the $1 billion shortage. It's obvious that the North Atlantic states, where 2/3 of the students attend private institutions, are favored.

The advantage of freedom from congressional control can also be looked at in another light. Suppose tax credits were available to parents transferring their children from integrated public schools to segregated private ones. Wouldn't the federal government, with its aid, be encouraging the circumvention of the U.S. Constitution? Additional worry arises from the fact that once Congress has given away the $1 billion in the form of tax credit, the scholarships, student loans, research grants, and new facilities probably will not be subsidized. Headaches also stem from the impossibility of keeping records on books and supplies purchased by students.

This plan will not be beneficial to the majority of people and thus the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges and The Association of State Colleges and Universities say that "ways can and should be found . . . which do not discriminate against large groups of students and institutions. The tax credit approach does not meet these standards."

And what does UVM think of the proposal? Miss Malia Dean, Assistant to the Dean of Women, says first of all that she doesn't really know enough about the bill to make an accurate statement, but basically she is opposed to centralization and involvement of the federal government in educational policies and decisions. She feels that fiscal matters should be the concern of the institutions themselves and, where applicable, the state governments.

Patterson in Favor Of Gov. Aid

Mr. Gordon Patterson, Administrator in the Bursar's office, sympathizes with anyone paying the cost of college education today. He is in favor of any aid the government can give. For UVM out-of-staters this bill certainly is beneficial, but on a national scale he isn't quite so sure, not being entirely familiar with the bill. He supports it, but raises question on its implementation. Would the government require to see receipts in duplicate or triplicate? Every UVM student knows what it is to stand in book lines for hours. How many additional hours would be spent while every student got his two or three receipts? Also, more workers would have to be hired to accommodate the students. If, however, one receipt is all that is necessary that we wouldn't run into this almost insurmountable mix-up. Mr. Patterson disagrees that money would be solely for the school's benefit. After all, Medicare money doesn't go straight to the hospitals-thousands of people have profited. The idea of colleges increasing tuitions is a possibility, but an unlikely one. The same could be done with the National Defense Loan and the Wilbur Fund. But, no one can say that these funds have encouraged universities to raise fees. Everytime someone gives money, the university doesn't leap on it. About the tax payer having to make up the deficit, Patterson asks, "Why do we have a progressive income tax anyway? The tax situation is based on the ability to pay. One shouldn't quibble about paying a little more to help the future of the country, or the world. School is society's investment in itself." Patterson would like to see a longer-ranged bill put through so that everyone qualified to go to college can be preparing from his grammar school days onward. If everyone who can make a contribution to society can be assured of a college education to realize his potential then the tax payer is repaid a hundredfold. Take the cost of wars alone. Maybe if all the people who might have gone to college, had gone, then the war we're in now and others could have been prevented. In relation to war's cost, this government aid would be dirt cheap.

Dr. Lewy Here April 8

By Henry Berger, History Dept.

Dr. Guenter Lewy, Professor of Government at the University of Massachusetts and author of the controversial book, "The Catholic Church And Nazi Germany," will speak at 8 p.m. on Sunday, April 9 in Lower Waterman Lounge on the campus of the University of Vermont. The lecture, open to the public without charge, is being sponsored by the Hillel Foundation.

Dr. Lewy's topic will be "How New Is the New Germany?" a subject about which the German-born political scientist is very knowledgeable. A native of Breslau, Germany, Dr. Lewy left Germany in 1938 at the age of 15, emigrated to Palestine and then to the United States. He taught at Columbia and Smith College before assuming his present position at Massachusetts. Dr. Lewy has spent a number of years researching and writing about the Nazi period and is the recipient of a number of academic awards, including a Social Science Research Council Faculty Fellowship and a Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship.

"The Catholic Church And Nazi Germany" (printed in 1964 and also published in German, French, Italian, and Dutch translations) is a study of the relationship of the Nazi state and the Catholic Church. The book followed in the wake of the play by Rolf Hochhuth, "The Deputy."

In his study, Lewy argues that though there were individual Catholics who actively fought Nazism, the Church itself was conspicuous in its silence about the extermination of the Jews. He places the blame for this situation upon the political ideology of the Catholic Church and a long tradition of practical accommodation with the Nazi State. The thesis has provoked a continuing discussion about the role of the Catholic Church in particular and organized religion in general concerning important social questions of the Twentieth Century.

New Deans Chosen

Dr. Alfred Rollins Offered A&S Post

DR. ROLLINS

Dr. Alfred B. Rollins Jr. has been offered the post of Dean of Arts and Sciences at UVM, it was learned late Monday evening from unconfirmed sources.

While such information cannot formally be released by the University of Vermont Public Relations Office until: 1.) a candidate accepts; and 2.) such acceptance is acknowledged through official action by the University Board of Trustees, unofficial confirmation has been received.

Through the cooperation of the Harper College newspaper, "The Colonial News," the information was obtained "concerning a rumor circulating at Harper that Dr. Rollins might be leaving due to an offer received from another college."

Dr. Rollins, a specialist in recent United States history, received his B.A. from Wesleyan in 1942, with distinction in English. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa there.

In 1946, Dr. Rollins received his M.A. from Wesleyan and his Ph. D. from Harvard. Both degrees were in History, with emphasis upon social and cultural aspects of recent United States history.

Dr. Rollins' writings have been largely political. His major work is "Roosevelt and Howe," and others are "Woodrow Wilson and the New America," "Depression, Recession, and War," a documentary history of the United States, and a book for the American Nation Series. He has also written many articles on Roosevelt and education.

A First Lieutenant in the Air Force during World War II, and recipient of the Distinguished Flying Cross, Dr. Rollins' first teaching position was at the State University at New Paltz. Between 1948 and 1963, Dr. Rollins was promoted from instructor to professor.

At this time Dr. Rollins was also a member of the Fellow Fund for the Advancement of Education, a philanthropic and academic organization.

In 1963, Dr. Rollins moved to Harper, and has been Chairman of the History Department since 1964.

DEAN KIDDER

Apr. 1 - University of Vermont Trustees today named a new dean of men, a new assistant dean for the Graduate College, and approved appointment of retiring Arts and Sciences Dean George V. Kidder to serve as assistant to the president and alumni field officer next year.

Dean Kidder's appointment will be a part-time one. He will serve as assistant to President Lyman S. Rowell, and will work with the University's development and alumni directors. Trustees have authorized establishment of the position of development officer and a search is on for a man to fill that post. A committee is also currently seeking a successor for Dr. Kidder in the post of Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, the largest of UVM's four undergraduate colleges.

Dean Kidder is a native of Johnson, Vt., and has served the University of Vermont since his graduation with Phi Beta Kappa and magna cum laude honors in 1922, with only brief interruptions for advanced study. A Rhodes Scholar who earned his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago, he taught in the department of classical languages and literature at UVM before becoming dean of Arts and Sciences in 1948.

DR. CHIPMAN

Dr. Robert Chipman, associate professor of zoology, who joined the Vermont faculty in 1962, was named to fill the newly established post of assistant dean of the Graduate College.

President Rowell noted the creation of the position is in recognition of the growth of en-

Kake Wake Committee Elects New Directors

Kake Walk is all over for this year. It was a great success and well demonstrated the many hours of work that went into it. Our directors this year spent a semester and a half preparing for it. The time has come for them to undertake the difficult task of choosing the directors for next year.

There were four assistant directors, as always. This creates a feeling of competition among the assistants to demonstrate the excellence that they can achieve. This year as every other the assistants did a tremendous job.

They are chosen for directorships by the Directors that have worked very closely with them for a whole year. This without a doubt a hard decision to make.

The directors met last night and chose the directors, with the approval of the IFC, for Kake Walk '68.

WILLIAM MACHANIC

In the position of Publicity Director is William Cyrus Machanic. He is a member of Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity and is from Burlington, Vermont. He held the position last year of Assistant Director of Production. He also has been very active in UVM affairs for the past three years. He has been: treasurer of his fraternity; treasurer of SCOPE; Editor of the Freshman Review; Chairman of Homecoming Ball; a member of Gold Key and Key and Serpent. After graduation he plans to go to Med. School.

SAMMUEL BAIN

In the Position of Finance Director we find Samuel Eugene Bain. Last year he was Assistant Finance Director. He hails from St. Johnsbury, Vermont and is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity. Other than Kake Walk his activities have been: Rushing Chairman of Sig Ep.; Student Court; advanced ROTC; and treasurer of Key and Serpent. He plans to go to grad school and into the Army.

PAUL SHAMBO

Heading the Production will be Paul Francis Shambo. He was the Assistant Publicity Director for Kake Walk '67. He is a member of Delta Psi Fraternity, from Rutland, Vermont. He has been very active in the University for the three years he has been here. His activities have included: past President of the Men's Resident Hall Council; Billings Center governing Board; treasurer of Delta Psi; and track team. His future plans include Public or Industrial Relations.

UVM Debaters Win National Tourney

The University of Vermont's top debate team of Carl Lisman and Nicholas Danigelis debated their way into the Championship of Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa Alpha over this past weekend at Wayne State University in Detroit. Eighty-nine colleges from all over the land participated in this conference. Each college was permitted to enter a team of two in the Championship Debate and four debaters for the 4-man Division. On Thursday and Friday, March 30 and 31, Lisman and Danigelis had six rounds of debate which were powermatched with winners meeting winners. They won their way to the top sixteen by defeating the University of West Virginia, the University of Wichita, Indiana State, the University of Denver, and the University of Oregon. They lost one debate only and that to the dark horse team of the tournament, Rose Polytechnic Institute of Terre Haute. On Saturday the top sixteen schools debated for the Championship in an elimination tournament. In the Octa Finals - Vermont beat Notre Dame. In the Quarter Finals, they won over Wayne State. In the Semi-Finals, they defeated Capital University and in the Finals they won the Championship by defeating George Washington.

Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa Alpha is an honorary forensic fraternity with a select membership of two hundred schools throughout the nation. In the New England area, such schools as Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Bates, Williams, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and the University of Massachusetts, along with the University of Vermont are members. The annual conference is a three day affair with a variety of events, one of which is the Championship Debate Tournament. In addition, however, there is Congressional Session, a contest in Persuasive Speaking, a contest in Extemporaneous Speaking, along with business meetings by both the national Student Council and the National Council.

One feature of the annual event was the election of student officers. The University of Vermont was quite honored to have Donna Loizeaux chosen as one of the four members-at-large elected to the National Council. She will serve for the coming year.

In addition to the Championship Division of Debate, there is also a 4-man Division and the University of Vermont entered four debaters. Into this topnotch debating, the University of Vermont put three freshmen and a sophomore. On the affirmative were the two freshmen of Barbara Tatler and Ed Burrington. They ended up with the excellent record of 5 wins and 3 losses, having defeated Texas Tech, University of Wisconsin, Xavier University, Washington and Jefferson College and Brigham Young University. They lost to Wayne State University, the University of Southern California, and Wabash College. On the negative team in the 4-man Division were Nancy Ingalls, a freshman, and Donna Loizeaux, a sophomore. They, too, won 5 and lost 3, defeating the University of South Dakota, Western Michigan, Wabash,

23 Promoted to Professorships

The University of Vermont announced the promotion of 23 members of the faculty to full professorships.

Associate and assistant professorships were announced at the same time.

These will be effective at the start of the 1967-68 academic year.

The list is as follows:

Full Professor

College of Agriculture and Home Economics: Richard J. Bartlett and Albert M. Smith.

College of Arts and Sciences: Lubomir A.D. Dellin, Richard W. Glade, Robert W. Hall, Raul Hilberg, Edward J. Miles, Milton Potash, Albert W. Sadler, and Norman J. Slamecka.

College of Technology: Stanley Rush.

College of Medicine: Edward C. Andrews, Arthur Gladstone, Julian J. Jaffee, Roy Korson, Bert K. Kusserow, Jerold F. Lucey, Richard L. Naeye, Ethan A.H. Sims, William J. Slavin, Burton S. Tabakin, H. Gordon Page and Ralph D. Sussman.

Associate Professor

College of Agriculture and Home Economics: Boyd W. Post and Kenneth R. Simmons.

College of Arts and Sciences: Abbas Alnasrawi, Zuell P. Ambrose, Robert W. Caswell, John E. Krizan, Mervyn W. Perrine, Wolfe W. Schmokel, and John G. Weiger.

College of Education and Nursing: Leslie R. Leggett, Rosalie M. Lombard, and Mary Ellen Palmer.

School of Dental Hygiene: Phyllis M. Quimby.

College of Medicine: William S. Agras, Rex D. Couch, Gino A. Dente, Harriet Ellen Gillette, Raymond F. Kuhlmann, John E. Mazuzan, Ernest L. Mills, Charles B. Rust, Thomas D. Trainer, and Stanley L. Burns.

Assistant Professor

College of Agriculture and Home Economics: Sylvia J. Quackenbush.

College of Arts and Sciences: Walter P. Aschenbach.

College of Medicine: Phillip H. Davis, Warren W. Epinette, Stokes Gentry, James F. Madison, James W. Stackpole, and William C. Street.

Wayne State and the University of Wisconsin. They lost to the University of Kentucky, Mercer College and Temple University. This 10 Win - 6 Loss record placed them in a tie for 6th place. Thus, both Vermont's most experienced debaters as well as the underclassmen came through with excellent records in strong national competition.

rollments and programs in the College, which offers over 50 masters and 10 doctoral programs.

He said much of this growth has been in the science fields, and the new position will relieve some of the time of Graduate Dean William H. Macmillan to give more time to development of programs in other fields.

DR. POWERS

Trustees also named an Indiana University staff member and Ph.D. candidate as Dean of Men effective July 1.

He is Richard W. Powers, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., who is currently associate director of residence halls and counseling activities at Indiana, where he also expects to receive the Ph.D. in higher education government this June. He earned his A.B. at Allegheny, and also studied at Kent State University where he was on the student personnel staff.

At Vermont, he will be on the staff of Dean of Student Personnel Services Roland D. Patzer, beginning July 1, succeeding Carl O. Eucke, who left the post of acting dean of men to become director of student activities at North Carolina State University.

UNITED FUND DRIVE

Gold Key, the Sophomore Men's Honorary, will be sponsoring a United Fund Drive this Wed. and Thurs., April 5th and 6th.

There will be booths in the lounges on the six main dorms on Redstone from 4:30 to 6:30 on Wed. The members manning the booths will solicit for donations to the United Fund from the women students.

Thursday the booths will be in the MAT complex, again from 4:30 to 6:30. There will also be a booth in Billings all day both Wed. and Thurs.

The money raised will supplement the Chittenden County United Fund Drive which has a goal of $360,000.

April 5 at 8:00 p.m. in the Noble Court, Fleming Museum, DEPARTURE, the campus literary magazine will present a poetry reading by Mr. Edward English. Mr. English a native of Selma, Alabama gave up a prosperous business after he began writing poetry in the mid 50's. He is, in affect an itinerant poet and has given readings at many major American universities. He has just recently returned from Canada. A voluntary contribution will be solicited.

Outstanding Greeks Awarded Special Events Highlight Three-Day Weekend

Diane Dempsey and Fred Brown Accoladed for Achievement

by Martha J. Huff

The Panhellenic Council feels that there are numerous individuals who have made outstanding contributions to the Greek System and the University of Vermont. In order to give due recognition to these individuals, the Panhellenic Council awarded trophies for the first time to the Outstanding Greek Woman and the Outstanding Greek Man.

Each sorority nominated a senior member of its respective sorority and a senior member of another sorority. Each fraternity nominated a senior member of its fraternity and a senior member of another fraternity. These nominations were reviewed by a committee comprised of the Dean of Women, the Dean of Men, the Director of Student Activities, the Advisor to Panhellenic Council, the Advisor to I.F.C., a junior delegate from Panhellenic, and a junior delegate from I.F.C.

The nominees were judged according to 1) leadership, 2) service to the University, 3) service to the Greek System, 4) service to their respective sorority or fraternity, 5) service to the community, 6) interest and ability in scholarship and academic activities, and 7) character and ideals as exemplified by fraternity membership.

DIANNE D. DEMPSEY

Thursday night at the I.F.C. Panhellenic Banquet, held at the Holiday Inn, Miss Jackie Gribbons, Dean of Women, presented the Outstanding Greek Woman Award to Dianne Dempsey and a plaque for the same to her sorority, Delta Delta Delta. Dean Hewitt presented the Outstanding Greek Man Award to Frederick Brown and a plaque to his fraternity, Delta Psi.

Dianne is enrolled in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics majoring in Food and Nutrition. She was pledged to Delta Delta Delta the second semester of her freshman year and was a delegate to their National Convention in 1964. As a junior, Dianne was elected to Panhellenic Council and has served as its President since March 1966.

As President Dianne says, "I have strived to improve inter-sorority relations by developing a strong Council that is Greek oriented, thinking of a system rather than individual groups... to create a bond of friendship among its members... to promote mutually beneficial relations between its members and the University."

FRED BROWN

Frederick Brown is a member of the College of Arts and Sciences majoring in chemistry. He has served as corresponding secretary of Delta Psi, vice-president and president of I.F.C. Fred has also been a member of Ethan, Allen Rifles, Key and Serpent, and Boulder Society.

While serving as President of I.F.C., Fred was active in "uniting I.F.C. and PanHel in the functioning of Greek Week in 1965; in establishing a self help committee in the I.F.C. which is composed of specialists from different houses to help an individual house; and initiating the I.F.C. Retreat which gave the opportunity for all new house presidents to know each other well."

Panhellenic Council extends its sincere congratulations to these two outstanding individuals. It is hoped that these trophies will be given annually and through the years will achieve significance and prestige to both the recipient and the Greek System.

Phi Beta Kappa Chooses 17 New Members

The University of Vermont chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will initiate 17 seniors in ceremonies on Tuesday, April 4 in the chapter's room in Waterman Building.

The new members are Alan E. Irwin and Bernard E. Newton of Burlington; Joseph H. Badgewick and Martha J. Vincent of Rutland; Alison L. Bristol of Bristol; Ruth K. Campagna of Winooski; Allison Craig of Brookfield; Jerome Felsenstein, Bellevue, N.Y.; Paul S. Flaxman, Oceanside, N.Y.; Linda Graf, Broomall, Pa.; Marsha Hopkins, Springfield.

Also, Claire Kahkola, Bellows Falls; David L. Matthews, Bethesda, Md.; Eloise A. Roberts, South Hero; Karen A. Shalvoy, Norwalk, Conn.; Margaret J. Strait, St. Albans; and Richard A. Weiss, New Rochelle, N.Y.

The students were elected to membership in the national honor society March 17.

NOTICE

Because of the Honors day celebration on Monday, April 17, there will be no classes at 10, 11 or 12 o'clock. 8 and 9 classes are NOT cancelled.

State Day, Presidential Inauguration And Honors Day To Be Celebrated

A widely representative group of campus student leaders have been invited to join other special guests and delegates for the main events of this weekend's 175th anniversary celebration events.

The invitations are a frank approach to saying, in effect, that the weekend events are as much for students at Vermont as for faculty, staff, alumni and other guests.

And, frankly, the hope is that this will lead to more student interest in and attendance at the events which start Saturday with a wide range of tours and exhibits. These are mainly for off campus visitors who may not have seen the campus before or recently. Students and faculty coming and going from classes may find they will have to share campus walks and hallways with anywhere from hundreds to thousands of visitors.

No one has any sure way of knowing how many people will visit the campus this weekend, but efforts through newspapers, radio, television, posters and word of mouth have been made to invite citizens from all over the state to take part in the weekend.

Dr. Jack Little, chairman of the University Ceremonies Committee, and Dr. Herbert McArthur, chairman of the special Anniversary Committee, also hope students and faculty will be attracted to attend and participate in several of the events of the weekend, including the Saturday Convocation at 3 p.m. in the Patrick Gymnasium where Dr. O. Meredith Wilson, president of the University of Minnesota; and former UVM Presidents Carl W. Borgmann and John T. Fey, will speak on the anniversary theme - "The University and Its People: A Cooperative Venture in Freedom and Responsibility." The convocation is free and open to all.

PRES. ROWELL'S INAUGURATION

Governor Philip H. Hoff and Senator George Aiken will be among guest speakers when Lyman S. Rowell is inaugurated as the 19th President of the University of Vermont, Sunday.

The Sunday inaugural is at 2:15 p.m. in the Patrick Gymnasium, with an informal reception to follow at Simpson Hall.

Senator Aiken will be the speaker at the luncheon for delegates which will precede the inauguration, and Governor Hoff will be one of eight who will bring greetings to the University on the occasion of Mr. Rowell's installation.

Other delegates, each of whom will speak briefly, are: Lawrence H. Marvin, for the Board of Trustees; Dr. John S. Millis, President of Western Reserve University, for former Vermont presidents; John S. Burgess, Brattleboro lawyer, Class of '42, for the alumni; Dr. Paul A. Moody, chairman of the department of zoology, for the faculty and staff.

Also: James Fontanella, president of the Student Association, for the students; Ernest W. Hartung, president of the University of Idaho, for sister institutions; and Levi Smith, Sr., chairman of the Board of Burlington Savings Bank, for the community.

Mr. Rowell will deliver the inaugural address.

Presidents Hartung and Rowell, both former professors of zoology, had earlier taught together at Vermont.

There will be 150 sister institutions and associations from Canada and 45 states represented at the ceremony.

HONORS DAY

Honors Day will be held on Monday, April 17th at 10:15 a.m. in the gym. Seniors will join the academic procession in cap and gown and it will format 10:00 a.m. in the field house.

Plans are also being made for Senior Week activities. The Senior Picnic on May 17th will be held at the Old Lantern in Charlotte.

On Thursday evening, May 18th, the Banquet and Ball will convene at the Towne and Country in Stowe. On Friday, May 19th, Class Day with the Class Walk and Garden Party will take place.

For further information and developments note the Senior class bulletin board directly across from the school store.

WORLD-WIDE Cynic

By Terrie Wurzbacher

This week's World-Wide Cynic will be devoted to the Korean paper, the Chung-ang Herald, which is published by Chung-ang University in Seoul, Korea.

TO THE EDITORS ABROAD - The Chung-ang Herald is the English newspaper published at Chung-ang University in Seoul, Korea. It is a student publication primarily designed to give correct and timely information to the students and the faculty alike. It further aims at introducing the views and opinions of Chungangians to the world through the international language.

CHUNG-ANG UNIVERSITY FOUNDATION IN U.S.A. - The American Friends of Chung-ang University, Inc. has been officially approved by the U.S. treasury as charitable and an educational foundation early this year. The Advisory Council consists of prominent civic leaders, business executives and educators.

CONGRATULATIONS! MRS. FLYING TIGER - 1967 Commencement Exercises are especially significant because we are about to welcome into our Family one of the greatest American women. She is no other person than Madam Clair Lee Chennault, the widow of General Chennault, the leader of the world-famed Flying Tiger. Had the U.S. listened to his repeated plea to continue helping the Nationalist China's war effort in the Mainland China, the world map of today could have been much differently shaded. Some tend to think the fragile and charming lady is shadowed by the illuminating accomplishments of her gallant flyer, but she is great in her own merits. She paved her way to eminence in the field of journalism. Her gift in writing has brought forth no less than three best sellers and a dozen more of books and novels on the Orient.

THREE GET MEDALS IN 3RD ASIANGAMES - Among nine students of Chung-ang University who participated in the Fifth Asian Games held from December 9-20 in Bangkok, Thailand, three athletes won medals in the boxing and wrestling events. The Republic of Korea placed second in the fifth Asian Games by bringing 12 gold, eighteen silver, and twenty-one bronze medals.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT NEEDED - The Graduate School of Community Development at Chung-ang University is the first of its kind in Korea and is the fourth school in the world after London University in England, University of the Philippines in the Philippines, and the University of California in the United States. The word "community development" seems to be new but its origin dates back to time immemorial when mankind began its social activity works. It can be defined as an act which brings better living standards and social development by reasonably mobilizing man and material resources of the community in which people live on a cooperation and solidarity basis. The causes of the rural district's backwardness are:

1) They are short of will power to live better. 2) They are not equipped with systematic organization to make better amelioration. 3) They do not have a scientific and effective system of leadership.

RECORD NUMBER STUDENTS APPLY - The competition ratio this year showed 12.1 to 1 over the highest in the administration test chronological of Chung-ang University. Last year a total of 11,128 applicant students competed in the admission test to register a ratio of 10.6 to 1. This year there were 12,759 applicants.

Dr. Forgays Studies Humans In Isolation

By Connie Chapman

In a dark room, submerged in a tank of warm water, the subject waits for the passage of time. Simultaneously, others outside watch a row of electronic instruments which are keeping track of his every reaction.

The person in the tank is outfitted with a helmet and breathing apparatus, and is suspended in a harness that resembles that of a parachute. This keeps him stable while allowing some freedom of movement. Electrodes attached to the subject record his respiration, heartbeat, breathing, eye movement, brain waves (for measurement of total cerebral activity), and galvanic skin response (for measurement of emotional change).

The experiment, under the direction of Dr. Donald Forgays, professor of psychology, is being conducted in order to discern individual differences in isolation. People differ in their physiologic and personality make-ups, and the project is looking for some correlation and pattern in the range of responses while in isolation.

Some people have little or no obvious affect, while others are greatly bothered by isolation in a short period of time. Very little is known about why these differences occur, and although some experiments have been done with air isolation, there is little information concerning the more complete isolation encountered under water.

The project is sponsored by NASA, which is interested in the isolation variable, especially as it might apply to astronauts. They would also like to learn how to ameliorate the effects of isolation to insure top performance.

There are two kinds of isolation. One, "depatterning", is concerned with a homogenous, unchanging environment, while the other, "cutting back of stimuli", attempts to achieve a no stimuli environment. The overall effect of the tank experiment is "depatterning", which is also the type of isolation with which the astronauts must cope.

The subjects in this experiment are paid volunteers of either sex, and of varied physiologic and psychological characteristics. Before entering the tank, the subjects are screened by a medical check-up.

Their basal metabolism rate is established and they are given a battery of psychological tests including visual tests of brightness matching, problem solving, and digit and word associations. A period of about thirty minutes is given the subject to familiarize him with his surroundings, and at this time he gives short "time hacks" (estimates).

The following week he remains in a state of minimal stimulation for a longer period of time, giving the periodic time hacks by pushing a switch. He is able to communicate at all times with the panel operator; and, if at any time he feels he must conclude his stay in the tank, he is allowed to come out. After leaving the tank, he is immediately retested and undergoes a long interview concerning his stay in the tank.

The main reasons given for leaving the tank are physical complaints and incoherent thinking. Simple auditory, visual, and olfactory hallucinations have occurred, as well as increased anxiety.

Another result is a loss of tension span, which makes it difficult for the subject to concentrate on an idea for any length of time.

It has also been found that people seem to have a built in time mechanism. The time hacks which the subject gives when he thinks a half hour has elapsed are either over estimated or underestimated, but are usually consistent for each person.

NSA Defended

Twelve former presidents of the National Student Association have together published a letter clarifying the NSA's relationship to the Central Intelligence Agency.

Apparently there has been some question concerning the NSA's international program. Many doubted that the NSA was acting independently since it received supporting funds from the CIA, funds without which NSA could not have operated as extensively as it did.

NSA recognized early that students are a significant and influential elite in their countries. Its international policy also recognized the importance which nationalist movements in Asia, Africa, and Latin America would have in shaping the world.

The National Student Association has been one of few institutions through which individuals who felt the urgency of American cooperation could act. Thus, NSA chose to deal particularly with the Soviets and Eastern Europeans as political adversaries in a changing world.

Without substantial funds, NSA's international program would have been immobilized. However, in their statement the former presidents hold that "...each of us concluded that, without question, we would have chosen immobilization if the only funds available were conditioned on impairment of the independence of any of NSA's principles or programs. And so the question became whether CIA funds entailed any such conditions. We state categorically that they did not."

If she doesn't give it to you...

Faculty Tenure Discussed

The subject of tenure has been the topic of a great deal of student discussion on the University campus recently. Despite the frequency with which the subject enters into conversations, few seem to know what tenure is and what benefits or disadvantages it offers.

After meeting certain qualifications, members of the faculty are granted continuous tenure, a permanent position on the University faculty. Upon appointment to the University faculty a teacher enters a probationary period of a maximum six years. During this period he must demonstrate that he possesses the qualities necessary for permanent membership on the faculty; satisfactory performance as a teacher high moral standards and scholarship.

INSTRUCTORS NOT ELIGIBLE

An instructor is not eligible for tenure. He holds his position for a maximum of four years. At this time he has the highest degree possible in his field or made sufficient progress toward it, and has given satisfactory service, he is promoted to the rank of assistant professor.

The basic reason for the institution of tenure is the protection of academic freedom. To quote from the Faculty Handbook, "The main purpose of a University is to stimulate the thinking and the creative powers of its students and its faculty." A teacher must be free from the threat of dismissal due to an expression of ideas which prove to be controversial and disconcerting to certain people. Tenure protects the teacher from this threat and supposedly provides the university with a more stimulating atmosphere by allowing the presentation of provoking ideas.

ASSISTANT PROFESSORS GIVEN SIX YEARS

Faculty Handbook states that individuals appointed to the rank of assistant professor are given tenure after serving in this rank for six years or not more than six years as an officer of instruction, an associate professor is given tenure after two years in that rank or four years as an officer of instruction, a full professor is given tenure after two years as such or not more than three years as an officer of instruction.

DOES TENURE BREED STAGNANCY

In this the actual case or does the attainment of tenure give a sense of security and allow stagnancy? Dean Roland D. Patzer says no, this is not the case. Good teachers and scholars are not motivated by the mere material reward of promotion and tenure. Tenure is not necessary as a sense of security because good teachers are always in demand. Good teachers are not motivated by such reward, but what of poorer teachers? To this Patzer replied that rather than set arbitrary standards of reward such as tenure and promotion, it would be of more benefit to spend the time and money on a system devoting our energies toward improving teaching through seminars, workshops, etc.

Leonidas Jones of the English department, and of the American Association of University Professors says that tenure is absolutely essential to academic freedom. Academic freedom is a very necessary element of progressive university. To assure the university of the best faculty and the students of the best education tenure is necessary.

Dr. and Mrs. Feuer Speak At Lecture Series

By James Collins

The University Lecture Series sponsored lectures by Dr. Lewis S. Feuer and his wife, Dr. Kathryn B. Feuer, on April 10, 11, and 12.

Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Waterman Lower Lounge Mrs. Feuer spoke on "the writings of Tolstoy's 'War & Peace'." Mrs. Feuer is the chairman of the Department of Salvic Languages and Literatures at the University of Toronto; she was formerly acting chairman of the Department of Salvic Languages and Literatures at the University of California at Berkeley. She has written articles for various national periodicals, including "The New York Times," "Encounter" and "The New Leader," as well as having written a novel, "Strike for the Heart."

Dr. Feuer spoke Tuesday, from 9:30 - 11 a.m. in Billings center during a Student coffee hour. Tuesday evening at 7:30 Dr. Feuer gave a free public lecture in the Waterman Lower Lounge, the topic of which was "The Problems of Student Movements in Modern History." Wednesday morning from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Dr. Feuer spoke in the Waterman Faculty Lounge during a faculty coffee hour. Doctor Feuer is a professor of Sociology at the University of Toronto.

Previously he was a professor of philosophy and social science at the University of California at Berkeley. Dr. Feuer is the author of "Spinoza and the Rise of Liberalism," "The Scientific Intellectual" and "Psychoanalysis and Ethics."

He has drawn from his experience at Berkeley in forming his appraisal of Student Movement, past and present. In an article in "The Atlantic Monthly" Dr. Feuer asserts that as a result of the "free speech" explosion at Berkeley and its aftermath, the freedom of speech and freedom of debate at that University is lower than at any other major American university in the last generation. He sees the problem of Berkeley as the problem of the American intellectual class, in that "as it grows in power and numbers ... it demands for itself the privileges and prerogatives of a third chamber of government." Dr. Feuer does not feel a University can be a republic of equals, because "it is based on one essential presupposition - that the elders have something to transmit."

The paradox which Dr. Feuer feels exists at Berkeley - that the outcome of a "successful" movement for freedom has been the decline of freedom - is of importance in that it needs to be understood if freedom as a reality is to be understood.

Prof. Malone Lectured On Jefferson

Professor Dumas Malone, distinguished historian and biographer, in residence at the University of Virginia, was on the campus April 3-4 as a Phi Beta Kappa visiting scholar. Professor Malone is nationally known for his definitive studies of Thomas Jefferson and for his work as editor-in-chief of The Dictionary of American Biography. He served as director of the Harvard University Press from 1936 to 1943. Sponsored by the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, Professor Malone is spending a part of this year in visits to selected colleges and universities.

Professor Malone delivered two major addresses during his visit. He spoke the first evening on "Thomas Jefferson in Our Time," stressing the difficulty of removing a historical personage from the context of his own time and the problem of determining the unspoken assumptions of a particular historical period. Jefferson's commitment to the freedom of the human mind was perhaps the most important idea he left us, suggested Malone.

The next evening Malone spoke on "Going to School with Thomas Jefferson" at a banquet. Jefferson, he noted, had the good fortune to have had three really great teachers out of the six who were involved in his education. He had an excellent education, working with his teachers alone or in very small groups. Jefferson's natural abilities as developed by his education made him the leading American example of the "Renaissance man."

His abilities in diverse field such as architecture, philology, scientific observation, agriculture, and politics brought him close to the ideal of the time, the man of many talents. Malone asserted that such an ideal was, perhaps unfortunately, not the standard of today.

SCOPE Sponsors William Douglas

By John Kyper

William O. Douglas, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, accompanied by his wife, addressed the University at Ira Allen Chapel on Monday, April 3rd. The lecture, sponsored by SCOPE, was entitled "Points of Rebellion."

In his talk the controversial Justice concentrated on the rights of the individual against the overwhelming power of the government. In particular, he was concerned about the rights of dissenters in a free society.

Contemporary society had developed to such an extent, Douglas explained, that various agencies, both governmental and private, now possess complete information on every individual, of even his beliefs and his personal life. No one is immune from the inquisition of bugging devices, which can effectively destroy individual privacy.

MACBIRD'S SMOOTH SOCIETY

By Mary Burnham

"We have an opportunity to move
Not only toward the rich society,
But upwards toward the Smooth Society.
My Smooth Society has room for all,
For each a house, a car, a family,
A private psychoanalyst, a dog,
And rows of gardens neatly trimmed and hedged.
This land will be a garden carefully pruned.
We'll lop off any branch that looks too tall,
That seems to grow too lofty or too fast.
And any weed that springs up in our soil
To choke the plants I've neatly set in rows,
Gets plucked up, root and all, by me, Mac Bird.
And this I do for you, my wholesome flowers.
I see a garden blooming undisturbed
Where all the buds are even in the rows.
An ordered garden sweet with unity,
That is my dream, my Smooth Society."

The above passage from the controversial "political satire" "MacBird" by Barbara Jarson. The quote is obviously Mrs. Jarson's view of Johnson's Great Society.

The greatest irony of the lines lies not in her vivid "portrayal" of the Great Society, but in the fact that many people would not be offended by the conclusion which Mrs. Jarson comes to. They would remain unmoved by her protest.

This protest against Johnson's "plans" should be, more appropriately, directed against those who are, by their lack of concern or foresight, promoters of it.

If the Smooth Society seems uncannily too real once in a while - if the rows are a little too "neat," society too well "pruned" - it is still true that the garden seems to be undisturbed by these conditions. In fact, it seems to enjoy being looked after in such a manner.

Particularly dangerous is the threat upon the rights of those who are considered "subversive" by some agency of the government, whose reputations are destroyed and who are permanently barred from public employment. Such vestiges of McCarthyism, he felt, are often employed as means to attain blind subservience and to effectively eliminate opposition to governmental policy in the name of "loyalty." To illustrate his assertion the Justice cited many examples of governmental employees who had been dismissed from their posts on the mere suspicion of disloyalty - often on fabricated charges at that - with little chance of appeal.

Douglas concluded by decrying that the United States simply could not afford to suppress its dissenters, to close itself to criticism, and yet expect to retain an open and dynamic society.

ANTISEPTIC

By Howard Savin

For those of you who delight in spending many hours each week standing in front of an oven in eager anticipation of newly-cured banana "string", this column may be of some service. As almost everyone knows, waiting for strings to bake can be quite boring and the end results are often unfulfilling. In following with the current trend toward the "grocery-store high", a few suggestions are to be offered.

In the Dairy department, whipped cream (pressurized variety) is a very heavy favorite. As the can is pressurized with nitrous oxide (laughing gas), inhalation of the gas (from an unshaken can) has reportedly been proven to be an enlightening experience. Moving down the aisle into fruits and vegetables, one should always be sure to include a few green peppers in the weekly list. It has been rumored that ones mind may be expanded by inserting a cigarette (preferably a non-filtered brand) into one end of a rotten green pepper and inhaling through the other end. Before leaving the grocery store, one might also be so motivated as to rely on such old standbys as vanilla extract, nutmeg, or sunflower seeds.

For those who might still lack gratification and would cast doubt and suspicion upon these recently publicized means for the achievement of mind elevation, a new test-proven method has been discovered. In following with this method, a V.S.M. membership card must be cut in quarters and baked at 500° for one hour. After allowing for the ashes to cool, they should be soaked (¼ hr.) in a solution of castor oil and powdered cocoa. Following one or two hours of drying under a sun-lamp, the ashes may be smoked or cooked (after grounding in a Waring blender) into strawberry jello. However, careful scientific analysis has revealed that the most potent effects of this drug may be realized by dropping the ashes (either whole or ground) into melted paraffin wax and carefully injecting them in suppository form.

(In cases of desperation, pre-1964 Marvel Comics or toilet paper from the student center at Berkeley, Calif., may be substituted for the V.S.M. membership card.)

NURRI

ITS CIADELICI

By Dick Matheson

As everyone knows, between one-quarter and one-third of us students have at least the rank of Super-Snooper in the CIA, which is subsidizing our anti-intellectual tuition rates so that we can come to college and learn things (when we're not too busy spying on each other).

This CIAdelic trend is taking all the fun out of the game because who has time to start any new subversive organizations when they're so busy looking for the elusive old ones Ralph Welch and cronies have been reporting?

Well, to get down to brass knuckles, I have finked out of the CIA and, all in the interests of the Game, of course, determined to discover, produce, or point out some new Sug-org's right here at our very own UVM.

The first Sug-org is called Organization for Love, Freedom, Sobriety, and Democracy (what title could be more subversive than that?) and its purpose is to prevent the drafting of UVM males. OLFSAD publicly advocates the overthrow of the government (if anyone investigates, they will say they meant the Red Chinese government) and it is assumed that the Army doesn't want any of this sort of material in their midst.

The only drawback to OLFSAD is the $50. registration fee: OLFSAD plans to send a hundred thousand dollars to the Defense Department with the subtly self-satirical note: "To show that our hearts are in the right place. Even if our guts aren't."

The second Sub-org is the Ascetic-Students Society (which prefers to be called by its formal, rather than informal, name). They wish to censor the wife of the head resident in an all-male complex for appealing to the prurient interests of the residents.

A third Sub-org is rather antithetical to OLFSAD and goes by the witty and original title, Draft Students, Not Beer! Now this group doesn't sound very subversive at all, because it is right in line with all those super-patriots who desire all Vietnicks, pacifists, and in-

RE: LISMAN AND PEARSON

Messrs. Lisman and Pearson:

Your rapier wit most deeply cuts those who fence with it. Napoleon said, "Wit is a fine thread. Stretch it too fine and it will break." He also knew enough not to wash his dirty underwear in public. Your letter smells of naivete, and two pseudo-names patting each other on the back. This is obvious when one remembers Balzac's cogent statement: "And so we pass a good part of our lives in ridding our minds of the notions that have grown up there in adolescence. The operation is known as acquiring experience." It seems that you may not have spent a great part of your lives acquiring experience.

You set yourselves apart with a god much akin to the "Aegyptians who made Garlick their God." You assume the air of a Sartre who says that he knows of no greater pity than "that man is guided through life by all the little signs that say 'KEEP OFF THE GRASS.'" Yet, you are being guided through life by little signs, but signs of a different shape perhaps.

The other defines your essence and existence. There is no way around the fact. You cannot exist without the other. You cannot live apart from the Other. It is too easy to withdraw into a nihilistic separation. It is the brave one who accepts whatever absurdity there is; the naive withdraw and set themselves apart. The other is here at UVM - they are real people.

These people define your existence. If you decry them, you decry your reflected-self, the self they define for you. To calumny them is to merely calumny yourselves. You do this beautifully. Mohamet was wise enough to realize that the mountains would not come to him, so he went to the mountains. We cannot rescue you from your tail, ivory towers fair "Joans in Fairyland." You must make the decision to descend to the real world, or perish.

The University has an obligation to the student, to prepare him to be a functional part of society as it is, and as it is evolving in the present. This society is a complex and varied thing made of many kinds of people. Society at large does not just consist of intellectuals or whatever you term yourselves and those of your genre.

The University's obligations are not just to you and your kind. The obligation is much wider than that. You can seek what you want at the University and find it with a conscious endeavor; if you are not willing to seek it with a conscious endeavor, you are sadly deceiving yourselves. But, just because many of the other students at the University are not seeking the same things you are, does not make them fools. They do not lack motivation, intellect and desire merely because they do not pursue the goals you do.

Do you lack motivation, intel-

By M. Minsky

The general virtue of war, as opposed to its specific vices of destruction of property and life, is that it gives an opportunity to those of a superior culture to exert themselves and display their own advanced technology to those less fortunate than themselves and in so doing inform, instruct and enlighten. Not only does it encourage valor among the soldier, but also valor among the citizen who cheerfully stays home to bake cookies, give blood and work in war plants. The popular musicals of the forties can not fail to give the impression that the American people secretly loved the war and the excitement it brought them.

There are in any country gross cowards however, who, to conceal their own laziness, claim they are pacifists. They would rather spend five years in jail than fight for the government of the United States of America and its president Lyndon Baines Johnson - who suffers in silence the crucifixion he is receiving from the hands of these scoundrel trouble-making pacifists who live high and easy off public funds in the luxury of the federal prisons and also those Russian stooges, the "liberals" whose appalling calumny surely disturbs the peace of his sleep.

Now there are those who declare that the greatest number of victims in this war are civilians killed or wounded by American bombs and Napalm. They point out that the Viet-Cong have killed some 11,000 people, the American war effort has caused the death or the wounding of at least 300,000 people. But is it possible that God would direct an American bullet or bomb to kill innocent people? Is that not blasphemy? And we are a nation under God. To blaspheme him, then, is TREASON. True a large number of children have been injured or killed by Napalm.

Sinister snake-eyed Charlie slinks up a tree, pours Napalm over a band of bright-eyed singing children bearing the exotic flowers of Viet Nam to their American liberators. The Viet Cong fill coke and beer bottles, stolen from around the bodies of one of OUR BOYS, and then concoct napalm from the medical supplies sent to him by the "International RED!! Cross" and various peace groups in this nation.

Meanwhile, in spite of the war and perhaps because of it, the people in Viet Nam are making great progress. In Saigon for example, where the theaters used to have almost nothing but kooky gooky dances or artsy-craftsy-Frenchy "Drama," wholesome American entertainment such as "The Professionals," "Oh Dad, Poor Dad" is being shown for the general edification of the people of Viet Nam.

So, perhaps that day is not too far when the Winooski and the Mekong Rivers will meet somewhere in the middle of the serene ocean of brotherly love. And let us not forget the words of that ancient Roman who spoke them first in the marbled halls of pious lofty Rome, declaring, in words as true today as they were when the first cavemen emerged forth from his cave, those inspiring words grandiloquent in tongue and gesture, "DULCE ET DECORUM EST TUER PROR PATRIA."

Dear President Rowell,

I wish to congratulate you on the occasion of your inauguration. There are, however, certain questions regarding the welfare of the student body I should like to ask.

First, is the university going to continue its policy of hypocrisy by allowing members of fraternities to drink freely in their houses while denying that privilege to students who live in the dorm, even when they are entitled to that right under Vermont law? Does the university believe that it can deny people their legal privileges? Certain events of last April seem to confirm that the administration is more interested in prosecuting those who illegally drink than those who deny the constitutional rights of other students.

Secondly, what is the reason for the policies governing the lives of female students? One might easily suspect that it is nothing more than a vestige of puritanism and the double standard in sexual matters. Does the university believe its function is to impose a moral outlook or to teach one?

The matter of off-campus housing has not been fully clarified, I think you owe it not only to the students, but the landlords and contractors in Burlington to state, without administrative double-talk, whether or not this temporary housing policy will be in effect one more year, two more, ten more or forever.

Sincerely,

Michael G. Minsky

lect and desire, because you do not seek the same things they do? Tu quoque. Is it not possible that they express their motivations, intellects and desires in individual ways toward different goals? Is it not possible that by not attending a function, that something is being expressed other than apathy?

There are many ways to obtain knowledge about a given subject which is pertinent to the person involved. Or is there only your way?

"Consciousness . . . is a stick we all keep to beat our neighbors with, but never apply to ourselves." ("Lost Illusions") "Only he who is wise knows what he does not know . . ." If this Institution is not good example of what an American education should be and you are here to get an education, why are you still here? Oh, yes. That is right. You do not know.

ART SHOW

"What do you mean, MUD? That's clay - and paint, and plaster, and sodder, and wood shavings -"

"Well, yeah, some of it washes off, but we're going to be rolling in it until the 14th anyway."

"Study?!! You mean the kind when you sit down and read a book?? Mmm, not before the 14th."

"Oh, matting color studies, glazing pots, touching up here and there, you know, all the little finishing-up things."

"The Fleming, silly, you know, the MUSEUM."

"First floor, balcony, - all over, I guess. There's an awful lot of stuff."

"Of course, paintings. But there's lots more than that."

"No, we're not to big on flower pieces this year. We got stuff from the whole Department - pottery, sculpture, drawings, silver jewelry, environments -"

"Yeah. Well, you'll know what it is when you see it. - what do you mean, is environment"

"Art?"

"If you really want to talk about it, come to the presentation Wednesday night."

"A panel of Art students, I guess. At 8:00. Look man, the Department didn't even have enough money to buy material, we had to scrounge our own plywood and stuff. A sherry hour - that's not even legal on this campus. It's a nice idea, though."

"It's the official reception for students - there'll be a panel, and anybody who wants to can talk, challenge, question ... see, the exhibit opens Saturday, but the official reception is Wednesday the 19th at 8:00."

"Probably if you dropped over before Wednesday night and wandered around and looked at the exhibits, walked through the exhibits, screamed at the exhibits - well, some of them are unusual - you'd have time to absorb the ideas before the reception and - well, you know ... just come to the Art Show. It's going to be very impressive."

tellecuals to be hung by the heel in a Maytag brainwasher until (spiritually) dead.

It is, however, the most dangerous of all, being part of an international plot to decimate America's leadership potential. Formulated by an obscure Russian scientist, Darwinovski, the theory of D-SNOB (Draft Students, Not Beer!) is summarized in the four words, "Survival of the Unfittest". The pervasive theory of D-SNOBism is already reported to have been infiltrated into Draft Boards throughout the nation!

Another Sub-org, attempting to destroy the basis of U.S. educational systems, is called Give Up Tests. GUT wants to eliminate marks, figuring that anyone is entitled to a degree that can afford four years of tuition. As a first step it wants to have the valedictorian elected, and (while marks are being phased out) an Honor's Day celebrating people on the Janitor's List (you must be in the lowest 10% of your class to make the Janitor's List).

There are at least 23 other new Sub-orgs on the UVM campus (one of which is giving Dutch Elm Disease to trees on the green) and I feel it is rather old-fashioned of students to worry about the old ones. I cannot advocate that the rest of you students flunk out of the CIA as I have done because I realize you may have a couple of years to go at UVM and will need the subsidies to Help Fight Tuition.

Well, don't let the D-SNOB get you!

"The Odd Couple" Ends Blue Series

By K. Klonsky

For the second straight, unfortunate time, Lane Series ended an otherwise successful and artistic year with an Neil Simon play. "The Odd Couple" is a limp and insipid comedy that moves along at the staggering pace of a run-of-the-mill television rerun. The fact that the audience enjoyed this awful bill-of-fare is no real proof of anything except its own slovenly, spoon-fed intelligence.

The play centers around Oscar Madison, a divorcee who is still emotionally attached to his wife, and Felix Ungar, a "man" whose wife has just ejected him from their apartment. Felix moves into good Oscar's eight room flat and begins to pester his life-long buddy to distraction. The trouble is that Felix has an anal fixation ("toilet trained at five") and simply abhors the grime and ashes that Oscar likes to leave around the apartment.

One exciting night, Oscar and Felix double with the Pigeon sisters, two comely ex-Britons, and this earth-shattering experience, besides ruining Oscar's evening, shows Felix that his wife, Frances, despite all of her drawbacks, is really the girl for him.

As the play ends, all four of these characters seem well on their way to reconciling their former marriages, something D. H. Lawrence might have described as the "drift toward decay." Chief symbol of the play is the poker game with Speed, Murray, Roy, Vinnie, Oscar and Felix ("the game must go on"), which is finally back on firm footing by the end of the last act.

Unlike last year's "Barefoot in the Park", which at least had the virtue of good performances, "The Odd Couple" was given a poor execution by most of this company. However, this fact at least gave one the opportunity of hearing the lines in all their innate mediocrity, showing that without Carney and Matthau, or other such pros, the play hasn't a leg to stand on.

Lyle Talbot, a washed up T.V. actor whom everyone can recognize but nobody knows from where, played Felix Ungar, the hen-pecked, emasculated American male. He looked and sounded something like an affected school teacher.

Harvey Stone was somewhat better as Oscar and was responsible for whatever life the play had. Art Vasil as Speed, Alan North as Murray, Edmund Williams as Roy, and Dutch Miller, a disgusting mass of fattyish, bulbous fat tissue, as Vinnie were all as bad as their roles would permit them to be. Peggy Winslow and Kathryn Blythe as the Pigeon sisters, were annoying to listen to.

The problem of trite but popular theatre is not a new one. George Bernard Shaw wrote in his preface to Mrs. Warren's Profession:

"I have no doubt I shall at last persuade even London to take its conscience and its brains when it goes to the theatre, instead of leaving them at home with its prayer book as it does at present."

If the theatre remains a television reproduction of the middle classes' dull and dried up existence with its lack of metaphor and its dearth of feeling, we have only ourselves to blame. "The Odd Couple" is a testament to lazy and crumbling intelligence.

effects were clever and smoothly executed. In summing up my impressions of the 1967 Spring Tour show, I am reminded of Princess Lemore's assertion that "what you like is part of you forever." I am sure that for the youngsters privileged to see the play, that the experience will be "part of them forever."

The CYNIC wishes to apologize to Lois Kenney for omitting her name from the cast list of MANY MOONS in the preview article of March 23.

ODE TO AN ALUMNUS

UVM's Alumni Office has sent a special gift copy of "Vermont Life" to all alumni. This seems to be part of the annual fund appeal which goes like this:

"Sure as the earth turns on its axis,

Even surer than death and taxes,

Each alum who's living,

Is now approached for annual giving."

KAKE WALK GETS NEW LIGHTING EQUIPMENT

Each year lighting plays an integral part of Kake Walk. To improve the quality of the lighting system the 1967 Kake Walk Committee has purchased four new followspots. These lights, which are of much finer quality than those previously used, are to be donated to the University for common use by various campus organizations. The only stipulation set is that they always be available at walkin' time.

Players Tour "Many Moon"

On March 23, 24, & 25, Burlington area elementary school children and their parents had the opportunity to view MANY MOONS, by James Thurber, before the nine-member student company took the show on the road through Vermont and Canada. Large and enthusiastic numbers turned out, and were spellbound and gay with laughter, as the King's Royal Wisemen blundered through assorted attempts to make the Princess well. The Court Jester turned out to be the wisest of all and satisfied her one desire — to get the moon.

From the opening scene, dominated by the bumbling antics of the Wisemen, to the final "winking" of the moon, the whole cast gave sustained character presentations. Lois Kenney was the lovely little princess. Her simplicity and childish desire were well portrayed and charming. Jill Bosworth and Diane Birt, as Cynicia and the Royal Nurse, were properly pompous and self-important, but still likable and concerned with the Princess' welfare. Diane was laughable in her overindulgent nursing of the patient.

Fred Finkelstein, was the overstuffed, nervous Lord High Chamberlain. His useless suggestions were accompanied by very funny and very loud nose-blowing and peering through huge spectacles. The Royal Wizard, played by Bill Levy, was delightful conjuring charms out of his pointed cap and gesturing expansively. The director of the tour, Ann Goyette, doubled in the role of the Royal Mathematician. She was indeed a wan and wise "o v l blinking at the sun," and enchanting in her calculating and checking with a plumed pen.

The King, a blind, doddering, self-doubting, and loving old coot came off very humorously. He stumbled through the play and kept the young audience laughing with his "bumping into things." In this reporter's opinion the best performance was given by Roy Zuckerman as the lovable little Jester. His facial expressions and exaggerated movements were captivating, and his sense of fun as the wise fool were obviously conveyed to the other characters and the spectators.

This exciting production was well rounded out with beautiful bright colored costumes and a light imaginative set, carried out in an arch motif. Technical

THE NEW BREED

A new frontier imposes a natural process of selection. You can meet the people that you would see on-top of a high ski run which had no chair lift, and you can do it without the effort of climbing. . . . just let gravity take its course: It's all downhill at the PARACHUTES' INCORPORATED CENTERS.

The Centers are staffed and equipped to put you out on your first jump immediately following a time-tested four hour period of instruction. ($35 for everything involved in making the jump.) Safety is insured through the use of automatically opening main parachutes, FAA approved ten-place jump aircraft (your entire class jumps together), radio communication to the student, all-land drop zones, and constant, overall supervision by professional instructors both in the aircraft and on the ground. (92,600 jumps to date, over 9,200 of which were first jump students)

NEW GOVERNING BOARD CHOSEN

On Wednesday, April 12, the S.A. okayed a list of candidates for the Billings Center Governing Board. They are Charles Brucaro, Paul Shambo, Stephen Kunken and Ina Mandell. Also elected were two new faculty members, Miss Margaret Whittlesey, home economics, and Mr. Rolf Haugen, political science. The director of Billings Center is Mr. David Bain.

Applications were available to all students and candidates were selected for nominations by this year's board. Traditionally a member of S.A. is appointed, usually the first or second vice-president.

Also on the board are two faculty members, one of which is replaced each semester. A faculty member may be reappointed and serve a maximum of four semesters. This allows for a constant changeover of faculty advisors. The Billings Center constitution states that the governing board chairman should be a senior.

The governing board sets up the policy for the operation of Billings Center.

This year the board has two new faculty members at once because former member Captain Rives is going to Vietnam and Miss Davison will be on sabbatical leave.

The outgoing members are, Capt. Rives, Miss Davison, and chairman Lou Deforge, a graduating senior. Other staff members are Gordon Josephson, Paul Shambo, Cheryl Eisert, and Jean Pearson, the S.A. representative.

The new board will elect officers within itself in the future.

NAVY INFO

The Aviation Officer Procurement Team from the Naval Air Station at South Weymouth, Mass. will be on campus on April 25 & 26, 1967 between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 3:00 P.M. to furnish information about the Navy's pilot and flight officer programs.

SENIOR CLASS ACTIVITIES

The Senior Class Banquet and Ball will be held at the Town and Country Motor Lodge in Stowe Vermont on May 18. It will be a buffet style dinner and is scheduled to start at 6:30 P.M.

A lot of work has gone into planning this main event of Senior Week and all seniors should not miss it. We will have big name entertainment (announced later) and dancing to two bands, so plan on being there.

Admission is FREE TO ALL SENIORS, but any guests of seniors will be charged $4.75 to cover the cost of dinner. The procedure for obtaining tickets is simple. The senior and guest tickets can be obtained the week of April 23rd from 3-5 p.m. in the lower lobby of Billings Center. All you do is show your ID card and you get a ticket. Guest tickets can also be purchased then.

The night of the Banquet you present your ticket and SHOW YOUR ID CARD to prove you're a senior and we will check you off on a master list. In this way, only seniors will be admitted free and guests will have to give a guest ticket. NO TICKETS will be distributed after 5 p.m. on Friday, April 28! So make your plans early and get your tickets that week.

Don't miss this senior function. It really promises to be great and something you won't forget. If you have any questions contact Ralph Hochberg at 2-4163.

PANHEL SPRING FORMAL

A variety of activities and numerous parties will mark the annual Panhellenic Spring Formal to be held April 14 and 15. The seven sororities will hold a formal dinner and dance either Friday or Saturday night, many of which are being held out of town this year. Alpha Delta Pi will be going to the Town and Country Motor Inn at Stowe; Alpha Epsilon Phi to the Sheraton; Alpha Chi Omega and Kappa Alpha Theta to the Alpine Inn at Sugarbush on alternate nights; Delta Delta Delta and Gamma Phi Beta to Marble Island; and Pi Beta Phi to the Bolton Valley Lodge. Other activities will include hayrides, open houses to be held at the sorority, and a joint party at Jacques's Barn sponsored by Tri-Delt, Kappa Alpha Theta and Pi Phi. Curfews will be extended this weekend to 1:00 a.m. on Friday night and to 1:30 a.m. on Saturday, and all the social functions will close one hour before these curfews to allow adequate travelling time.

IFC Spring Formals will be held the following two weekends, April 21-22 and April 28-29.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAM

Federal Government career opportunities throughout New England have expanded this year due to the defence buildup and increased staffing needs in new domestic programs. L.F. Cronin, Regional Director, U.S. Civil Service Commission, recently stated that there will be a shortage of qualified people from the Federal Service Entrance Examination to meet the increased employment needs.

Students graduating in May who are interested in Federal employment have but two more opportunities to apply for the examination.

Applications must be received by April 19th for the May 20th exam, and they must be received by May 17th for the exam on June 17th.

The Placement Director has a copy of the Boston Region Federal Directory which gives types of positions available.

NOTICE TO ALL MAY 1967 GRADUATES

Guest tickets for the Commencement Ceremony will be available in room 116, Waterman Building. May graduates (except College of Medicine) may pick up their tickets during the period April 24 - April 27 between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Each graduate will be limited to four tickets. Those desiring extra tickets (limit of two) may fill out a slip at the time allotted tickets are picked up. A drawing for the limited numbers of extra tickets will be held on Monday, May 1. The names of those individuals selected to receive extra tickets will be posted on the Registrar's bulletin board on the lower floor of Waterman on Friday, May 5. Those selected to receive extra tickets may pick them up at 116 Waterman during regular office hours on Friday, May 5.

May graduates of the College of Medicine may pick up their tickets at the office of Student Affairs of the College of Medicine.

No ticket will be required for the Baccalaureate Service on Sunday morning, May 21.

S.A. NEEDS QUORUM

At the last Student Association meeting, held March 22, roll was called and it was found that absentees included representatives from nine dormitories, twelve fraternities and sororities, and the Town Girls.

Since a quorum was lacking, installation of new officers was postponed. Other business was conducted in a committee of the whole.

Jack Lundley reported on the recent S.A. elections saying, "a good deal of people participated in the elections." It seems, however, that the 100 votes counted constituted a mere 25% of the student body.

Since there was not a quorum at the last S.A. meeting the installation of new officers and most of the business was held over until the next meeting. The Pres. read an excerpt from a letter on the housing policy and Bob Williams gave a report in which he mentioned that Senator Brooke might speak here in the fall. The meeting was adjourned until April 12, at which time a larger attendance would be appreciated.

SIN OR MEDICAL NECESSITY

A candid debate on abortion, between Father Branon of the Newman Center and Dr. C.I. Muhr of the UVM Medical School will be presented at the Marsh Lounge, 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, April 19. All are invited; admission is free.

DR. COHEN TO SPEAK

Dr. I Bernard Cohen, professor of the history of science at Harvard University, will open the new Zeltzman Lecture Series Wednesday (April 19) on the topic "The Creative Scientific Personality."

A specialist in the history of scientific ideas and the growth of physical thought, Dr. Cohen is also associated with the seminar in science and public policy at Harvard which studies the rise and influence of science as a major force in national and international affairs.

He has been an invited lecturer at the University of London, Oxford, and the Sorbonne. He prepared one of the pioneering courses at Harvard to teach science to non-scientists. He is currently Vice President of the Union Internationale d'Histoire et de Philosophie des Sciences.

The Michael Zeltzman Visiting Lecturers are sponsored by a fund established by Dr. and Mrs. Morris Zeltzman of Berlin, N.H., in memory of their deceased son, who was a graduate student at Vermont and an alumnus, and who was killed in an auto accident in 1966.

NEW OFFICERS AND PLANS FOR OUTING CLUB

Elections of the new Outing Club officers for the on coming school year were held last Thursday. They are Christine Rosenkrantz, '68, president; Rick Steadman, '70, vice president; Sharon Goodell, '70, secretary; Ian Crawford, '70, treasurer.

However, this semester isn't over yet. Several trips are being planned for the up-coming weekends. This weekend there will be a trip to Tuckerman's Ravine in Mt. Washington. Bring your skis or come along just for the hike. Next weekend there will be rock climbing and the following weekend canoeing. Anyone is welcome. For further information come to the Thursday night Outing Club meetings at Southwick. See you then!

FREEDOM FUND DINNER

Julien Bond, Georgia State poet and writer, will be the featured speaker at the fifth annual Freedom Fund Dinner sponsored by the Burlington NAACP.

The dinner will be held in Alliot Hall at St. Michael's College on Saturday, April 29th, at seven p.m. Admission is $3.50.

Mr. Bond was twice denied his elective seat in the Georgia Legislature because of his views on the Vietnam war, but was seated after his third consecutive victory in Nov. 1966 by a decision of the United Supreme Court.

Sandy and Caroline Paton, Vermont's leading folk music interpreters, will be guest artists at the dinner. The Patons, who recently appeared in the Lane Chamber Art Series here at UVM, are co-founders of Folk Legacy Records.

For information and reservations phone Mrs. Grant Kennedy, 878-2786; or Mrs. Donald B. Sargent, 878-5921.

Hear the latest in UVM campus news on WRUV every Tuesday and Thursday at 4 and 9 p.m.

"Mini" Sets The Trend In Spring Fashions

By Kathy Watt

The big word in fashion trends this spring is mini. For the past season or so, it has been setting a new pace in style for dresses and skirts. Now, completely self-assured, it is making its appearance in every possible accessory form.

"Small Scale" seems to be the basic idea as accessories are jauntily appearing on the scene in fun new sizes. Take the newest handbags — they're even mini-sized. Whether it's a new rounded one with a multitude of pockets for extra space, or a short, swingy shoulder bag, make sure it's been reduced to the new '67 tiny size.

With prevalent short and mini skirts putting legs in the "maxi" eye, stockings have joined the mini act, too. They have taken on a totally new look and are sparkling and glittering in gold, silver, bronze, pastel, white, and neon-bright shades. Besides having gone way out for color, stockings have also taken to new patterns and textures. One designer recently advocated three dimensional effects, such as stockings decorated with tassels and mirrors.

Combine these lively new stockings with kicky new mini shoes that boast the squared-off toes and low, chunky heels. Many open heel sandals and sling back straps are appearing in a revived Mary-Jane style.

The brightest mini fashions have taken on a shiny new air. Patent leather is glistening on bags, shoes, hats, and belts. Lucite, the latest shiny material, is also being used for many of this season's accessories including shoes and jewelry.

In jewelry, earrings have gone big, mad, and colorful. Paper-mache ones, large and bold, are particularly intriguing.

Color, this season, has really let itself go. Absolutely nothing is considered taboo in this color-fling spring. The more you mix them, the farther ahead you are. Wild prints and florals are leading this bright way.

There it is — the mini season. It's exciting, young, uninhibited, and it's yours. Listen to its message: it's a little far out, and it's a little bold, but it's a lot of fun!

WSGA

By Chris Rosencrantz

The new WSGA has authorized new dress standards, which were recommended by the retiring council and approved by the Dean of Women. "Informal" dress (neat slacks, etc.), may be worn at Friday evening meals commencing April 7.

The WSGA tea for prospective House Presidents was held on Tuesday, April 11 at 6:30 P.M. at Southwick ballroom. Girls who will be Juniors or Seniors and are interested in being a House President next year as well as present House Presidents, were invited to attend.

WSGA council voted to extend women's curfews one half hour on the weekend of sorority spring formals. Curfews will be 1:00 A.M. on Friday, April 14, and 1:30 A.M. on Saturday, April 15.

On Tuesday, March 21, the new WSGA officers were installed. Theo Russell welcomed all in attendance and expressed her hope that new council would have a very successful year. Rae Newcomb, Chairman of Judiciary installed all the new officers and welcomed it's new President Deborah Arnold.

Debbie a junior at UVM, is a Physical Education major in the College of Education and Nursing. She is from Rutland, Vt.

Judith Anderson, the new chairman of Judiciary, is also a junior enrolled in the College of Education and Nursing. She is from Barre, Vt. and is a member of Alpha Chi Omega.

Other officers installed were: Fran Robinson - House Chairman,

Sue Norton - Secretary, Jenny Berger - Treasurer, Lee Jacobs - Scholarship Chairman, Amy Loololan - Social Chairman, Nancy Draper - Fire Marshall, Chris Rosencrantz - Public Relations, Patty Capron - Assistant House Chairman.

Members elected to Judiciary include the following:

Marty Stevens - Secretary, Joan Clark and Peggy MacQueen - Senior Representatives to Judiciary.

Nancy Page and Martha Whitaker - Junior Representatives to Judiciary.

Judy Bruce and Sally Stannard - Sophomore Representatives to Judiciary.

Dean Wing, Dean Gribbons, and Miss Dean were presented with cloth corsages as a token of appreciation.

ROTC BALL

The 99th Annual Military Ball of the UVM ROTC Cadet Brigade, held on March 17 at the Hotel Vermont, was highlighted by the crowning of Queen Judy Bamman, a sophomore from Westport, Conn., escorted during the crowning by Brigade Commander, Douglas Orvis. Judy was crowned by last year's Queen, Barbara Bigelow from Madison, N.J. She will serve as Honorary Brigade Commander with the rank of Honorary Colonel for the next year. Four other coeds were chosen Honorary Captains and Honorary Company Commanders. They were freshman Barbara Schmitt from Rockville Center, N.Y., escorted by Peter E. Rising, A Company Commander; sophomore Joyce Westcott from Boston, Mass., escorted by John N. Rutledge, B Company Commander; junior Betty Purda from Brattleboro, escorted by Michael L. Tenzer, C Company Commander; and sophomore Nancy Bathgate from Springfield, escorted by David A. Peura, D Company Commander.

Co-hosting the Ball were the Ethan Allen Rifles, Senior Honorary Military Society and the Pershing Rifles, National Military Fraternity. Members of the Reception Line preceding the Ball were President and Mrs. Lyman Rowell, Colonel and Mrs. D.R. Longacre, Cadet Colonel and Mrs. Douglas Orvis, Miss Karen Peterson and Cadet Major Norman Boyden.

Girls Sports

By Terrie Wurzbacher

Spring has arrived at Southwick gym bringing with it the softball season. The Intradorm Tournament began this week and will continue on Mondays until the end of school, weather permitting.

Two teams have completed their competitive season for this year. The Pussycat Swimming Team finished by bringing home the honors in the New England Intercollegiate Invitational Swimming Meet. UVM placed second in the competition of eight schools. Oneonta college of New York took the first place trophy, with Bradford College finishing third.

The Cagegirls, the girls' basketball team, ended with a 4-2 record winning its last four straight games. After a weak start, the team began to gain strength and practiced more the result being complete victory over Castleton, Johnson, Plattsburgh and Middlebury. To show how complete the team's recovery was — the only games they lost were to Castleton and Plattsburgh, and they were both defeated in second matches.

Girls in the basketball officiating class took the written examination and having passed it were enabled to take the practical examination at Middlebury. Three girls took the test: Polly Hickson and Ebon Whitehead received their Intramural rating, and Pam Ainsworth achieved the rating of an Associate Official.

Wednesday and Thursday the Catalina Swim Club under the direction of Miss Terry Brustar presented "Think Vermont." The Catalina Club is a synchronized swimming group. They perform what is sometimes known as a water ballet. The program was presented in the Forbush pool at the Patrick Gymnasium.

Netmen Open At St. Lawrence

By Jeff Aronson

The tennis team winds up their practice season this week in preparation for what will probably be their most important match against St. Lawrence, on April 17. The match will be at 4:00 at St. Lawrence.

Coach Cheng returned this past week, and looks forward to a good season. With everyone practicing, Cheng has had time to observe different styles of play, in order to help the team prepare for the big match. He tries to match the styles of team members to those they will meet at St. Lawrence. These styles range from the long, smooth ground strokes of Dick Sachs to the very aggressive control of Paul Ryan. Laddie Cook and Bruce Hanna also move to the net quickly in order to best use their height.

This past week also saw two new faces on the courts: Bob Fairbanks of Bethesda, Md., and Steve Rosenberg, of New Bedford, Mass. Bob just started practicing recently, while Steve has been practicing for about two weeks. Both are freshmen who can hopefully help form the nucleus for next year's team.

It's been a long, hard month for the team, and these next few days of final practice will be nerve-racking. The Cat's first home match is against New Hampshire, on Thursday, April 20. Arch-foe, Middlebury, who dealt the Cats their only defeat last year, return here on April 27. They'll be taking them one-by-one, and that big first one is Monday, April 17 — the season is finally starting!

"BOSTON IS DEAD"

The CYNIC sports editorial department would again like to extend its warmest congratulations to the Philadelphia 76ers for the job they did on the Boston Celtics in the NBA Eastern Division final playoffs. When it got down to the nitty-gritty, the Celts were simply no match for the combination of Alex Hannum's crafty coaching and the sensational seven of Wilt, Hal, Chet, Wally, Lucius, Billy and Matty. Philly should finish off the Warriors in five also.

As a final note on the Celtic - 76er series, mention should be made of the dignity with which the Celtics accepted their first playoff series defeat in a decade — and the resulting end of their dynasty. We only wish the same could be said of their play-by-play announcer, Johnny Most. Most only succeeded in stirring up the Boston fans against the 76ers with his constant, uncalled for complaints about the maneuvers of the Philadelphia players and coach. Most does enough complaining when the Celtics are winning, but when they lose he is just too much to take (especially from a Philadelphia point of view.)

POSITIONS NOW OPEN

Applications are currently being accepted for positions on the CYNIC sports staff next fall. Writers will be needed to cover the following areas:

Football (reporter)
Football (feature)
Soccer
Golf

Fall Baseball
Cross Country
Intramurals
National Sports Coverage
Fall Tennis
Girls Sports
Miscellaneous

Besides sports writers, the sports staff is seeking any statisticians, typists, and people interested in the production of the sports section. All interested applicants should leave their name and where they can be reached either in the CYNIC office or with Bob Bloomenthal as soon as possible.

FLICKS

FLYNN - "A Man For All Seasons" is one of the leading films of 1966-67. Based on a historical play by Robert Bolt and directed by Fred Zinneman, this movie is notable for outstanding acting performances from its lead players: Paul Scofield as Sir Thomas More, Robert Shaw as Henry VIII and Wendy Hiller as the mother of Thomas More lead a powerful supporting cast.

The plot is the now familiar stand of Sir Thomas More against consenting to the divorce of Henry VIII and the subsequent marriage to Anne Bolyn. The great Catholic chancellor of England, risks the well-being of himself and his family, and the displeasure of his king because he feels that it is only oneself that one must answer to.

There is really so much to see in this film that it is impossible to limit it to mere plot and theme. The beautiful authentic settings and costumes, and the magnificent acting of its cast enhance the original scope of the play. Shaw's novel and zesty Henry VIII is worth the price of admission alone. "A Man For All Seasons" is motion picture production at its finest.

S.A. - Paul Newman, Melvyn Douglas and Patricia Neal in "Hud." An astounding and gripping motion picture about youth, age, and callousness. Academy awards to Neal and Douglas and a nomination for Newman. One of the best American films ever made.

STRONG - Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf." - Good acting plus Albee's storming dialogue make this a memorable film.

Vermont Debuts At UConn

THE INSIDER

By Steve Kunken

What It's All About for the UVM baseball team finally begins this weekend with Friday and Saturday afternoon games at the University of Connecticut. Although both UConn and UMass are picked by Collegiate Baseball newspaper as the teams to beat in this year's Conference race based on their showing last year, the Nerveless Nine are prepared to go the route: Finishing the southern tour with a team batting average of only .199, nevertheless the Catamounts have a balanced squad and morale is at its peak. Guts and desire are going to be our big weapons, and they've won many ballgames in the past.

Burlington showed its true colors weather-wise this past week and allowed us only one day of outdoor practice before sending us back to the Cage. However, it was an eventful week. Joe Soldano, fresh from a week of interviews in New York, showed Coach Lapointe that he still wants it by jumping in to catch batting practice in our one outdoor session. The coach was very impressed but had to halt play and make Joe put on his chest protector. Bill Leete took it on the nose again and is seriously considering bringing the hockey goalie's mask to baseball.

Len Sheflott, who will be starting on the mound in Friday's opener, appears to have completely recovered from his bout with the elevator during last week's stay in New York. It seems that Len was all set to pitch against Fairleigh Dickinson that Sunday when he realized that he left his stomach on the seventeenth floor of the Paris Hotel during the elevator ride down. The coach took pity and gave him the day off. Bill Dorozenski was unanimously declared bat-breaking champ of the indoor season and may be used as our psych-out weapon against UConn. The surprise of the southern trip, however, was the return of manager Joe Eckl. Joe, working the controls from his New York office, rejoined the team Saturday and made it appear as if he had never missed. He hadn't.

The assorted sore arms and injuries of last week are slowly healing. Both Bruce Bovenizer and Terry O'Leary are feeling good, and The Red One has been impressing the coach with his scoops at first base. John Packard still has to take it easy on his arm but hopefully will be ready for this weekend. This author has successfully fought off a stomach virus that would have killed an ordinary man. Unfortunately, rumor has it that Messrs. Lombard, Leete, Lucaroni, and Lapointe (two of them) could not decide who my controversial Mr. L. was of the week before. Damned if I'll let them know. It would be like a game of Russian Roulette with baseballs.

Although fourteen successful seasons are behind him, this is a big year for Coach Lapointe. The team is strong in pitching and defense, and the key will be the base hits at the right time. UConn has its two top pitchers back in Tom Lawton and Ed Baird, and they have a good hitting club behind them. With UMass at home in two weeks, Vermont is pointing toward the Huskies for two big wins. They won't come easy, but, then again, does anything?

COACH RALPH LAPOINTE and Captain Rick Aldrich look forward to a highly successful baseball season this year.

Huskies Have Strong Hitting Squad

By Hugh Brown

The University of Vermont baseball team opens its regular season this Friday and Saturday against Yankee Conference power Connecticut. These two contests shape up to be one of the more important series of the season. Not underestimating Massachusetts or Maine, this writer feels strongly that UConn is the team to beat in 1967.

The Huskies have won the right to represent the Yankee Conference in the N.C.A.A. District Playoffs for the last two years. This year they appear stronger than ever. Led by George Greer—who led the Y.C. in batting last year with a .403 percentage—Connecticut has a definite edge over Vermont in the hitting department. During the Huskies' Southern Tour, four regulars batted over .400 and a fifth notched .381. The Connecticut team, overall, batted .283 (as opposed to the Catamounts' .199).

Vermont holds a slight edge in the pitching department, finishing third in the nation last year in team earned run average and having some good looking sophomores on this season's team. However, UConn has an excellent staff and will be throwing their best at the Cats.

Concerning Connecticut's spring tour, the Huskies played eight games and won seven of them. Among UConn's victims was Rollins, one of the stronger clubs in the deep South.

LEN SHEFLOTT will be the starting pitcher at Connecticut.

Coach Ralph Lapointe will definitely start Len Sheflott in one of the two games this weekend. With John Packard's arm trouble and poor spring showing, the other pitching spot is uncertain. Bruce Bovenizer may get the nod.

When Sheflott is pitching, Packard will cover first base and Steve Kunken will play second. Dave Lapointe will start at shortstop. The remaining infield position, third base, is up for grabs between Bob Neild and Bruce Lombard.

The outfield will be composed of Don Fitts in left, Bill Leete in center, and probably Terry O'-

Leary in right. Captain Rick Aldrich will be behind the plate.

Coach Lapointe stresses the importance of improved hitting on the part of his Catamounts. If a little punch is added to the Vermont bats, and the pitching staff sharpens up and realizes its potential, UVM could come home this Sunday with two victories and a tremendous start towards the Yankee Conference Championship.

Vermont will meet Norwich at Northfield on Wednesday, April 19th and will play their home opener next Friday, April 21st, against Massachusetts. . . . The Catamounts have not been able to practice outside, due to wet grounds, since returning from their spring tour. . . . UConn's opener against Boston University was postponed because of rain. . . . Ralph Lapointe starts his fourteenth season against Connecticut, and is going for his fourteenth consecutive winning campaign since he has been at the Cat's helm.

INTRAMURAL SCOREBOARD

By Jack Berry

As final exams draw near the final decisive contests are being held to determine the campus intramural champion. After several weeks of play, the field in the squash tournament has been narrowed down to four men. In the semifinals Boardman of Delta Psi will meet Burgess of Delta Psi, while Dorsey of Sigma Alpha Epsilon plays Maddocks, a medical student.

Wrestling is on the card next weekend. Weigh-in will be held April 17 at 4:15 and April 18 at 4:00 P.M. Preliminary matches will take place April 18 and 19 at 4:30 with the finals to be held April 20-21 at 7:00. Only those who have had physical examinations will be allowed to compete.

Delta Psi has gradually increased its lead the past several weeks and now only Sigma Alpha Epsilon has any chance of wresting the campus championship from them. Their fine showing in the squash tournament and past performances in the wrestling tournament will make them hard to beat. The standings as of this week are as follows:

- 1) DP - 756
- 2) SAE 701
- 3) SIG EP 553
- 4) PHI DELT - 488
- 5) PHI SIG 478

Spring Soccer

Spring Booters Eye Fall Title

By Ted Ryan

A championship team with a championship coach never rests and the University of Vermont's Yankee Conference title holding soccer Catamounts have been drilling since March 1.

Coach Hal Greig has been conducting indoor practice one night a week since March 1. Greig plans to take his squad outside on April 17, if weather conditions permit.

Nearly 70 boys have expressed interest in playing varsity soccer next fall and many will get their first taste of intramural competition during the outdoor scrimmages. The spring session will be concluded with a Green versus Gold intrasquad tilt at 1:30 p.m. April 30.

The winter and spring practices are conducted under very informal conditions. Anyone interested in playing varsity soccer is invited to the practice sessions. Much of the practice time is used on fundamentals. Greig also has his boys play plenty of 5-on-5 and 6-on-6 soccer. Occasionally, full field scrimmages are conducted.

"The purpose of winter and spring soccer is dual," Greig said. "First, it provides me with an opportunity to see some of the freshmen and sophomore candidates under game conditions."

"Secondly, these sessions afford an opportunity to play soccer with the ball during the off season."

Apparently, the previous winter and spring sessions have been extremely valuable to the team. Greig has coached Vermont to two titles in the only two years the Cats have been in the Yankee Conference. Some of the talent which has been responsible for this record has been discovered during spring practice.

Vermont's sensational rookie goalies of last fall, John Hilton, gained his first taste of varsity competition during last spring's practice. Jimmy Wood, an outstanding reserve and starter, was another find on the soggy spring fields.

The spring and winter sessions are for those aspirants who want to devote the time to development of their skills and talent. Any player who is bothered by academic difficulties or who is participating in a spring sport is not required to attend the practices.

Greig said he may be forced to create several teams next fall, possibly varsity and junior varsity units. It is an enviable position for a coach, but Greig extended an invitation to anyone who wishes to play to attend spring practices.

Among the freshmen and sophomores who impressed Greig during the winter league were Bob Greene, Bob Pekala, John Lavigne, Bob Huebner, Brian Rivers, Chris Harris, Tony Beardsley, and Gene Yarnchak, all potential heroes of future champion Vermont teams.

Greig concluded that he is anticipating a trip to Montreal with a group of the players to watch the international matches at Expo '67.

UConn 15TH IN NATION

According to the most recent poll conducted by COLLEGIATE BASEBALL, a national newspaper, the University of Connecticut is rated as the fifteenth best team in the nation. The Huskies achieved their ranking mainly on the strength of the 7-1 record compiled on their southern trip.

Honors Day Accolades Deserving Students

Honors Day concluded the three-day celebration of UVM's 175th Anniversary Year on Monday morning in Patrick Gymnasium. Many friends and relatives of students assembled for the presentation of awards and address by John S. Millis, President of Western Reserve University and former president of the University of Vermont.

Mr. Millis spoke of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" as vital concepts in education, goals which the University of Vermont can help students to achieve. He regretted the fact that Honors Day is often a "consolation" for those students to whom happiness is a search for excellence.

The recognition of students for highest scholastic achievement in each class of each college was followed by the inauguration of the Chief Justice of Student Court, and the Student Association president. The oaths of office were administered to Robert L.

Robinson, III, and James A. Fontanella by outgoing Chief Justice Carl H. Lisman.

The special awards and prizes were announced and presented to the following students: Alpha Lambda Delta Award, Jane R. Taylor, Senior Certificate, Eloise A. Roberts; Alpha Zeta Proficiency Award, Edward L. Barnard; Warren R. and Mildred L. Austin Award, Douglas G. Orvis; Goldberg Award, Davis Wixson; Elwin L. Ingalls Award, Betty R. Travers; Interfraternity Scholarship Cup, Alpha Epsilon Pi; Interfraternity Scholarship Trophy, Alpha Tau Omega; Kidder Medal, Hugh C. Maddocks; Mortar Board Scholarship Cup, Mason Hall, 3rd Floor; Mortar Board Scholarship Trophy,

Pres. Rowell Inaugurated New Emphasis To Be Applied To Social Sciences at UVM

The University of Vermont, with its booming scientific program, plans equal emphasis now on the social sciences.

This was the promise Sunday afternoon of Lyman S. Rowell as he was installed as 19th president of the University, in ceremonies in Patrick Gymnasium.

"We see the shaping of a well established ferment in the social sciences destined to grow rapidly in the years ahead," he said. "We must immediately lay the groundwork for leadership in this area or be caught unprepared and defenseless in the revolution of the social sciences that will be upon us."

President Rowell spoke after he had received the large medallion symbolic of the office.

Representatives of 150 colleges and associations, from 46 states and Canada, were among those taking part in the colorful ceremony. The event marked the mid-point in the three-day celebration of the University's 175th anniversary.

President Rowell spent but little time in looking back over the years of University growth. Instead he offered his ideas on this theme: "The education of the youth of Vermont is something we must plan for, fight for and pay for."

In calling for renewed emphasis on the social sciences, President Rowell detailed his thinking: "In the physical and life sciences we already know more than we have been able to put to use, but in the social sciences and humanities we do not know enough about the processes whereby people may live together, work together and share the benefits of their enterprise. Our most pressing challenge is to educate people to live in the twenty-first century as well as to suitably prepare the twenty-first century in which they will live."

"In an era which will provide more leisure time than any other period of the world history we must provide for our graduates an opportunity to acquire the capabilities necessary to fully enjoy this greater liberation of the individual."

VERMONT STATE COLLEGES

President Rowell offered continued cooperation to the Vermont State Colleges. "If they did not exist there would have to be a crash program to create them, in order to meet present demands for higher education. The only question for continued exploration is how the potential of the University and the capacities of the State Colleges can best be combined to provide the most effective system of public higher education."

The University will continue to change and grow, President Rowell predicted, with the pressure of applications of qualified students and the expanding body of knowledge. "Diversity and growth in all subject matter fields forces an increase on any institution which desires to present an adequate spectrum of choice for its students. The institution must be prepared to grow to support the diversity of curricula with a student enrollment adequate to support intellectual interaction."

STATE DAY CONVOCATION

Dr. O. Meredith Wilson, president of the University of Minnesota, spoke of the State Day Convocation at the University of Vermont as "academic liturgy capable of significance or doomed to sterility by our own decision."

He led speakers who included two former Vermont presidents: Dr. John T. Fey, and Dr. Carl W. Borgmann.

One way in which the quality of the University of Vermont will be measured, he said, is by the freedom with which "the person who graduates can move and be accepted within our national intellectual and professional communities...this greater obligation to see the university from a parent's vantage point, to judge its quality, and to judge whether it will liberate the child so that as he becomes a man he can move anywhere, is too often ... overlooked because we instinctively judge the university first as taxpayers."

Dr. Wilson called the great numbers of students demanding entrance to universities "an endorsement of education." He characterized them as more deeply committed than their parents, with a temper more intense and an impatience to "turn the tables, and...teach while we learn."

Dr. John T. Fey, presently president of the National Life Insurance Company, said that "By necessity, universities are only part of what they say they are. To some extent, universities are never what they seem to be. And, unfortunately, universities are only part of what they should be. But of greatest importance, what universities really are is an indispensable element in man's quest for knowledge and the development of our culture and economy."

He described education as "an experience and not a status - a view and not a place - a quality and not a commodity. It can be described, but is difficult to identify - it cannot be prescribed nor administered - in fact, it perpetually is changing and yet changeless."

UVM'S STATUS

Dr. Carl W. Borgmann, a Ford Foundation advisor for Science and Technology, commented on UVM's status as a state school "There was the subtle but persistent feeling among some alumni and faculty, that a public institution was second rate by definition. This was primarily a phenomenon of the northeastern United States. I am happy to learn it is losing favor in the face of the growth of the state universities of this region," for "public education can and must be synonymous with good education."

"Once you start down the primrose path of academic administration there is no return."

IFC Spring Formals Are This Week

With hope for better weather than the rain that marked the PanHel Spring Formals last weekend, the IFC Formals will be held this coming weekend, April 21-22, and the following weekend, April 28-29. Fraternities having theirs this weekend will be Alpha Gamma Rho, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Delta Psi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, and Tau Epsilon Phi. AGR will have a dinner-dance at Bolton Valley Saturday night; AEPi will hold a hayride Friday night and a party at the house Saturday; Delta Psi will have a buffet and party at the house Friday and a joint party with Sigma Nu Saturday; SAE will be at Bolton Friday night and will have a joint party with TEP Saturday; Sigma Nu will be at Marble Island Friday, while TEP will be at the Alpen Inn at Sugarbush.

The weekend of April 28-29 will have the majority of houses holding formals: Acacia, Alpha Tau Omega, Theta Chi, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Iota, Sigma Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Mu Delta, and Phi Sigma Delta. Acacia will have theirs both nights at the house, as will Kappa Sig, Phi Sig, and Phi Mu; ATQ will hold a party at the Burlington Boys' Club Saturday; Sigma Phi and Theta Chi will hold a joint party Friday night, while Sig Ep will go to Marble Island and Lambda Iota to the Lincoln Inn; Phi Delt will hold theirs at the Alpen Inn at Sugarbush Saturday night.

Weather permitting Saturday, beach parties, hayrides, and parties at the Gorge are tentatively planned by the individual houses. Curfews for these two weekends have not yet been announced, but will be posted in the residence halls later this week.

Karen Haugen, a senior English major, has been honored with a Fulbright scholarship and will spend next year studying at the University of Oslo in Norway. The purpose of the Fulbright-Hays Act is to "increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries through educational and cultural exchange."

Karen spent the second semester of her sophomore year at the University of Oslo studying the Norwegian language and literature as an unarticulated student. She lived with a family in Oslo under the Experiment in International Living.

At this time she developed an interest in the Norwegian folklore, which she will study further next year. Because of television and radio, much of the Norwegian folk culture has disappeared. The people no longer view the troll world with religious fear as their ancestors did. The only way the legends reach the present generations is in school books, or in tales written by authors such as Asbjornsen and Moe whose folk tales remain popular.

Karen proposes "to study the works of Asbjornsen and Moe, to search for sources of the various tales and to trace the development of the motifs in Norwegian literature today." She has many friends and relatives in various parts of Norway and some of the older people still "recall at length, their troll encounters and their observations of troll habits. It is my plan to capture as many of these recollections as possible, while I can still reach these fast diminishing living sources." This study will provide a rich background and will become an integral part of her plans for graduate study.

Karen, a Dean's List student, is now a floor president, and a member of the Outing Club, and the Lane Series Committee. She has been a member of the Freshman Orientation Committee for two years.

Karen leaves for Norway on August 9. She will have a twelve day orientation period at the University and from then on will study independently. The scholarship will pay all tuition and living costs, and will provide an allowance. She will remain at the University for one academic year.

CLASS DAY MAY 21

The traditional Class Walk and Class Day portions of Senior Week will take place this year on May 21. The activities of this day give the Seniors a chance to review their progress and activities since September of 1963.

An innovation this year will have the class gather at the President's garden to don caps and gowns, have an informal cup of coffee and hear President Rowell give his words of advice before the actual walk begins. The class will then walk to Ira Allen Statue for the first oration, then to Lafayette Statue and finally to the steps of Bitlings where six faculty members will give the traditional "advice to seniors."

The Class Day program will begin at 2:00 in the afternoon outdoors, weather permitting. The program will include the Class History, the Class Poem and the pipe lighting ceremony.

Floor Counselors Appointed

The following students have been appointed as floor counselors in the men's residence halls for the academic year 1967-68.

David G. Smith, Assistant to the Dean of Men said that he has "every confidence in these individuals, and feels certain that they can make a significant contribution to the development of those students with whom they come in contact."

Correctors Chosen

The English Department has hired two correctors to mark freshman papers. The correctors are two women who live in Burlington, and whose work thus far has been regarded as quite competent by members of the English department.

Each member of the English department has either three freshman English classes and one sophomore class or two freshman classes and one sophomore class. He has between 100 and 110 students and requires that each one submit 4,000 words. This means that in 14 weeks he has to read and correct papers containing a total of 400,000 words, the equivalent on one copy of "War and Peace."

By handing in one theme or exam from each student (no term papers), the teachers' load is lessened quite a bit. The corrector makes the entire paper referring to explicit guidelines outlined by the individual instructor. The instructor has the option of revising anything, including the mark, but to date no one has done so.

Dr. Orth, who directs the program at UVM said that he and his colleagues find the correctors generally do a more conscientious job on grading papers than the average instructors. They are very pleased with the program.

The only legitimate objection students might have to this policy, believes Dr. Orth, is that the grade received from a corrector might differ from the grade anticipated from the student's own instructor. However, only one writing sample out of a total of approximately seven is submitted for outside correction and the difference in the final grade is not affected.

Though this policy is relatively new at UVM Dr. Orth points out that it is an old practice at many other institutions. At the University of Minnesota, for example, all written work of freshman and sophomores is marked by outside correctors.

PRESIDENT ROWELL presents Mr. VanBenthuyzen with an award from Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

Ex-CYNIC Advisor Honored

Lawrence E. VanBenthuyzen, director of Public Relations at the University, has been awarded the Gold Key of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for his work as advisor to the CYNIC 1964-66.

The Association at Columbia University selects a small group of advisors to student publications each year. The award is presented to those "whose length of service and accomplishments entitle them to such consideration," according to Association Director Joseph Murphy.

Mr. VanBenthuyzen was named to his present post in July, 1955, after two years as Assistant in Public Relations. He was earlier a reporter and wire editor with the "Burlington Daily News."

He has been active in the American College Public Relations Association and was a founder of the Vermont Educational Public Relations Association. He has also been active in community organizations, and has published some poetry and a short story.

Student Speak Out

On The Draft

By Larry Sargent

Students were asked to voice their opinions on the proposed lottery draft method whereby all eligible men regardless of student standing would be liable to be drafted by a national lottery comparable to the one introduced in the Second World War. Here are some of their opinions:

PATRICK ARKINSON, sophomore; I don't like the thought of being at the mercy of a "pick a number out of the hat system" to decide if I am going into the Army or not. The United States should adhere to the same law or abolish it completely instead of creating a Shirley Jackson lottery where the winner gets killed.

ED ROBICHAUD, pacifist; Accepting the assumption that our nation needs a standing army and that the best way to staff it is through universal military conscription, a lottery presents the fairest method of drafting. A lottery would eliminate the "de facto" and "de jure" discrimination as to race, religion, and affluence that is now provided by deferments. A more efficient and economic alternative to conscription would be a volunteer staffed and highly paid professional army. I regard the draft as governmental slavery violating the 5th and 13th Amendments.

MINIGRIPEs

1) It requires a contortionist to talk on Paterson 1st's phone. It has a cord which has a maximum length of 12 inches when stretched, barely reaching the opening of the phone booth.

2) Rumor has it that Waterman main doors were built to train men for tugs of war. Woe to the young coed who has to catch one as it swings back.

3) It was suggested that a coat of paint on Allen House, Chittenden, Wills, and Buckham would make them look more like dorms and less like stables.

4) When the art courses are filled one day after registration begins, and art majors can't get into any art courses, it is inconceivable that the administration does not expand the art department.

The draft serves only to supply manpower for the criminal acts of murder and torture committed by the military machine.

JOAN LINDSAY, sophomore; I oppose the draft lottery because there is something fundamentally wrong with leaving the fate of men to chance. I feel that there should be a controlling force involved other than luck. Perhaps the Draft Board is not the right solution, but at least it's a degree better than the proposed lottery.

DOUG COOLIDGE, ROTC member; The present draft system is aimed at those who would, by choice or necessity, rather work than go to college. To these people the present draft law is, in effect, a lottery system since it is their names that come up for draft rather than students! The lottery would end this discrimination by equalizing the odds for everyone.

Drinking Policy Passed

Carl Lisman reported the results of two years of committee study on the University's drinking policy at the last meeting. The present policy proposal, the second, was tentatively passed by Dean Patzer, Dean Gribbons, and Mr. Bain on March 27th.

This recommended policy allows drinking in resident-halls and social functions, but not in academic buildings. However, only those persons 21 years of age or over can drink (in accordance with Vt. state law). As the proposal now stands every student would have the responsibility of reporting all fellow students not 21 years of age found drinking alcoholic beverages.

Bailey Library will be open from 12 Noon to 11 p.m. on Sundays starting on April 30th.

From the amount of money collected from the bus during the trial week, it looks hopeful that there will be a permanent bus service from Redstone next year.

Win a free trip home to get money!

(Or enough Sprite to throw a loud party every night for a semester.)

Don't write home to get money. Just write a college newspaper ad for Sprite. You may win a free trip home to ask for the money in person.

What should your ad say? How tart and tingling Sprite is. And how it roars! Fizzes! Bubbles! Gushes! And tastes! (And how!) Not too sweet. Not too innocent.

PRIZES

1st PRIZE $500 IN TRAVELERS CHECKS or 5,000 BOTTLES OF SPRITE

100 PRIZES OF $25 IN DINES

...so if you can't go home in person, you can use the telephone to make your point.

RULES

Write your ad the way you think would interest college newspaper readers.

Give it a contemporary, sophisticated flavor. (A few swigs of Sprite will give you the idea -- though you don't have to buy anything to enter.)

Neatness counts a little. Cleverness counts a lot. Your ad can be any length--if it fits this space. (But remember you're not writing a term paper.)

Send each ad you submit to Ads for Sprite, P.O. Box 55, New York, New York 10046.

All entries become the property of The Coca-Cola Company. None will be returned. Judges' decision final. Entries must be received by May 2, 1967. Be sure to include name and address. Winners will be notified by May 24, 1967.

YACHTING SUMMER POSITIONS

The North American Yachting Association is soliciting summer job applications. Due to the results of a recent survey of sail and power vessel owners on the East coast, West coast, Gulf area and the Great Lakes, applications from college students or graduates are being accepted.

Employment for experienced as well as inexperienced young men and women of good character is available. Facility in cooking or child care is particularly helpful. Crewing offers the opportunity to acquire or sharpen boating skills, and visit new places while earning reasonable income in pleasant outdoor surroundings.

TO APPLY: Send NAYA a resume using the form below and your application will be reproduced and forwarded to over 3,000 owners of large craft.

NOTE: Our reproduction system requires that all resumes be clearly typed or printed using the exact format outlined below including each item with appropriate number (i.e. (1) John Doe (2) 1704 Main St.)

(1) Name (2) Address (3) Phone no. (4) Age (5) School (6) Available from . . . to . . . in (state general area(s)) (7) Previous relevant experience (8) Two personal references (9) Preference (sailing or cruising, etc.) (10) Other pertinent facts (11) Two or more applicants wishing to work together, state this preference.

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Service

THE OPPORTUNITIES EXIST IF YOU CAN FILL THEM. Too many students break down their morale by the wrong technique of job hunting - or rather because they have no technique at all, and simply go at it in a haphazard way. It is inevitable that a number of rejections will leave a scar on anyone's self-confidence and self-esteem. But much of this can be eliminated by making a plan and following it out.

It is safe to say that no one ever succeeded by accident; no one ever reached a goal without knowing what the goal was and aiming for it; no war was ever won without a planned campaign of battle. Certainly your own life merits a plan of action. There is always a good market for good college educated men and women. Under our economic system business and government plays an important part, and as long as business and government exists there will be jobs and there must be people to fill them. New developments constantly provide new fields of enterprise. No one dares hazard a guess at the opportunities of the present and the future. Many corporations are manufacturing products that were undreamed of a few years ago or that were considered impossible of achievement. Because American business is constantly changing, its requirements are changing too. It is an era of specialization, and it follows naturally enough that more specialized training is required of employees. This in itself need not be a stumbling block, because the means for acquiring that training are a hand, available to everyone who has the enterprise and ambition to take advantage of it. Business has no place for the Jack-of-all-trades, or for the aimless person who is "willing to do anything". In the past fifty years great corporations have grown up which have altered the old picture. These organizations, employing vast numbers of people, are highly specialized. They have to be. They require specific skills. The man or woman who might be excellent in one department would be worthless in another.

As a senior if you look for "any job", trusting to blind luck that you will not land in one for which you are wholly unqualified, you will be making a good start toward failure. You are either relying on the personnel man to figure out for himself what your abilities are - and if you do not take the trouble to do it for yourself, you should not blame the personnel man who fails to sum up your qualifications correctly - or he is simply indifferent. The senior with a well-defined plan will leave you far behind every time.

"Suppose I ask for a specific job," the applicant thinks, "and there is no vacancy in that field? Then I shall lose my chance. But, if I say I am willing to do anything they may find a place for me". It does not work that way. To be blunt about it, the senior who says, "I am willing to do anything," makes a bad impression. The senior is not aiming at a job, but simply scattering shots in the hope that it may hit something. Such a senior appears to be vague and passes on to the prospective employer the task of doing the senior's own thinking, i.e. of weighing and assessing potentialities.

It used to be regarded as the proper attitude for a boy or girl to say, "I am willing to do anything". And to a certain extent such a display of willingness does signify the proper attitude. In an age of specialization, however, it does not go far enough. It is liable to suggest either that you have given no thought to what you want to do or that there is nothing you can do well. You can always say, "I am willing to start anywhere, but I believe I am best fitted for . . ."

It is a common mistake for you to think, "There must be something I can do in a big organization like this". You have missed the whole point. The employer is not finding a place for you; he is buying the services you have to sell. The senior who applies for a job in this frame of mind is not attempting to sell himself. He is asking that he be given a job without advancing one reason for the employer's giving it to him.

Every organization constantly adds new people whether or not it is expanding its business due to transfers, retirement, promotions, or discharges. There is a lot of competition for these jobs. I have heard it said that ninety percent of the people who do not get a job, or who get one and lost it, or who remain in the same spot after they get one, owe their difficulties to personal traits, and only ten percent to lack of ability. The encouraging point in all this is the fact that almost anyone can overcome or correct the particular personal traits that are your own liabilities, if you will take the time and trouble to look yourself over honestly and discover what they are. The seniors who fail, for the most part, do not do so because of lack of ability, they do not do so because of bad luck. They fail because they are either too indifferent or too lazy to examine the cause of their failure and take steps to remove it. Not one person in a hundred, to make a conservative estimate, uses a quarter of his ability or makes more than a half-hearted effort to advance himself. And yet anyone can do it. It is a safe bet to say that everyone who has ever succeeded has done it.

The personnel man or woman is simply a purchasing agent who's job it is to make the best investment for the employer that the market affords. As an applicant for a job, you are a salesman, seeking to sell the one thing you have to sell - and that is yourself. Practically everything you do in your relationship with other people involves salesmanship. Employers do not expect that when you enter their places of business you will be of great value to them. They know that before you can be useful they will have to train you. Seniors are turned down for jobs chiefly because they are poor salesmen; because they do not know what they have to sell; because they do not know where to sell it; because they do not know how to sell it. Because, in short, they were not prepared. What do you really want to do? More graduates lose out on jobs because they have never thought of the answer to this question than for any other reason. Find the thing you want to do, and you have made the biggest step toward getting a job. Remember that no one can stop you in your own field.

Senior Finals

"The Senior Class made its annual petition to the faculty for no final examinations. The result is the same as that of the petitions of former years. It would seem as if some satisfactory solution of this question could be found. As it is now, the work of the senior year is harder than that of any other year. Besides this there is the responsibility of fraternity, managerial, literary and committee work which falls heaviest on the seniors. The college man's last year thus becomes a round of drudgery. Now this ought to be otherwise. The senior year should not be alighted by any means. It is possible, however, to miss making the most of this year by crowding too much into it. The tendency of the well-balanced college course should be toward forcing the drudgery down into the first three years. The last year ought to be valuable, not so much because of the new material gained as for the classification, polishing and rounding out of the old. . . . Perhaps a smaller number of required hours for the last half senior year is a better solution of the question than the abolition of final examinations. . . ."

That's what some said in 1903, June 13, The University CYNIC.

Appropriations Increased

University of Vermont President Lyman S. Rowell today extended a vote of thanks to the just-concluded session of the Vermont Legislature.

He called the $4.3 million biennial increase in state support "a significant and emphatic vote of confidence on the part of the Governor and the Legislators."

He expressed particular pleasure that a committee of conference had voted to provide an additional $300,000 to the first year appropriation for UVM.

"This will not entirely solve the problem we must face in maintaining quality programs within the limits of the state appropriation," but he added "it will help a great deal."

He noted that UVM had requested $6.9 million the first year and the Legislature had approved $6.5 million. "It is in the second year of the biennium that we will face a painfully stringent operation unless we can find additional support from sources we cannot yet anticipate."

"The main thing in which I take pride," he concluded, "is that the increase we have received is a significant vote of confidence in the University."

UMV's trustees had approved a total biennial budget of $47 million. This included a request to the state to provide $14.9 million. The Governor had recommended $13,000,000, and the Legislature approved $13.3 million.

REQUIEM FOR A SQUARE

You, like any other lovable, clean-living, freckle-faced American kid, want to be a BMOC. How can you make it? Well sir, there are several ways, none of which will work.

You're too puny to be an athlete, too lazy to be a valedictorian, and too hairy to run for Homecoming Queen.

As for becoming a best-dressed man, how are you going to buy clothes with a miser for a father?

Are you licked then? Is there no way to make BMOC? Yes, there is! And you can do it! Do what? This:

Become a hippie! Get cool! Get alienated! Have an Identity Crisis! Be one of the Others!

How? Well sir, to become a hippie, simply follow these five simple rules:

1. Read all of Tolkien in the original dwarf.
2. Have your Sophomore Slump in the freshman year.
3. Wear buttons that say things like this:

NATIONALIZE DAIRY QUEEN
ASTHMATICS, UNITE
LEGALIZE APPLE BUTTER
HANDS OFF AIR POLLUTION

4. Go steady with a girl who has long greasy hair, a guitar, enlarged pores, and thermal underwear.
5. Attend Happenings regularly.

This last item may require some explanation, for it is possible that Happenings haven't reached your campus yet. Be assured they will because Happenings are the biggest college craze since mononucleosis.

A Happening, in case you don't know, is the first formless art form. Things just happen. For example, eighty naked men come out and squirt each other with fire hoses containing tinted yogurt. Then eighty more naked men come out and light birthday candles in the navels of the first eighty men. Then one girl, clothed, comes out and pulls three thousand feet of sausage casing through her pierced ear. Then eighty more naked men come out and eat a station wagon.

There is, of course, a musical accompaniment to all these fun things. Usually it is "Begin the Beguine," played by 26 trench mortars, a drop forge, and a rooster.

There used to be, some years ago, still another requirement for becoming a hippie: a man had to have a beard.

But no longer. Beards were worn in the past not so much as a protest, but because shaving was such a painful experience. Then along came Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades.

Today if you don't want to shave, well, that's your hangup, isn't it, baby? I mean when you've got a blade like Personna that tugs not neither does it scrape, what's your copout, man? I mean like get with it; you're living in the past. Shaving used to hurt, used to scratch, used to gouge, used to give you all kinds of static. But not since Personna. It's a gas, man. It's a doozy; it's mom's apple pie. You dig?

I mean, man, you still want a beard? Crazy! But you don't have to turn your face into a slum, do you? Shave around the bush, baby, neatly and nicely with Personna. I mean like Personna comes in double-edge style and Injector style too. I mean like any way you try it, you gotta like like it.

© 1967, Max Shulman

Hey, man, like how about doubling your shaving cool? Like how about wilting those crazy whiskers with some Burma-Shave? Like regular or menthol? Like have you got a better friend than your kisser? Like treat it right, right? Ye-ye!

The ceremonies concluded with the introduction of the various Honorary Societies and the colorful recessional of faculty and seniors in their academic robes.

One more thought. I understand that first-year medical students are required to enroll in an anatomy course. I refer Mr. Sabeau to the sections in his text which differentiate the sexes. After studying the material and pondering it, he might wish to call Miss Pearson and ask her for a date. He is the first person to confuse her with the male sex; I hope that this is the last time this future physician makes the mistake.

EDUCATION EARNED?

I suppose this letter shouldn't be written until I leave this agriculturally (if not intellectually) fertile area, but since I find that I have already graduated, the present will do. I have spent nearly four years here, and have one sad conclusion -- that I have wasted my time. In seven semesters I have amassed a considerable wealth of numbers -- courses and credit hours -- but little or no intellectual wealth. In Math and Physics, my majors, I have learned facts and theories, but I have not learned HOW TO LEARN. Carrying loads of up to 19 credit hours (my lightest was

By M. Minsky

You probably don't recall that on August 2, 1964 a couple of American destroyers sailing in the gulf of Tonkin were attacked without direct provocation by torpedo boats of the People's Democratic Republic of Viet Nam. In response to this attack the president ordered the bombings of various coastal installations of the People's Democratic Republic and congress passed a resolution granting him the power to take "all necessary steps to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression." By February of 1965, the United States was busily preventing aggression by selective bombing of North Viet Nam. Several times Johnson offered to negotiate; he even stopped the bombings temporarily. But each time he stopped them he renewed them with new force and vigor and today, if one can rely upon the reports of Harrison Salisbury - an associate editor of the New York Times who recently returned from a tour of the North - and the reports of various French and other non-communist reporters, not even civilian areas are free from attack. Nor should we forget the bombings of the South both accidental and otherwise.

Although the first bombings of the North seemed to be nothing more but vengeance seeking, soon the State Department's propaganda mill proposed to the American public which eagerly accepted its words that the bombings were an attempt to stop infiltration and thus save many American lives. Even Mr. McNamara has recently stated that the bombings have not prevented infiltration directly; instead they force the government of the North to channel manpower into reconstruction rather than into infiltration. The fact that American bombing has inspired additional infiltration by men who believed honestly and sincerely that they were fighting to free their nation - the Vietnamese people are one people and the division into two nations was unofficially made by the Geneva accords.

In 1962 there were 2,000 American advisors in Viet Nam. By the end of 1963 there were 23,000 troops and by the end of 1965 there were 125,000. Today there are over 400,000 American soldiers fighting in Viet Nam. A recent article in the Washington Star estimated Viet Cong strength inclusive of North Vietnamese regulars at 280,000. The number of North Vietnamese in the south at the end of 1964 was 37,000. According to Kenneth Trager in an article appearing in Volume IV of Orbis, total Viet-Cong strength was about 100,000. Both Mr. Trager and the State Department's White Paper claim that it will take about ten times as many men as the Viet Cong have in order to defeat the guerilla force. The White Paper also claimed that the Hanoi government had undertaken "an elaborate program to supply its forces in the south with weapons, ammunition, and other supplies." I.F. Stone, a Washington journalist obtained from the Pentagon press office information which was not found in the White Paper; in a three year period ending in 1964, 15,100 weapons had been captured from the enemy, but 27,400 weapons had been lost to them. The records of the International Control Commission at the end of 1964 confirm 179 weapons which were of communist origin.

Another set of figures may interest you. So far almost 6,000 Americans have been killed in the war. By the end of 1964, according to the White Paper, 1,786 people, exclusive of military personnel, had been killed by the Viet Cong. About 500 of these were village chiefs and government officials - neither of which groups were particularly popular under the repressive Diem regime. I have heard that since 1964 the Viet Cong have killed anywhere from 6,000 to 20,000 additional civilians. According to the Washington Star there have been 480,000 Viet Cong casualties; over 200,000 of these are deaths. A fairly well documented article in the January issue of Ramparts claims that 1,000,000 children have been killed or injured by American bombings and napalming. This figure may be extravagant. The Student Peace Movement claims in a pamphlet last year, that 250,000 men, women and children have been killed in Viet Nam since 1961. The French killed some 200,000 Viet Namese in their fruitless attempt to remain a colonial power, and the Student Peace Movement figure may very well be accurate. I recall reading in the New York Times about a year ago that for every combatant death in Viet Nam there were between five and ten civilian casualties. That would put the figure of civilian casualties between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 people.

The number of civilian casualties is of course almost impossible to ascertain. But it seems quite certain that the number of people killed by American bombings which must be remembered extend not only into the major cities of the North, but also into the villages and jungles of the South is far, far greater than the number of people killed by the Viet Cong.

Is it really worth it? We may be preventing "communism" in Viet Nam and by preventing it in Viet Nam we may be preventing communist inspired revolutions from breaking out in other South-East Asian nations. But we should remember revolutions are the products of economic and social discontent and injustice and not the products of evil, subversive men. The Viet Cong control large sections of Viet Nam because of the refusal of the Diem regime to legislate much needed land and economic reform. Nor should it be forgotten that Diem, in order to strengthen his own power, killed many thousands of people who could have formed a nationalist, liberal opposition. This action forced many people to undertake revolutionary action directed against Diem and in support of agrarian reform. The increasing pro-Diem sentiment in the American government, inspired greatly by Cardinal Spellman, and the failure of this government to understand revolutionary actions led to the current situation. We have perhaps forgotten our own revolutionary heritage and our government when confronted with revolution holds up the bogeyman of Russia and China in order to scare us, its little children.

Letters ...

14 hours of 200-level Math and Physics - for a 3.5 average) I have spent an average of less than 10 hours per week studying, and precious little extra for exams or papers. If you don't have to grind, why bother? But, this world is not all the University of Vermont and hard work will be required of me in the future.

The one thing I came to college for, to learn how to learn, has neither been offered to me nor required of me here. There are only two meaningful incentives to develop this facility; that successful university advancement and degree program require and demand this, or, that the student really wants to learn in spite of university policy and goals. The first I obviously have not encountered; the latter idea was stripped from me by those around me, working furiously and only for grades. I got better grades without half trying, and found that everybody else thought I was doing just fine. I began to be convinced I was, too.

Is this university staffed as well as populated by grade-conscious people? Are grades the end-product of schooling? Was there no one here who could have encouraged learning for its own sake? It is discouraging to find that I have wasted four years and many thousands of dollars for this which has been termed an education. If by education one means awareness of growing ignorance, then I have profited.

To have learned how to learn prepares one for any job in the world; to possess a mere collection of unearned grades and a piece of parchment is not even a good preparation for digging ditches or forking hay.

DR. ROLLINS LAUDED

To the Editor:

It is not very often that THE COLONIAL NEWS feels impelled to comment on the movements of a member of the faculty. Indeed, the arrival and departure of fine men is a common occurrence on any university campus that is vitally alive. The appointment of Incongruence is an unfortunate way of being. But it would appear that incongruence is the only suitable alternative left to save one from being caught in the vicious cycle of extremism (getting no place quickly).

By Howard Savin

The American way of life, in itself, is a confounding variable that has been institutionalized to the point of virtue. Few would choose to argue against an individual's inherent right to take a stand in defense of moral, ethical, and political convictions. However, the pragmatic foundations of our nation and, for that matter, society in general, are intolerant of the forces which pose a threat to the entrenched equilibrium.

To be more specific, it would appear that effective protest, organized or other, must be a realistically, or pragmatically, geared expression of specific belief. If any positive gains are to be expected, the desired ends must be as realistically oriented as the means. To great dismay, student protest has taken on the aspects of being preoccupation and hobby with many of the angry young men and women in our "intellectual" community. There can be no argument against the valuable instrumental function of protest, but even the best of instruments can be worn out from misuse.

Alfred B. Rollins, Professor of History, as Dean of the University of Vermont's College of Arts and Sciences, however, is no common occurrence.

Dr. Rollins, in four years at Binghamton, has earned the deep respect of all his colleagues and students. The appointment he has received from an outstanding university is testimony to the respect accorded him throughout academia. Dr. Rollins will be missed at SUNY Binghamton.

THE COLONIAL NEWS wishes Alfred B. Rollins the best of luck in his new position at the University of Vermont.

BLOOMENTHAL ATTACKED

Dear Mr. Bloomenthal,

Perhaps it is not my place to say anything as I serve on your staff, but enough is enough. In the April 14th issue of the CYNIC you wrote a column entitled "Boston is Dead," which extended congratulations to the Philadelphia '76ers on their triumph in the Eastern division playoffs. Come now. Being a fairly intelligent person I assume you must recognize that Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues do not receive gift wrapped subscriptions to the CYNIC and therefore your well intended congratulations become little more than meaningless tripe. As for the way you named the Philadelphia team, I will make no comment. It doesn't deserve one.

To be brief Mr. Bloomenthal, stick to your own area: college sports (UVM in particular). If we are desirous of reading about the exploits of "Wilt, Hal, Chet, Wally etc.", I'm sure we can all afford a copy of the Sports Illustrated.

Sincerely yours,
Fred Schlapp

Study Abroad

A new guide, "Summer Study Abroad," has just been published by the Institute of International Education.

This guide, which is written especially for teens, includes the location, educational institution and its address, a brief description of the course, dates it will be given, minimum age requirements if available, and where to apply, plus much other useful information. There is also a comprehensive introductory section.

"Summer Study Abroad 1967" is available from the Publications Division of the Institute of International Education, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017 for $1.50 a copy.

FEIFFER

BEING A BRAZEN MIMICRY OF MACBIRD ON A LOCAL LEVEL.

By Dick Matheson

Rowlet: What, has this thing appear'd again this week?

Rolandio: Aye, something is rotten in the state of Denmont;

'Tis said at darkest midnight, when the frosh

Are throwing moons, when sharp-toothed catamounts

Do stalk the campus, and Michaelmen dare not Go out on foot lest witchlike Redstone hags

Molest their innocence, 'tis said, I say,

That stalks before the rocklike steps of Waterman

A semblance most strangely like and similar

To that of our late King, the studious McCune.

Rowlet: This is preposterous; of course, 'tis known

Throughout the greasy walls of Burlington

The succession is mine and rightly so.

Rolandio: Aye, fear not that justice shall prevail; though

'Tis rumored on the lips of students here

And midst the sacred letters of the local daily

That 'spite the close-lipped silence of the Trusty

Court, some foul encounter has our late King met.

'Tis said his spirit walks, though that is bull.

(Enter Ghost of McCune)

But my authority has spoken false!

(Exit Rolandio, running)

Ghost: Rowlet, avenge me! That foul and trait'rous court

Of Trustees sat upon the board and then

Conspir'd to work my downfall and o'erthrow.

While I was resting in the Dairy Barn,

They poured into my unexpecting ears

A most vile poison, saying, you are fired!

Then was I sentenced to wander homeless o'er

The Asian jungles in planes of startling hue,

Visit the native states of purge-atory,

Arm'd with nought but paper and pen, with which

I was doom'd to catalog each boring detail

Of what I saw and send it to the CYNIC

To keep the students lulled in apathy.

O, noble Rowlet, say you will avenge,

And strike each Trusty courtier to the soul,

That is, his wallet, with thy scholarly pen.

Do I have thy trusted word of honor?

Rowlet: O, prophetic soul, don't put me on.

Think at thou that I thy end do seek?

If these Trusty courtiers can screw thee,

A scholar of renown, so wise and free,

What then would this same group effect on me

Who never even managed high degree?

Nay, where thou lead'st I care not much to follow.

Therefore shall I do just what I'm expected. (Exeunt)

NEXT SCENE. (Enter Rowlet and Ophelia, daughter of Parentius)

Rowlet: (Aside) O, what a rug and puppet sage am I!

That or my mother, dear Viridimontanae,

I do permit incestuous Trustees to dote.

But soft! The nymph Ophelia.

Ophelia: Good, my lord,

How's tricks?

Rowlet: Ha, ha! are you honest? Dean's List?

Ophelia: You mean like on tests? Well --

Rowlet: Get thee to a dormitory; thy curfew

Rings its loco parentius note from far. (Exeunt)

NEW SCENE: (Enter Rowlet, and Ophelia, rending her wig)

Ophelia: Raise no sips, of sweet Champagne (Sings)

In our concrete Redstone cells . . .

Rowlet: Her senses have departed from her skull.

What nonsense is within her? (Exeunt)

NEW SCENE: (Enter Rowlet and Osric)

Osric: My lord, the Trusty courtiers upon thy head

A most strange wager have installed for laughs.

They bet that in ten crises, you shall beat

The students' avatar, good Laertes,

At least ten times, or you shall sip with glee

The poison potion that they give to thee.

Laertes is incensed by Ophelia's folly;

He claims a most Puritanical madness has her struck.

Rowlet: Osric, thou art the Bane of our existence.

I shall appear, equipped with secretaries. (Exeunt)

NEW SCENE: (Enter Rowlet, equipped with secretaries, and Laertes, from stage left)

Laertes: Hoot, hoot! Without an R, thou art strange fowl.

Rowlet: Double, double, toil and trouble,

Secretaries, prepare a statement for the public.

Laertes: Aroint thee, secretaries! On guard, Rowlet!

(They exit, dueling with bananas) (Enter Ophelia)

Ophelia: I fear he shall make soldiers of us all. (Sings)

(Re-enter Laertes and Rowlet, eating bananas)

Rowlet: A brave new world I have envisioned now;

And a strange alliance have begun.

I have seen that we all students are, and each

A teacher too; too many years we have Been split apart by most strange rigid walls

As marks, degrees, and distant bored Trustees.

Let us begin.

ODE TO THE UVM FOOD SERVICE

By Diem

Whose foods these are I think I know.

I rather wish I didn't though,

For when I gripe does Sammy hear?

He merely tells me where to go.

Now any guest would think it queer

That I should eat my dinner here,

And lunch and breakfast's hard to take,

The average meal's a thing to fear.

Salads so old they vote - the cake

Drives nails - don't drop your boiled potato

(Fixing the floor costs dough) -

they peep.

Boiled eggs so raw - (Students, awake!)

Sometimes the food just can't be beat.

I hear that Saga's so elite,

Yet days to go before I eat;

Yet days to go before I eat.

Socrates

By Diem

There once was a great prof

mediocrities,

A man truly wise

In everyone's eyes,

But the UVM administration regrets to inform him he is

There's only one hitch: it will take eight months of your time.

But measured against results, these eight months could be the most advantageous ones you'll ever spend.

If you have the right qualifications—a B.A. or B.S. degree and a genuine interest in succeeding—you may be one of a select group of young men participating in the new Management Internship Program at Saranac Lake in the Lake Placid area of upstate New York.

This unprecedented program starts in early September and is sponsored by the American Management Association—the world's largest and foremost non-profit educational organization devoted to advancing and sharing the principles of sound management throughout the entire management community. Last year alone some 1,800 separate AMA educational programs were attended by more than 100,000 managers representing such diverse fields as business, education, labor, government, religion, public health, and the communications media.

Everything about the Management Internship Program is unique. The Management Center where you'll live and study is equipped with every recent technical advance in educational methodology. The faculty is drawn from the nation's most gifted and successful practicing managers. And the curriculum is tailor-made to the knowledge every beginning manager needs but few possess—including well-developed leadership skills... a sophisticated understanding of the interrelationships between business and other social and economic organizations... a thorough indoctrination in the various phases of management... and a firm grasp of practical business techniques.

In addition, you will have the invaluable opportunity to associate with the company presidents, labor leaders, government officials and other top-level administrators who participate in AMA's regularly scheduled meetings.

It's unlikely that there is a manager at work today who would not have welcomed a comparable opportunity to get a practical orientation in management before embarking on his demanding career. Can you afford to pass it up?

Here are the four Finalists in our state—vote for your choice today!

Judith was named to the Dean's List for five semesters and was honored for having the highest scholastic average in her sorority. For two years, she was Treasurer of the Newman Club. She is also a member of the Newman Club Choir, Women's Forum, and the Mountain Club. Judith served as Chairman of the Ambassador Program of the Experiment in International Living. For her sorority, Delta Delta Delta, she was Pledge Trainer, Service Projects assistant, President of her pledge class and Nominating Committee class representative. Swimming and horseback riding are among her sports. Judith headed the Red Cross Blood Drive on campus for two years, and has done volunteer work in the pediatrics department of a local hospital. She has been accepted at a medical school and hopes to become a medical missionary, possibly among American Indians.

Joyce has an academic record which earned her recognition on the Dean's List. She has served on the President's Committee on International Living, the Sophomore Committee for Foreign Scholarship, and as Secretary of the Spanish Club. She has been active in the French Club, Women's Student Government Association, and the Newman Club. Joyce was a Panhellenic Dormitory Representative and was in the Big-Little Sister Program. A member of Delta Delta Delta, she is correspondent for the sorority magazine, has been their Librarian and Activities Chairman. She has taught snow and water skiing and swimming. She enjoys Spanish art, sewing and cooking. Joyce collected clothing for the underprivileged, organized children's Christmas parties and served during the Red Cross blood drive. Her goal is to become a language teacher.

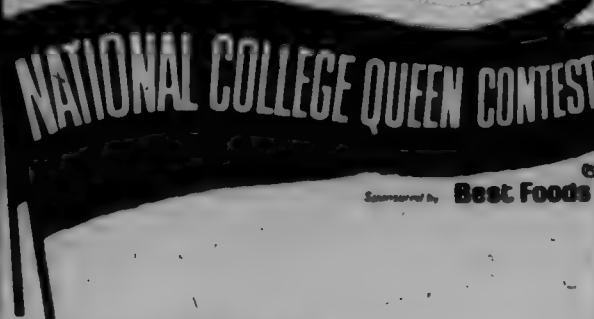

Diane has achieved scholastic honors which include being on the Dean's List for the past six semesters. Her academic average has earned her the Pi Beta Phi Scholarship Award, as well as membership on the Mortar Board Quarterly, Sophomore Aides (Sophomore honorary), and Staff 'n Sandal. Diane has been Social Chairman of her dorm floor, Floor and Dorm President and an Honorary ROTC Captain. A member of Pi Beta Phi, she has been President of her sorority, Vice President of the Pledge Class and Assistant Membership Chairman. Golf, badminton, swimming, volleyball, bowling and water-skiing are her favorite sports. Among her hobbies, she enjoys making scrapbooks and playing the piano. Diane has participated in Heart Fund drives, was a volunteer during election campaigns. Her ambition: to become a business woman, specializing in Personnel.

Kathryn earned a scholarship in her Sophomore year, and has an academic record which includes being on the Dean's List for the past three semesters. Kathryn is a member of the Newman Club and the Girls' and Mixed Choirs. She has been on the staff of "Departure" (the literary magazine) and the Freshman Yearbook. She has been Co-Chairman of the Art & Publicity Committee during Freshman Orientation for Mixer. Swimming, basketball, softball, volleyball and track are her favorite sports. She was Captain of the WRA basketball team. Writing, collecting record albums, acting, drawing and guitar-playing are among her hobbies. Kathryn has been a camp counselor, has served as a Vermont Cancer Drive volunteer, and has worked for the Sisters of Mercy Financial Drive. After graduation, she plans to become a secondary school teacher.

MacBird Misses Mark

By John Kyper

MACBIRD! How can I ever again say the name of Barbara Garson's caricature of President Johnson without slyly chucking to myself? It definitely is not a good play — indeed, some might complain that it is too clumsy a work to be treasonous at all. It is at best a mishmash of distorted history and worse Shakespeare — there is even legitimate questions whether it was really MACBETH Miss Garson chose to butcher or Hamlet (or even Stephen Collins Foster?).

The plot, as everyone must know by now, is an amateur attempt to portray Johnson as Macbeth, creating the sly innuendo that he killed President Kennedy and blaming him with everything from the Vietnamese War to the Great Power Blackout of 1965. It is at this, its crudest and most obvious level, that the play emerges in poor taste.

As a caricature it is unlikely to survive its subject. Indeed, like most caricatures, it has a perfect target, in Lyndon Johnson, whose personal and political foibles leave much to be desired as a leader. Nevertheless, despite its merits or lack of such, it is certainly not worth the excessive and puerile praise that many intellectuals have given it, almost as the vent of their own frustrations.

Probably its most truthful, if still excessive, judgment was that of Peter Brook, co-director of the Royal Shakespeare Company of London:

For an Englishman it is a positive glowing refutation of our own anti-Americans. I mean those who forget the splendid image of America, the open land of the free, the land to which the immigrants swarmed, the only land in the world in which an accusation like MACBIRD could be heard on a public stage. MACBIRD is the most powerful piece of pro-American theater in a long time.

Like the debate over this nation's Vietnam policy, MACBIRD shall not be so remembered for itself but by the very fact that America is so open and dynamic a society that it allows it at all. This is quite a tribute to America, a vindication of human freedom.

MACBIRD was produced in the Arena Theater, Friday the 14th by the UVM chapter of the Vermont Student Movement, under the direction of Jeff Kent.

WORLD-WIDE
Cynic

By Terrie Wurzbacher

"The Student Advocate" is a student publication of Rochester Institute of Technology. This paper was born out of disagreement with the regular student paper of RIT, The Reporter. J' ACCUSE — We accuse the administration of Rochester Institute of Technology of failing in both its duty, and its goals, of educating the "total" student. It has done so by over stepping the issue of student responsibility and offering instead a sugar-coated, grandiose scheme as a solution to the serious problem of establishing a free student press.

WE accuse the Administration of this college of clinging to the dead tradition of maintaining an "Official Publication" in open defiance of the wishes student-financed, student-controlled newspaper.

WE also accuse Dr. Campell of failing in his responsibility as chairman of November Reporter review panel to see that the panel functioned adequately. A committee to discuss technical problems of production and distribution, which was to meet with the current heads of Reporter never materialized.

WE accuse the School of Printing of repeatedly reneging on its promise to provide a linotype machine for the production of the Reporter.

WE accuse Hector Sutherland of refusing to cooperate with students attempting to turn the Reporter into an intellectual newspaper rather than a public relations house organ of the Institute.

AND we further accuse Rochester Institute of Technology of failing to produce an environment which will not only support but will encourage the publication of a newspaper written and controlled solely by students, containing issues of student interest, and reflecting student viewpoint. We contend that by doing so R.I.T. has drastically failed in one of its major academic and moral responsibilities.

LIBIDO — From the obituary column of the Methodist student magazine "Motive": Rochester, N.Y., April 13 — "God, creator of the universe, principal deity of the world's Jews, ultimate reality of Christians, and most eminent of all divinities, died late yesterday during major surgery undertaken to correct a massive diminishing influence.

Reactions from the world's great and from the man in the street was uniformly incredulous . . . From Independence, Mo., former President Harry S. Truman, who received the news in his Kansas City barbershop, said "I'm always sorry to hear somebody is dead. It's a damn shame."

It certainly is a damn shame because God was good for many things. He knew why it rained, what caused thunder and why the sky is blue, as well as answers to the formation of the earth and, even more important, the formation of ourselves.

WHO CAN FILL HIS SHOES?

For those of you who really need a supreme being, word has it that there are two main contenders for the number on spot. Minister Florence, who has been planning a power play in case of such an occurrence, and President Johnson whose campaign to protect the people of the world from the cradle to the grave has bought many new friends, Chief Justice Earl Warren, was vacationing in Moscow, and was not available for a comment.

THE NEW BREED

A new frontier imposes a natural process of selection. You can meet the people that you would see on top of a high ski run which had no chair lift, and you can do it without the effort of climbing . . . just let gravity take its course. It's all downhill at the PARACHUTES' INCORPORATED CENTERS.

The Centers are staffed and equipped to put you out on your first jump immediately following a time-tested four hour period of instruction. ($35 for everything involved in making the jump.) Safety is insured through the use of automatically opening main parachutes, FAA approved ten-place jump aircraft (your entire class jumps together), radio communication to the student, all-land drop zones, and constant, overall supervision by professional instructors both in the aircraft and on the ground. (92,600 jumps to date, over 9,200 of which were first jump students)

PROFESSOR ELSE TO SPEAK ON PLATO

Professor Gerald F. Else, Chairman of the Department of Classics at the University of Michigan, will give a public lecture on Wednesday, April 26 at 8 p.m. in 101 Votey Hall under the sponsorship of the Goodrich Classical Club and the Student Association.

Professor Else's most important work is his monumental treatment of Aristotle's "Poetics" published in 1957, the most thorough study ever given this ancient classic of literary criticism. More recently, Professor Else has offered a revolutionary theory of the origin of Greek tragedy in the Martin Classical Lectures at Oberlin College.

In the lecture at UVM Professor Else will speak on Plato and the poets, exploring Plato's hostility towards the Greek poets and furthering his study of the Greek evaluation of poetry, one of their own greatest achievements.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

MEDICAL LIBRARY'S NEW SERVICES

In conjunction with the newly established Regional Medical Program, the University of Vermont College of Medicine Library is working to make its services more readily available to Northern New England and New York.

According to George Hunter, medical librarian, the activities that the new program will include are cataloging of the library's holdings, xeroxing service of selections from medical publications and a teletype hook-up with other medical libraries in the area.

ATTENTION!

IFC-PANHEL BANQUET HELD

On April 13 the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council held their annual banquet. Present were old and new fraternity and sorority presidents, Dean of Men, Dean of Women, faculty advisors of Pan-Hel and IFC, the Director of Student Activities, the present exec of IFC and PanHel, and keynote speaker Dr. Izzo.

In his speech Dr. Izzo declared that fraternities are relevant today and play an important part in university life. The outstanding Greek men and women awards were presented for the first time to Fred Brown and Diane Dempsey.

Presented to Alpha Chi Omega Sorority was the Lambda Iota trophy for the most outstanding sorority on the UVM campus.

DEPARTURE READING

DEPARTURE, the literary magazine of UVM, will present a reading of the spring issue on Monday, May 1, at 8 P.M., in the North Lounge of Billings Center.

Copies of the magazine will be on sale at 25¢ each at the door.

May 2 and 3 DEPARTURE will be on sale downstairs in Billings, and on May 4 and 5 outside the bookstore in Waterman.

ATTENTION GRADUATE STUDENTS

The Institute of International Education (IIE) announced that his competition for the 1968-69 United States Government Graduate Grants for academic study abroad, and for professional training in the creative and performing arts, will open officially on May 1st.

This program, provided by part of the Fulbright-Hays Act, offers 850 American graduate students an opportunity to study in one of 54 countries.

Application forms and further information are available from the Fulbright Advisor, Dean Macmillan, at the office of the Graduate School.

EARNING A WHILE IN PEACE CORPS

In Brockport, N.Y., the Joint Peace Corps - State University College at Brockport Degree Program, a newly established program, allows present sophomores, majoring in mathematics or science, to qualify for their Bachelor's degree, a provisional teaching license, and an overseas teaching assignment with the Peace Corps in just fifteen months.

Two summer sessions, subsidized by the Peace Corps, also count toward degree program credits. At the end of this time, the students will receive their overseas teaching assignment.

On returning from abroad, they will be able to obtain their Master's degree and permanent teaching licenses in two semesters, their field work having given them some advanced credit.

SENIOR CLASS ACTIVITIES

The Senior Class Picnic and Party will be held at the Old Lantern in Charlotte on May 17. There will be a picnic style buffet at 6:00 P.M. and a dance party from 8:00 to 12:00 P.M.

Plans are also in the making for a talent contest (open variety) to be held following the picnic. All interested groups should contact Leo Pfeiffer (3-4616) for contest arrangements.

Admission is free to all seniors but guests of seniors will be charged 75¢.

All seniors should make an all-out effort to plan on being there.

FACULTY TO HONDURAS

Two members of the University of Vermont faculty are leaving Tuesday, (Apr. 18,) for Honduras to explore the possibility of a link between the UVM medical college and the National University of Honduras.

Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr., dean, and Dr. Rufus C. Morrow, professor of otolaryngology, are making the trip. The aim: To find whether UVM medical students might be sent there for several weeks in the summer, to learn more about tropical diseases and the methods of treatment.

Ultimately this might be developed into a more complete exchange of students and faculty, in both directions.

Their trip is a part of the work of the Partners of the Alliance program linking states with Latin American countries. Thirty-one states are paired with those nations at present, working on programs of reciprocal interest and mutual help.

SHELBURNE PROGRAM

Shelburne Museum and the University will sponsor a study and lecture program from July 5th to August 16th. The theme of the public lectures this year is "American Art, Design, and History."

This program, entering its third season, takes advantage of the proximity of the Museum to the University and its outstanding collections which depict the early life of Vermont and New England.

All courses will be given Mon. through Fri., July 5th to August 16th. Information about them may be obtained through the Summer Session office.

5 STUDENTS ATTEND A & S SYMPOSIUM

The second Inter-Collegiate Symposium of the Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences was held at Norwich University, Northfield, Vt., last Saturday. UVM was well represented and made a good showing in the varied activities.

Of eight colleges there, UVM and Windham were the best represented, having 5 participants to the 2 or 3 from the other member colleges.

Jan Quackenbush, '67, showed his film, "The Pigeons According to Saint Hubert," at the performing arts presentation. This film was shown at UVM March 12th, one part of his 3 part UPSHOT performance.

Thomas G. Siccama, a graduate student, was a member of a science panel. His presentation was entitled "Forest Tonation in the Green Mountains."

Margaret M. Wilson, '68, contributed "Montesquieu and Absolutism" to a social science panel.

Theodore F. Kinerson, '67, was chairman of two social science panels and Robert J. Williams, '68, of one.

Prof. Maurice Kobler of the French Department also attended the symposium.

JOHN DEWEY FELLOWSHIP FOR FRESHMEN

Sixteen University of Vermont freshmen will be named John Dewey Fellows in an experimental academic program aimed at encouraging independent scholarship among outstanding students at the start of their college careers.

The scholars are chosen not only on the basis of their past performance, but also on potential, attitude, and diversity of interests. They will be urged to enter various honors programs, and will be personally guided by a member of the committee on student excellence.

The program is named in honor of John Dewey, a native of Burlington, who is an internationally known philosopher and educator.

$5,000 for 5,000 WORDS

Would you like to earn $5,000 for an essay? The Edward L. Bernays Foundation has announced an award of five thousand dollars for a concrete and practical program to further mutual understanding between the people of the United Kingdom and the United States.

Entries of not more than 5,000 words, typewritten, must be submitted to the Foundation no later than June 30th. Anyone is eligible to submit an entry.

This is the first step in a drive to dissipate stereotypes, clichés, generalities, myths, and half truths many of the 53,000,000 Britains and 198,000,000 Americans cling to, about each other, and to substitute facts for bias, ignorance and indifference.

Anyone interested in this contest should seek further information at the CYNIC office in lower Billings. It will be posted on the bulletin board outside the office.

230 SUMMER COURSES OFFERED

Summer enrollment at UVM has shown an annual increase each year since 1954. Last summer more than 2,300 students enrolled.

Over 12,000 copies of the catalogue for this summer have been mailed in state and out. There will be 230 summer courses on this campus, plus six more on the campuses of Castleton State and seven at Lyndon State College.

The course offerings reflect the fact that a large number of summer students at UVM are teachers and school administrators. More than 20% of last year's enrollment were educators.

Many of the Universities' summer offerings, in education as well as the other fields ranging from art to zoology, may be taken at the graduate level.

PROFESSOR FLANAGAN WINS FULBRIGHT

A University of Vermont scientist and teacher has won appointment as a Fulbright scholar which will enable him to work in Germany with scientists there, who are carrying out research closely allied with his research at Vermont.

Prof. Ted B. Flanagan, associate professor of chemistry at UVM, is one of about 200 to be named Fulbright Research Scholars for the coming year. Announcement was made by the Department of State.

He will begin work at the University of Muenster in the fall, doing research in physical chemistry.

Emphasis of his work will be on the absorption and diffusion of hydrogen and deuterium in palladium alloys. This will be a continuation of his work at Vermont under an Atomic Energy Commission grant. It is closely allied to research being conducted by scientists at the University of Muenster.

College Smoking

The University of Vermont is one of 50 colleges and universities selected to participate in a national survey of student smoking habits, attitudes and beliefs, Dr. Amidon announced April 12, 1967.

The study is sponsored by the American College Health Association, which has a long-standing interest in the problems of smoking and health, under a contract from the U.S. Public Health Service.

Under the plan, students will be asked for detailed information of their smoking attitudes and experience in a questionnaire to be provided for this purpose. It will be distributed at the University of Vermont to 1,250 undergraduates who were selected by a procedure designed to assure a representative sample of students.

The total number of students involved in the survey at all 50 institutions is estimated at 50,000. This sample, with appropriate weighing, will be representative of the total undergraduate student body in the United States.

All tabulation and preparation of reports will be done at the American College Health Association headquarters in Miami, Florida. Reports of the survey on each campus will be made available to the local health service director. On completion of the total survey, long-term studies on aspects of the smoking problem related to students will be initiated.

In announcing the project, Dr. Amidon said, "The University of Vermont welcomes the opportunity to take part in a study which can contribute to the control of a serious health hazard. Students represent one of the most important segments of the population for developing and carrying out a program on smoking and health. Smoking habits not only are frequently established during college years, but students represent an important nucleus of opinion leaders and social exemplars."

ACHA Project Coordinator James W. Dilley said in Miami that the three-fold purpose of the project is to: 1) provide an analysis of the smoking attitudes, behavior and beliefs of college students, 2) provide baseline information for measurement of programs introduced to bring about change, and 3) develop trend information related to smoking and health for this population.

Kake Walk Questionnaire

The purpose of this survey is to let the student body have more of a voice in the type of entertainment that Kake Walk brings to UVM each year. As Kake Walk grows, so does its ability to present UVM with finer entertainers. We are, therefore, giving you, the student, a chance to voice your opinion. Please fill out the survey below and drop it off in Billings Center at the Billings Desk. (Mr. Bain's office).

- (1) Would you prefer a Saturday afternoon Jazz Concert and why?
- (2) Entertainment- general- What type of music would you prefer? (i.e. English, Motown, Folk-Rock, etc.)
- (3) Should there be an elimination of jazz and/or folk music at the Jazz Concert?
- (4) Name two or three groups (any type) that you would like to see at UVM.
- (5) What do you think could be done to improve Kake Walk Weekend in any manner?

COOPER NAMED COMMANDER OF PERSHING RIFLES

Thursday, 13 April, the command of Company L-12, Pershing Rifles, changed hands in a public ceremony held in the Waterman Memorial Lounge.

The ceremony was opened with a short address by the retiring commander, PR Captain Norman J. Boyden, who then administered the oath of office and commissioned Thomas B. Wheel and Leslie C. Pike as PR Second Lieutenants, and promoted James B. Mitchell from Second to First Lieutenant. Highlighting the ceremony was the promotion and oath of office to the new Commander, Walter R. Cooper.

Following the ceremony, a talk was given by the Professor of Military Science, Colonel D.R. Longacre, on the qualities of leadership and the responsibilities of a leader. Pershing Rifles Advisor, Captain Howard D. Fraser, spoke on the responsibilities of the troops to their leaders. PR Captain Cooper then outlined his ideas of leadership and gave the oath of office to Miss Lillian White, the elected President of the PR Affiliate Co-ed Drill Team, the L-12 "Elles".

The first Brothers' meeting under the new staff was held after the public ceremony. Promoted to Warrant Officer was Gregory J. McHugo; Charles F. Scribner was promoted to Sergeant First Class. The schedule for the remainder of the year was discussed as well as plans for the year ahead.

ANNUAL GENERAL INSPECTION

An inspection team will arrive at the Military Science Department on the day of the Military Review. This group, composed of five officers and one enlisted man, will conduct the Army's Annual Inspection of the Department's operation and administration system.

Dateline...ROTC

They will attend classes, inspect one cadet company prior to the Review and attend a noon luncheon in the President's Dining Room at Waterman. They will close the day by attending and participating in the Review. Officer in charge of the team will be Colonel Frederic H. Palmblad, Professor of Military Science at Northeastern University.

FIVE RECEIVE ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

The Department of the Army announced on 13 April the names of five UVM ROTC sophomores who have been selected to receive two-year ROTC scholarships. These scholarships are being awarded to provide financial assistance to selected college men who are highly motivated toward a career as an officer in the Army.

UVM sophomores selected for the awards are David G. Martin of Malverne, N.Y., Christopher S. Murray of Middlebury, Jon G. Rusk of Pittsfield, Mass., Neal C. Vreeland of Wellsville, N.Y., and Thomas B. Wheel of Burlington.

Authorized by the ROTC Vitalization Act, signed by the President on October 13, 1964, each of the two-year scholarships will pay for tuition, textbooks and fees and provide the recipient with a subsistence allowance of $50 a month for the duration of his award.

All of the men receiving the two-year scholarships have completed two years of college and ROTC training and were nominated from the most highly qualified ROTC student applicants by the Professor of Military Science and college officials. Nominations were submitted to Department of the Army by a board composed of Colonel D.R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science, Dr. Herbert C. McArthur, Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences, Dr. Joseph A. Izzo, Assistant Dean of Technology, Captain Jack D. Rives, Assistant Professor of Military Science and Cadet Colonel Douglas G. Orvis, UVM ROTC Brigade Commander.

BRIGADE PREPARES FOR ANNUAL REVIEW

One week from tomorrow the ROTC Brigade will pass in Review at the 99th annual Military Review to be held at 4:30 at Centennial Field. The cadets have spent their drill periods throughout the entire semester preparing for the Review, and all members of the University community are invited to attend.

The 1967 Military Ball Queen, Miss Judy Bamman, and her court, all honorary commanders, will be participating in the Review ceremonies. The Queen, who is the Honorary Brigade Commander, will present the ROTC Colors to the Color Guard. Each Honorary Commander will receive a bouquet of roses from her escort. The UVM marching band will provide music for the Review.

Awards will be presented to outstanding cadets by Community and University leaders and visiting personnel. These will include both national and local awards provided by governmental, military, patriotic and fraternal organizations.

MEMBERS OF THE CADET BRIGADE march forward to receive awards.

Netmen Upset

By Jeff Aronson

The Cat netmen were upset Monday afternoon at St. Lawrence in one of the most unusual tennis matches ever.

In conditions rivaling the Great Blackout of 1965, the "greatly improved" St. Lawrence team fought back from early deficits to overcome the Cats. Bruce Hanna was the only one to win his set, 10-8. Dick Sachs, Ted Joslin, and Dutch Curtis all watched early leads melt away as they all lost, 10-8. Paul Ryan faced the same dilemma and lost 14-12.

The Cat's were forced, however, to play under absurd conditions. The scheduled outdoor match was forced indoors by rain. The St. Lawrence field house (definitely built as an after thought), which houses the tennis courts and the hockey rink, presented many obstacles to playing tennis. The first was a lighting system that was about as brilliant as dusk. More often than should ever happen, the ball was lost in the darkness.

Then there was the remains of the hockey rink. For some reason, the boards which normally come down with the rest of the hockey rink remained up. This left about two feet between the baseline and these boards. Needless to say, this hampered play, especially that of Paul Ryan.

The fact that there were only two courts available, coupled with the long sets of the early players, meant that only ONE set could be played. This is hardly a way to determine a winner. And then there was the wild and wooly events here on campus which prevented any weekend practice.

A big blow to the Cats was an injury to Laddie Cook. Cook, who has always played with a trick shoulder, finally ran out of luck, and was injured during his set. This being a very painful injury, he will definitely not play against UNH this Thursday, but will hopefully be able to play against Middlebury on Saturday. As a sidelight, the ensuing delay of the injury gave some of the St. Lawrence players some badly-needed second wins. Steve Rosenberg will thus move into the lineup against UNH.

Coach Cheng was critical of the poor conditions, but said that "St. Lawrence has generally improved", and that "all around, this was not a fair test for the team. It would do us good to have them play here under regular conditions."

Looking ahead to UNH Thursday, Ryan will pair with Bruce Hanna on one doubles team, Dick Sachs with Ted Joslin, and Dutch Curtis with Steve Rosenberg. These shifts are caused by Cook's injury. UNH fields a potentially dangerous team as many of them are returning lettermen. They will be a "good test for the team, in a real match." This match will be at 4:00 on Thursday, at the Gutter-son Field House.

Saturday, April 20, is the big one against Middlebury. Hopefully, Laddie Cook will be able to shake off the effects of his injury, and will be near top form. This match, played under proper conditions, should have some of the finest tennis seen here in years. It starts at 1:00, and promises to be a thriller.

Thursday's match against UNH will show the Cats their depth problem is as serious as was predicted at the beginning of the season - Saturday's will show them just how good they are.

Varsity Track Team Loses, But Frosh Win

By Mike Kropsky

Coach Archie Posts varsity and freshman track teams traveled to Brunswick, Maine this past weekend for dual meets against Bowdoin College. While the varsity was taking a sound beating, 72-41, the freshmen were rolling up an impressive 86-23 victory over their counterparts from Bowdoin. It was therefore not at all surprising to find Mr. Post elated over the freshmen's fine showing, but disappointed with the varsity performance.

There were, however, a few bright spots for the varsity. Paul Ardell took two first places in the shot put and discus events. Rich Kabat won the pole vault and came in second in the 40 yard dash. Vermont's only other first place finish came in the high jump with Wes. Cate winning the event. Coach Post also indicated that he was pleased with the performance of Pete Jones in the mile and Will Howard in the two mile run. Both came in second.

In the freshmen meet, UVM picked up a "few" more firsts than did Bowdoin -- thirteen to be exact, and that's not doing too badly considering there were only thirteen events in the meet. Leading the attack was Tom Cook who won both the mile and 880. Also outstanding was Sandy Magid who won the shot put, took a second in the 35 pound event, and a third in the discus.

Both the varsity and freshmen squads will see action this week. At press time, the frosh will have met the Norwich Freshmen in a home meet, and on Wednesday, April 26, they will have a meet with Burlington High School. The varsity are scheduled for a dual meet at home on Saturday, April 22, against Southern Connecticut.

Spring Practice Underway

By Fred Schlapp

After a few delays, spring football practice finally commenced on April and coaches Clifford, Coons, Rorke, and Fox wasted no time in getting down to "brass tacks." The week started out with the candidates doing blocking and tackling drills and as the practices progressed the linemen had the unenviable task of trying to fight their way out of the infamous "Pit."

According to Coach Clifford there have been many surprises especially in the play of some of the freshmen and he noted that some of the returning starters will be hard pressed to keep their positions.

Spring practice is designed primarily to evaluate the material that Coach Clifford has on hand and, with 61 candidates vying for positions this evaluating is not an easy job. Consequently the coaching staff has come up with a scale to measure the players by. Candidates are evaluated on the basis of quickness, speed, skills (running, blocking, etc.) Physical toughness, size, and mental attitude, so with these aspects in mind the coaching staff has had the players running against each other.

Each player has twelve minutes on offense and then takes a like turn on defense. This allows the coaches to decide which position a candidate is best suited for and to determine if he can contribute anything to the team. In the words of Coach Clifford, this is the most contact we've ever had in the first week of a spring practice, but the boys came through it in fine shape and this makes me optimistic about the coming season.

Kitten Nine Downed

By Hugh Brown

The 1967 edition of the Vermont baseball Kittens shapes up to be another real good frosh club, despite a definite attempt by the UVM administration to cripple Catamount sports through lack of financial aid and scholarships.

The squad, under the coaching of John "Fuzzy" Evans, opened their season Monday against Dartmouth. The coach of the Dartmouth team stated that he had one of the better frosh squads he had ever had. He praised his starting pitcher, Chuck Seelbach from Shaker Heights, Ohio, and said that he looked like a definite varsity starter next year.

Seelbach lived up to his coach's praise by pitching five perfect innings before giving up a hit in the seventh on a single by George Kallechey. The Kittens scored in the seventh on a single by Tony DePietro and a double by Brendan Foster.

Dartmouth scored a single run in the second inning and two unearned runs in the top of the seventh to win the game 3-1.

The Kitten showing was impressive considering the fact that it was only their second time outside all year.

Coach Evans started pitcher Dick Farrell, from Windsor, Vermont, who went the distance giving up six hits, one earned run, and struck out five.

Fuzzy is high on both Farrell and pitcher John Cassani. Tom Carr and Jeff Drew look like his other two starters with Chris Anderson, Tim Dardechi, and Bill Laufer in the bull pen.

The starting eight for the Kittens include Tom Sivret at first base, Steve Yanagita at second, Jim Rappoport at third, and Joe Dion at short stop. Either George Kallechey or Ed Arslanian will catch and the outfield is composed of Tony DePietro, Brendan Foster, and Paul Trono.

Coach Evans was satisfied with his boys' showing and expressed optimism. The Kittens next game is home against Middlebury on April 26th.

UPSHOT PRESENTS TWO PLAYS

Two one-act plays - one by a new playwright - opened Thursday night at the Arena Theatre.

The plays are "The Room," by Harold Pinter, and "The Sink" by Edmond M. Stevens. Printer's newest play, called "The Homecoming," is in its fourth month of production on Broadway.

Stevens, who gives his address as Stockbridge, Mass., completed his play in the middle of January.

The Printer play, also one of the first dramatic efforts by that author, was first produced in England in 1958.

The two plays, directed by James MacDonald, speech department instructor, will also be presented Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Another Stevens play, "The Pumpkin Eater" Anthology, will be presented by the University of Vermont drama department's UPSHOT group. That play will be produced along with "A Crack in the Mirror," by Henry P. Albarelli, and "A Strange Arrangement," by Susan H. Noble. Stevens was first produced while working as an actor with the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge. His first play, produced at the playhouse, was called "The Bout."

Tickets for the final three nights of production are available at the Arena Theatre box office.

ANNOUNCEMENT

On Thursday, April 22, at 8 p.m., the UVM Catholic Center will sponsor The Six Singing White Sisters from Africa.

They will sing native African folk songs and sacred music.

Lettermen Honored

The 27th annual Lettermen's Dinner was held last Thursday night at the Ethan Allen Club. Guest speaker at the affair was Hal Goodnough, public relations director for the New York Mets, who delivered an extremely entertaining talk.

The purpose of the dinner is to honor the twelve varsity sports teams at UVM and to give out five special awards to outstanding contributors. The special prizes went to:

BOB CRONIN - Wasson Athletic Prize awarded annually to the member of the senior class who has maintained the highest standard of academic scholarship and athletic attainment. Cronin was the captain of the 1966 baseball team.

RUSSELL BOARDMAN - Russell Sunderland Memorial Trophy awarded annually to the man in the senior class who throughout his college course has best exemplified those qualities of character, leadership and persistence in overcoming obstacles which were outstanding traits in the life of Russell Sunderland.

ALAN HOUGHTON - Athletic Council Managerial Award to the outstanding manager of a varsity sport.

TOM MILLS - Semans Trophy, presented by the local chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity in memory of Henry Semans, '24, and awarded to a senior for outstanding qualities of leadership, loyalty and service to the University, active participation in athletics and winning respect and regard of his fellow students.

DR. HENRY FARMER - Letter in Life Plaque awarded to a former letterman in recognition of his devotion to UVM and his superior accomplishments in life.

Special blanket awards went to Dr. J. Bishop McGill and to Dr. Milton Nadworny who also served as toastmaster at the dinner.

Ugly Contest

Panhellenic Council will sponsor and "Ugly Contest" on April 26th in Lower Billings. The proceeds will go to charity and a scholarship fund. But what is an "Ugly Contest?"

Using make-up and a little imagination, the object is to create the ugliest person on the UVM campus. Each residence hall, sorority, and fraternity can participate.

Procedures follow:

1. Each residence hall, sorority, and fraternity should select one contestant.

2. Pictures of each contestant will be taken. - If the contestant is considered to be too Ugly to be walking around campus, a room will be provided in Billings for putting on make-up.

3. Just the face is photographed.

Voting is carried out by having a penny placed in the appropriate jar, each penny representing one vote.

The winners of the female and male divisions will each receive a year's subscription to MAD magazine.

Pictures of the winners and runners-up with and without make-up will appear in the CYNIC.

SENIOR WEEK PHANTOM WALK

Seniors - are you about to graduate, never having set foot in the world renowned Pringle Herbarium? Did it ever keep you awakes nights thinking of what goes on in Morrill Hall?

To answer these and similar issues is the objective of the Phantom Walk Committee. Further information to follow - uncontrollable curiosity may be vented upon Larry Roth 49792.

UVM History

The Old Mill is the oldest building on the campus and is naturally a center of college activities.

It was used as a barracks during the War of 1812 and was burned to the ground in 1824.

Lafayette laid the cornerstone of restoration the following year, and this is why at Commencement time the seniors always adorn the statue of Lafayette with a cap and gown.

In 1918 when troops were again quartered at UVM, the "Old Mill" was once more damaged by fire, but only a part of the building was destroyed.

The Old Mill Bell in the tower is always rung after every athletic victory by the freshmen.

In front of the "Old Mill" there is a boulder mounted on a granite base. This stone was found in a pot hole near the summit of the Green Mountains. The melting snows of countless years had churned it about for so long that it was worn smooth and shaped to a nearly perfect oval.

Dartmouth tried to get the boulder for its museum, but a friend of the University sent it

Rained Out At Norwich

Cats Open At Home With UMass

THE INSIDER

By STEVE KUNKEN

When a team's strengths become its weaknesses and its weaknesses become emphasized, not too many ball games become emphasized, not too many ball games are going to be won. So went the weekend for UVM as the Huskies of UConn. showed off their strengths and won, 5-0 and 6-4. It was a weekend of disappointment; where the Cats had the opportunity to jump off to a good start by beating the No. 1 contender for the Yankee Conference Championship, we find ourselves two games down in the loss column with only eight league games to go. But I must emphasize down, not out. Connecticut is a team that can be beaten, and Vermont is a team capable of beating good teams. The season hasn't even shed its diapers yet, and the experience gained from these past two games will be invaluable for the rest of the schedule.

Friday afternoon was a beautiful day in the 70's, and it proved to be the only break we got. Facing a good pitcher, 19 Cats were called out on strikes, and no one is going to win games with that. There was an overabundance of swinging at bad pitches and looking at good pitches; only three hits were made, and only one posed a threat. In the second inning, Bruce Lombard got the only solid shot of the day, a triple into the alley between left and center. However, he was called out after failing to touch second base. Brad Stevens then reached first on an error that would have scored Lombard and changed the entire complexion of the ballgame. So went the entire day.

Len Sheflott was hit hard in spots, but pitched well. He was the victim of three throwing errors in the fifth inning that let in three unearned runs. The relief proved to be the only bright spot of the day (after the sun went down) as Charlie Brucato pitched two innings of no-run, one-hit ball and Don Schneider came through again, allowing just one hit in one inning. Our defense was porous and the hitting was atrocious; Connecticut played heads-up baseball, got the big hits and strong pitching, and outplayed Vermont for win No. 1.

Saturday afternoon was cloudy and misty, and the field was very slick. UVM got a big break early when UConn. lefty pitcher Tom Lawton strained his back during warm-up and had to hit the showers prematurely. The Cats took advantage by scoring two runs in the top of the first, and things looked good. However, the roof fell in as the Huskies came right back with four unearned runs in their half of the inning. After that, we were playing catch-up baseball and could never get the big base hit at the right time. Although we got almost four times as many hits as in the previous game, thirteen men died on the basepaths. John McCord lasted only 1 1/3 of an inning before Bruce Bovenizer came on to finish the game. Joe Soldano hit a line drive homerun in the 6th inning for his first collegiate baseball hit. It brought us to within one run of Conn., but that was as close as we got. After the last out in the ninth inning, it began to rain, as if in an attempt to wash out the weekend. Unfortunately, it didn't do the job, and Vermont faces the big challenge of coming back a long way. It's been done before.

The games had bright spots, such as the pitching of Brucato and Schneider and the hitting of Soldano and Rich Aldrich. Dave Lapointe made the defensive play of the second game when he went into short centerfield to take away a hit that would have knocked in two runs. However, it is evident that some shaking up must be done. From here, it looks like Joe Soldano in right field for now. In the infield, this author is moving over to third base as Bruce Lombard moves back to his position of last year, second base. Three or four double plays, essential in any ballgame, were messed up this past weekend, and Coach Lapointe has made the switch in order to utilize Lombard's year of experience. Terry O'Leary remains at first base while John Packard recovers from a spike wound in his ankle. John is out for an undetermined length of time as is Len Sheflott with a back ailment.

This week brings three games: Wednesday at Norwich, and Friday and Saturday games with UMass at Centennial Field. These will be opportunities, hopefully, for Vermont to iron out its difficulties and start playing like an experienced ball club. Needless to say, every game is an important one, and, if the outcome is sometimes unfavorable, it will not be because of anything less than a 100% effort from us.

FRESHMAN TENNIS CANDIDATES

All those interested in trying out for the freshman tennis team should report to the tennis courts in the Gutterson Field House on Monday, April 24 at 4:30. The coach is Mr. Paul Bristol.

JOE SOLDANO scores another of the four runs the Cats managed in their two game set at UConn.

By Hugh Brown

Last weekend the Vermont baseball team traveled to Storrs, Connecticut to open the 1967 season against highly touted Connecticut. The Huskies, favored for a third consecutive Yankee Conference crown and ranked fifteenth nationally, featured a strong hitting attack and two of the better pitchers on the East Coast. The Cats, however, were confident that they had the hustle and material to defeat Connecticut. Unfortunately, the desire was not enough to overcome UConn's fine hitting and overpowering pitcher - Frank Baird.

All Mr. Baird did was to humiliate the Catamount batters by tossing a three hit shutout, while striking out nineteen men. Vermont only threatened to score on Baird twice. In the second inning, Bruce Lombard rapped a ball into left center field for an apparent triple. But Bruce failed to touch second and was called out. In the fourth inning, captain Rich Aldrich singled and Don Fitts walked. But Baird struck out the next two Cats to get out of the inning.

UVM hurler, Len Sheflott, pitched fairly good ball, but his curve ball was hanging. Connecticut scored single runs in the first and second innings and then virtually wrapped up the game in the fifth inning by scoring three runs on a walk, three singles, and three Catamount errors. Sheflott went five innings and gave up five runs, two earned, and struck out two. Charlie Brucato and Don Schneider teamed up to pitch the last three innings of shutout ball.

UConn collected eleven hits, all of them singles. However, they were hitting the ball hard. The final score was Connecticut 5 - Vermont 0.

The following day the Cats made a strong bid for a split with the Huskies. Improved Vermont hitting made it close, but the big hit was still lacking and for UVM, errors contributed to the Catamount's defeat.

Connecticut started pitcher Bruce Drummond in place of ace lefty Tom Lawton, who injured his back in pre-game warmups. Vermont went with John McCord, the Cat's most effective pitcher last season.

UVM drew first blood as they scored two runs in the top of the first inning on singles by Dave Lapointe and Lombard, and two errors.

But the Huskies roared right back in the bottom of the inning as they hit McCord for four runs on two walks, two singles, a double, and an error. John was falling behind on the hitters and then having to come in with the big pitch.

McCord was relieved in the second inning by Bruce Bovenizer, who pitched a good game. Bovenizer gave up solo runs in the third and eighth innings.

Vermont scored again in the fourth inning on a 360 foot home run to center field by right fielder Joe Soldano. The Cats final run came in the sixth inning when Soldano walked, Billy Leete walked, and after both were moved along by an infield out, Bovenizer bunted for a single, driving in Soldano.

Bovenizer ended the game with two hits, as did Lapointe and Aldrich. Bruce also pitched six and two thirds innings, giving up only one earned run.

The Catamounts pounded out a total of eleven base hits, to UConn's nine, but they left thirteen men on base. This cost them the game, 6-4.

I might add that Vermont weather has not helped the UVM ball club any. Since returning from the Spring Tour the Catamounts have only practiced outside twice. The transition to outside ball is not an easy one to make, especially for the batters. This fact is excuse enough for the Vermont lack of sharpness on the UConn diamond.

This Friday and Saturday, April 21st and 22nd, the Cats open their home season against Massachusetts. The Redmen field a strong hitting club that could upset UConn, if their pitching holds up. Last weekend they split with Maine, 5-0 and 0-1.

Len Sheflott will probably miss his turn pitching against UMass due to a pulled back muscle. Another doubtful starter is John Packard. Packard missed the UConn series when he was spiked. The wound required twenty-three stitches. Coach Lapointe has already written Packard off his pitching rotation because of arm trouble. But he is hoping to get John's bat in the games against UMass.

Joe Soldano will probably start in the outfield along with Don Fitts and either Bill Leete or Terry O'Leary, depending on Coach Lapointe's needs as first base.

Second baseman, Steve Kunken, will swap positions with third baser Bruce Lombard in an attempt to get a better double play combination.

The Cats will start Bovenizer in Friday's 4:00 game against UMass and McCord in Saturday's 1:00 contest. Both these games are crucial in Vermont's bid for the Yankee Conference crown.

DAVE LAPOINTE gets in some needed batting practice in one of the three days in which the baseball practiced outside before opening the regular season at Connecticut.

BIG JOE SOLDANO heads for home after clouting a home run against Connecticut last weekend.

Does the UVM Student Have a Voice in Policy?

By Joan Capelle

Where does University policy originate? Students continue to fight what they call Administration policy without knowing where it came from. After a policy is already made, they start to oppose it, or in other words they beat a dead horse. It is about time that we become aware of what we can do and find out whether or not students really can have an effective voice in determining what their university does.

SENATE STANDING COMMITTEES

At the base of the pyramid of decision making are the University Committees. The nine Senate Standing Committees originate policies most directly affecting the students. These are Admissions, Buildings and Grounds, Ceremonies, Curriculum, Policy, Library, Research, Student Excellence, and Student Life. Anyone who is interested may easily find out who serves on these committees by looking on page 23 of the 1967 Bulletin.

I assume that a great percentage of the students are as ignorant of what these committees are as I was; so I will first attempt to enlighten you before I proceed to the main purpose of this article.

The nine committees above are composed of faculty members. Dr. L.M. Jones, Professor of English, who is on the Policy committee, recommends faculty members to the President who then appoints them to the committees. To serve on a committee is understood to be a reasonable part of a faculty member's duties.

The responsibility for the institution rests entirely on the administration and the faculty. With responsibility must come authority.

The actual duties of each committee are not clearly defined. The members are appointed for 5-year terms and appointments are staggered. It appears that the division of work between the committees is more or less understood and passed on to new members.

When some policy or proposal is passed by a committee it then must go through the Faculty Senate, the President, and the Board of Trustees.

STUDENT REPRESENTATION

Should there be student representation on these committees? What are the advantages and disadvantages?

Mr. Jones believes that student representation has never gone through completely because "nobody has pressed the issue." The subject has been raised before and Mr. Jones thinks that "faculty and administration have not been unreceptive" to the idea. He further maintained; "I really believe many committees would not be adverse to students serving on them."

As it now stands, only three out of the nine committees have student representatives on them and probably 90% of the students have no idea who these representatives are.

Last September James Fontanella, S.A. President, asked President Rowell to write a letter and send a copy to each committee to find out how receptive they would be to having student representatives. Three responded in the affirmative and Mr. Fontanella appointed students to fill the posts.

Jack Lindley, a senior in Alpha Gamma Rho, attends the Buildings and Grounds committee meetings. Janice Fucci, '68, is the representative to the Ceremonies committee. Jay Weintraub, '68, and Kathy Dyer, '68, are representatives to the Student Life committee. Dennis Usden has attended a couple of the Library committee meetings.

President Rowell will write again next Fall to those committees that haven't yet been opened.

WHY?

There are many reasons why students could be very useful to the committees and why the committees could be useful to the students. As Dr. Woodruff of the English department said, "students are often aware of certain problems professors aren't." The students-eye view of university life is different and important.

Mr. Jones believes that all the committees would like to hear evidence, offers and ideas from the students. As Mr. Fontanella said, students "couldn't detract negatively and can add positively" to the committee work. It would make students feel they have a little more say, or at least are heard on important issues.

The problem has been dealt with at other colleges. At Adrian College in Michigan the faculty recently voted to give students representation and voting rights on nine of its major committees. They believe the benefits to be gained are "potentially better decisions as the result of additional information during the committee deliberation stage; better communication between faculty and students; and student training in the deliberative, decision-making process."

WHY NOT?

All the people I interviewed believe there should be certain lines drawn. The powerful Policy Committee has the big line drawn under it. One of the important jobs of Policy committee is to make decisions concerning the status of faculty. As Mr. Jones said, the faculty "must be judged by their peers." Also, confidential matters are discussed in Policy, especially in cases of tenure.

Whether or not there should be student representation on the Admissions and Curriculum committees is not as clear cut. Mr. Jones believes "special capabilities and special knowledge are necessary." As far as Admissions goes, he is afraid a student representative might have high "democratic principles"

Faculty Members of the Year Selected by 16 Fraternities

Dr. Perrine of Psych Dept. and Dr. Izzo of Math Dept. Chosen

Dr. Perrine of the Psychology Department and Dr. Izzo of the Math Department were distinguished as Faculty Members of the Year by the Interfraternity Council at its annual banquet with the Alumni-Interfraternity Council held on April 20.

Each month during the current academic year, each of the sixteen fraternities chose a Faculty Member of the Month. Recently each individual fraternity selected a faculty member from these whom they then nominated as their candidate for Faculty Member of the Year. The IFC selected from these nominations Dr. Perrine and Dr. Izzo. Not only has each of these men distinguished themselves in the academic world, but each has taken an active role in various campus activities.

Dr. Perrine, who was recently appointed Associate Professor of Psychology, came to the University in 1961. He received his BA degree at the University of Connecticut and his MA and Ph.D. degrees at Princeton. He is presently faculty advisor to the President's Council on International Living (PCIL), the Students Association's Professor

DR. PERRINE

Evaluation Committee, the IFC, and faculty representative of the Experiment on International Living. He also serves as Chairman of the Student Life Committee, the Ad Hoc Committee on Athletic Affairs and is a member of the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee.

Dr. Izzo, who is presently an Associate Professor of Math and Assistant Dean of Technology, came to UVM in 1956. He received his BA and MA degrees from the University of Illinois and his Ph.D. from Columbia. Dr. Izzo is currently faculty advisor to Staff and Sandal Honorary Society, the Newman Club, and Kake Walk Committee. He presently serves on the Student Life Committee, University Health Service Committee, Orientation Committee and Evening Division Committee.

106 Receive Free Tuition

By Marianne Martin

What is this rumor that all offspring of all employees of the University of Vermont are enjoying tuition free college careers?

Mr. Walker, director of financial aid, clarified UVM's tuition policy for the children of University employees. Faculty children are immediately eligible for free tuition; other employees must work for the University a full year before their children can attend tuition free.

The University offers its personnel this tuition-free policy "strictly as a fringe benefit." Mr. Walker could see little reason to harbor a hostile attitude toward the University policy. He maintains that one should think of the University as an enterprise which must offer some sort of benefit to its employees. Many of those persons presently employed by UVM could secure more lucrative positions outside of the University. Hence, this policy is applicable to both faculty and maintenance alike.

Mr. Walker further maintains that this "fringe benefit" is possible, as in any company, as long as it does not affect "profit." I think it is safe to infer that the policy has not yet endangered the University.

This academic year 106 children of University employees received full tuition. The children of part-time faculty members receive $25 a semester. Ten students received this benefit this year.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The drinking policy WAS NOT PASSED. It must be approved by the Administration before it is official. So hold off!!

INTERVIEW

UVM Alumnus Was Viet Nam Volunteer

By P. D'Agostino

Earlier this week a young man, wandered into the CYNIC office, his name, Donald Luce. It seems that Luce, a UVM graduate in the Class of '57, has been in Viet Nam for the last eight years serving as a horticulturalist and teacher in the International Volunteer Service.

This organization, established in 1957, is the model on which the Peace Corps was formed. Presently, I.V.S. consists of 135 college graduates recruited from many nations. It operates in the fields of agriculture, teaching of English, refugee work, community development, and youth work in South Viet Nam. (The U.S. government full endorses I.V.S. with financial support through A.I.D.).

When asked about the effects of the war on the Vietnamese people with whom he came into contact, Luce said that major upheavals in the entire Vietnamese way of life are occurring as a result of (1) bombings (2) behavior of troops.

Luce said that our bombing is making 20-30% of the South Vietnamese refugees. Even worse, it is forcing an essentially agrarian people to leave their farms and settle near cities. There they must earn their living doing jobs for which they are unprepared and often incapable of doing.

The behavior of our troops there is a subject rarely brought up when the war is discussed but nonetheless, Luce said, one of the things for which Americans are most hated. He said that where quiet city streets used to be there are now long rows of bars and brothels. Off the record too are all the isolated cases of prisoner torturing.

As suggestions for improving the situation there, Luce offered that we ought to stop the bombing altogether, while simultaneously making clear our honest intentions for peace. Then we should begin "pulling back", that is, holding on to the areas which we now control and proceeding very slowly where we advance. Also, we should immediately demand more stringent control over the behavior of the troops.

Complete, immediate withdrawal is considered by Luce to be out of the question because of the tremendous vacuum and resulting upheaval it would invariably create in that nation.

Though the people themselves are fatalistic about the war and though a whole generation (20-25 year olds) have seen nothing but war for their entire lives, there must be some possibility for hope because Don Luce is returning to Viet Nam soon for at least two more years and probably a lot longer.

Psychology Club Sponsors Trip

By J. Berse

Last Wednesday the Psychology Club sponsored a trip to Douglas Hospital in Verdun, Canada. Douglas Hospital is probably one of the most progressive mental health hospitals in the North American continent. They have an active program in Psychiatry and Clinical Psychology and have just opened an educational center for children who have any type of mental disease.

The administration of the hospital, did an excellent job of arranging a very full and enlightening day for us. We were first briefed on the function and history of the hospital. Then we were brought up to date with some of the new concepts in the treatment of certain mental diseases.

Next, there was a tour of the main building which contains the adult patients, followed by lunch and a case discussion. We ended the day in the children's department.

Next year the Psychology Club hopes to send two groups to Douglas Hospital. One group will spend most of the time with the children and the other the adult section. The Psychology Club hopes for another trip during the fall semester. We would be happy to take you along, so watch for the announcement.

CEILIDH SING

Tonight, April 28 at 8 p.m. in Billings North Lounge, Ceilidh Club is presenting a concert.

Featured in American Blue Grass with Daniel Coane (guitar, lead vocal), John Cushman (5-string banjo), and Dave Gruenig (fiddle, tenor vocal).

Also there will be British Folk Song with Terry Comerford.

REMEMBER TONIGHT!

Wednesday, May 3, Ceilidh Club will hold its last informal meeting at Billings. You are all welcome - so come!

NOTICE TO FACULTY

Unfortunately the Waterman Faculty diningroom did not prove successful as a delivery medium for the CYNIC. Because of the short time remaining in the semester, we shall continue to distribute CYNICS as before, and shall try, next fall, to deliver papers to each department.

Bertha Terrill Dinner Held

The Bertha Terrill Home Economics Club held their annual final dinner Thursday at Wright dining hall.

Mrs. Frank Smith, who has been associated with the American Home Economics Association, was the guest speaker and spoke on the place of the college chapter within the state and national associations.

Miss Blair Williams acted as mistress of ceremonies. Ruth Taylor, past president, thanked those who had aided her in the past year and introduced the officers for next year.

The new officers of the Home Ec Club are: Connie Walker, president; Betty Travers, vice-president; Barbara Maynes, recording secretary; Chris Maniatty, corresponding secretary; Alice Renaud, treasurer; Mamie McNall, publicity chairman; Judy Mills, historian.

Betty Travers was given special recognition for her recent election as chairman of national Home Economics College chapters. Mrs. Clark accepted a scholarship for a deserving preschool child from the club.

Expo 67 Opens Tonight

By Eloise Roberts

MONTREAL — Expo 67 is a world show that no one should miss, a sneak preview last Saturday proved.

The nations of the world, both East and West, have assembled an exposition of incredible magnitude that will probably overwhelm even the sophisticated world traveler and will certainly thrill the average visitor.

The architecture at Expo is as varied as the nations represented, but there is a certain sense of unity and cohesion throughout. Visitors can see everything from a centuries-old style Tai temple, complete with wind chimes to ward away evil spirits, to the United States' futuristic universe and the graceful Italian creation, and other buildings to challenge the imagination of even Frank Lloyd Wright.

Theme buildings and the individual nations' contributions clearly illustrate how varied Man and His World, the motif for the Expo, can be.

The exhibits within the buildings offer even greater wonders with nation vying with nation to demonstrate their most advanced scientific achievements and display their most ancient treasures.

Goods may not be offered for sale in the pavilions, but small "boutique" shops around the grounds offer many temptations to thin the pocketbook. And for those worried about exchanging money, there is a bank on the fair grounds.

The best means of transportation to the island is by the metro. Traveling around the grounds themselves may be by foot, monorail or bus.

Cars, it appears, will probably not be the best means of transportation, even to the metro, as gigantic traffic jams will probably prevail most of the time.

It will be impossible to do this exposition in a day, and probably not in a week. The experience may be compared to going around the world with breakfast in Europe, lunch in China and afternoon tea in India (Yes, they do have a "genuine" Indian tea garden). And entertainment overlooking the water will be provided nightly. All this, and far more, promise to make a visit to Expo an experience of a lifetime.

Expo opens tonight and is scheduled to run until mid-October.

The Roving I

Should Pot Be Legalized?

By Larry Sargent

Up until a few years ago, marijuana was smoked almost solely by the motorcycle-leather jacket crowd in the form of "reefers." It generally served as a steppingstone to stronger addictive drugs such as heroin. Today marijuana is considered to be an hallucinatory drug with possible artistic, psychological, and religious mind-expanding values. Should this change in public attitude be followed by corresponding change in the legality of the drug?

CHRIS PARKHURTS: I think there should be some legal controls on the use of marijuana and of LSD because of possible harmful side effects. But the legal penalties for misuse should not be unduly severe, and provisions should be made for psychological experiments by responsible, creative people. I can't see indiscriminate use just for kicks.

DAVE FRANZONI: I believe marijuana should be legalized. After all the side effects are less harmful than alcohol, it is not addicting, and I think it has a pleasant aroma. A pack of "London Pot" would fit in quite nicely with "Sail" and "Dunhill 102" in most pipe stores across the country. Besides the market at UVM is so competitive that only the fraternities have enough ready funds to make a big haul.

JEFF KENT: Yes, because I get very paranoid thinking about the law.

TOM TALBOT: I don't like bananas, and morning glory seeds make me nauseous. Marijuana should therefore be legalized.

Tau Beta Pi Honors Founder

The members of Alpha Chapter of Tau Beta Pi Honorary Fraternity went from the University of Vermont into Proctorsville on Sunday to erect a historical plaque in memory of the founder of Tau Beta Pi, Dr. Edward H. Williams. The day's events consisted of a buffet dinner at Bavarian Castle and then the plaque erection ceremony.

The idea for Tau Beta Pi originated in the early 1880's when Dr. Williams sought to secure for Lehigh a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. He wanted an honorary which would be open to outstanding students in every academic department. He determined that this could not be achieved through Phi Beta Kappa since technical students were excluded from this honorary. He set out to furnish students of the technical schools with a similar honorary. Thus, in 1885, Tau Beta Pi Honorary Fraternity was formed for outstanding students of engineering and mathematics.

Dr. Edward H. Williams was born in Proctorsville, Vermont on September 30, 1849, and died in Woodstock, Vermont on November 2, 1933 at the age of 84 years.

He was educated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. He took the degree of Bachelor of Arts at Yale in 1872, and that of Bachelor of Science in chemistry at Lehigh in 1875, and in Engineering of Mines in 1876. In 1881 he became professor of mining engineering and geology in Lehigh University where he remained until 1902, when he retired from active teaching.

The formation of Tau Beta Pi was one of Dr. Williams' most important accomplishments.

that would influence his ideas, and might not have the knowledge to carefully consider and weigh all the factors involved in admissions policy.

In all cases, the representatives should be qualified students who would take on the responsibility to attend all the meetings.

Mr. Fontanella disagrees with Mr. Jones on the advisability of having a representative on Admissions and Curriculum. He believes that a responsible student could add positively to these committees.

THE VOTE

Last of all is the question of whether a student representative should have a vote on the committee. I don't believe this issue should be dismissed lightly by repeating where the responsibility lies.

The responsibility for UVM officially lies on the administration and faculty, but does this mean that we should dismiss the idea of a student's responsibility to the University? I would hope there are some mature students at UVM who are rational and dependable enough to effectively fill the position of a voting student representative.

When I asked Mr. Jones his view on this issue he said: "personally, I don't feel intensely committed to the view that the student should be denied a vote on the committee on which he serves."

Our primary goal should be to get an ex-officio student representative on eight of the committees. Then the students would have some direct means of expressing their views. However, we should not close our minds to the possibility of the student member also having a vote.

UNDERSTANDING HONORARIES' WAYS

To The Editor:

It is often true, as in any organization, that some members do not continue to represent the ideals of service they were selected to uphold and this may be a source of your criticism. It is also true that there is always a need to accomplish more on a university-wide basis. As to the amount of personal recognition that an honorary member receives, it is actually quite

As a whole, then, the image and campus success of our honorary system rest with the individual. This success, in the campus view, results from selection of those of merit and service of a continuing value. Only if those selected for these societies realize the responsibilities and obligations connected with the honor and opportunity for true service given to them can the system be a successful one.

SABEAN re LISMAN -
Each Student Different

Mr. Lisman:
There is an old East Asian parable about two poets who met on a road one day after many years of separation. The first poet, who had spent many years isolated in some scholarly cloister apart from the world, said to the second poet, "And what have you done these many years since we last met?" The second poet, a man who had spent many years living among the World's many peoples, replied, "I have written but a few short poems of life and people. And what have you done?" The first replied, "In these many years, I have written the greatest epic poem in the history of Greece. Pray, let me read it to you." He brought forth the epic poem from beneath his cloak and read it to the second

ANTISEPTIC

By Howard Savin

Keeping up with today seems to be a most difficult and unrewarding task. Although a few hardy souls still attempt to 'buck the crowd' in a retreat to individuality, their efforts seem almost to be made in vain. With almost clockwork regularity, a semi-annual molting period occurs late each summer and early each spring. Accompanying these phenomena are new (or older) styles of bodily attire, patterns of speech, and a rebuilt politico-philosophical outlook (or attempt). The changes are indeed colorful and refreshing in helping to add renewed vigor to an upcoming academic year, or in recharging student vitality drained weak from a prolonged Vermont winter.

Aside from providing ego uplift and new grounds for face to face and back to back conversation, "keeping with it," as practice or pastime, leaves unanswered questions concerning personal position and progress. With a continued mass re-emergence (the Followers) one step up or down from the past norm, and a religious minority appearance (the Individuals) of either two steps up, down, or diametrically opposed to majority position, it would seem that a supposed social progress, at best, is being made at a relatively slow pace of two steps forward and one step backward. If one were to consider all the time, money, and effort that is continually devoured in the alignment of social posture, a great amount of personal graft, corruption, and dishonesty might be revealed.

Unfortunate, indeed, is the fact that from season to season; continental, mod, hippie, conservative, right, left, free-love, free-speech, anti-war, anti-religion, anti-government, longhair, short hair, turned-on or turned-off valuable time is forever lost from pursuit of self-knowledge and preparation for an outside world demanding of moral, ethical, and economic stability. Though external disguises appear from time to time, an internal, and somewhat overlooked, core of realities seems to remain unchanged.

Choir Pop Concert

The UVM Choir, under the direction of Mr. Weinrich, presents their annual Pop Concert at Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday, April 30 at 8:30 p.m.

The program will include songs from Broadway shows such as "Hello Dolly" and "Oklahoma." It is free and open to the public.

McCune's R.S.V.P.

Dear Lyman,

The invitation to your inaugural was forwarded to us here in Heidelberg. I am hastening to write to send you my best wishes as you are formally inducted into office.

My impressions of universities as I have been visiting them during the course of the research project on which I am engaged are tremendously varied. There is, however, one common character: the better the university the more freedom and responsibility which its faculty and students have.

I hope that under your presidency the University of Vermont will continue as it has in the past its traditions of freedom and responsibility. To use a geographic illustration: once erosion of these traditions begins, they can be washed away very quickly. In some countries it is the state which is the agent of erosion; I trust that this will never be the case in Vermont.

We are leaving this morning for a ten day trip by motor car visiting universities and cathedrals in southern Germany, Czechoslovakia and Austria. We then go down the Rhine by boat and from Amsterdam to Paris by rail with stops along the way. Europe is an interesting contrast with the Asian countries I have been studying.

I will not be back in the United States in time to attend your inaugural, but I do hope that it will be a very pleasant and stimulating weekend.

Sincerely yours,

Shannon McCune

Letters to the Editors Cont'd

poet who listened attentively. After many tedious hours, when the first poet finished, he asked, "And what do you think of it?" In kindness, the second poet replied, "It is truly great, and in it, your name will be glorified in the ages." The first poet then asked, "And what have you written of late?" The second poet repeated his few brief poems in but a few moments. The first poet responded, "Eh, not bad." And they parted.

And now, two thousand years later, the first poet's epic poem has passed down in the remote shelves of some University libraries and in a few scattered cloisters of scholars, while the second poet's simple verses are spoken every day from the hearts of many peoples and in many tongues.

So you, as the first poet, are guilty in setting yourself apart and assuming that man can be defined, for you, perhaps unknowingly, have defined the role and responsibility of each student at the University. You will not admit that each student's role and responsibility are unique and different from your own. Thus you tell them what they are and what they should be, as if they do not already know better than yourself. And so, as the first poet, you will have a following of those few who agree with you. And it will set you apart from the majority of those among whom you should perhaps be living, to learn who and what they are. For then, you might perhaps become more like the second poet who let others find themselves and meaning in his verse. In his simple verse was the essence of man - that each is an individual with a unique responsibility and role. Thus it is the obligation of the University to function as the simple verse of the second poet - to let each student fulfill his own unique role and responsibility, not to shape itself to define the student, or restrict itself to a portion of the students and cut off the others, as you would have it do, failing to realize that the University functions for many and all kinds of students, not just the few like yourself.

Let your fallacious ad hominem remarks and idle palaver (which is beneath the poorest of debate) be silent until you have lived among the others and have come to know some of the simple truths the second poet came to know by his participation, involvement, and concern for men outside the ivory tower. To participate, to become involved, to show concern, is much more than to build an ivory tower. It is also to build shacks as the wise men to live in.

There is little direct comment concerning your letter of April 21, 1967, for a simple and obvious reason. It is not possible to find any better demonstration or proof of the assertions stated in my letter of April 14, 1967, than your own response as it stands. Thank you for your substantial support.

This humble person sympathizes with the extreme feelings of inferiority and inadequacy you express, and would prescribe serious study of English grammar, (since you demonstrate a lack of familiarity with some of its fine points, and yet base comments upon its fine points), reading comprehension, so that you can understand what you read before you comment upon it, (you have a definite problem here), and vocabulary, to facilitate your study of the later two subjects, or at least to learn the definitions of apathy, participation, involvement, and concern. Study of these will help you overcome your difficulties. It is also good to realize that questions should be answered, not avoided.

VIET NAM COMMITMENT QUESTIONED

To The Editor:

Mr. Spinner has evoked in his letter the horror of the Vietnam war. It is terrifying that our sensitivity to human suffering needs such stimulus.

The United States claims, vaguely, but vehemently, to be fighting for Freedom in Vietnam. It may make sense to defend one's own freedom, but surely it cannot make sense for Americans to fight for the freedom of a people who neither appreciate nor understand the term in its Western sense. Surely no-one who has seen photographs of Vietnamese peasants can pretend that they understand what the United States claims to be doing for them. The vast majority of the South Vietnamese are profoundly sick of war, and would willingly live under any government that brought peace. The lack of active co-operation received from Vietnamese civilians by the US military attests to this.

The war in Vietnam is alleged to be an ideological conflict. The Communists believe the Vietnamese who grow rice and who work in factories should be labelled Communists. The Americans believe they should not. It is not possible to state American aims more precisely, for United States' intentions are hardly clear. Can one call "anti-communism" an ideal? It is as vague as the now derided term "un-American."

No American interest is threatened even if, as is highly likely, Communist government becomes universal in S.E. Asia. The North Vietnamese are not infiltrating California. One doubts if the Viet Cong have their eyes on Hawaii. On the other hand, if America genuinely feels that she must combat Communism abroad, why did she not send in troops to supervise the recent French election?

The gallantry of United States' soldiers is not in question, but is it necessary for them to be fighting at all? If the United States has failed to win Southeast Asia with the most luxurious lures Western civilization can offer then surely she should realize that her attempt to impose an American ideology on the Vietnamese, Cambodians and Malaysians is doomed to fail. Or has she not yet learned the lesson European governments had to learn in Africa and Asia, that the interference of supposedly superior powers is not always welcomed - whole heartedly by under-developed, non-Western countries? If US democracy is not an instant success as an export has America the right to impose it by force?

If arguments such as these, or those of Mr. Spinner, have no influence perhaps we can look for an end to the war only when American deaths - or "allied casualties," as they are called - reach a level intolerable at home, or when Vietnam has no longer a population to defend against an alien political creed.

By M. Minsky

Few intelligent people and many mis-informed people still persist in their belief that communism is an international conspiracy responsible for all sorts of horrid things - Civil Rights, protest, the exercising of constitutional rights as well as all sorts of dreadful rebellions and assassinations in various less developed nations. Fortunately, few people in the administration believe this although they seem to act as if they do. Dean Rusk in a recent interview declared that he believed the recent anti-war demonstration in New York was supported by "the world communist apparatus" but when challenged by a newsman, confessed it was only his "personal" opinion. A more sophisticated word is now used to describe our policy - "containment". The explanation has been given that we are in Viet Nam to prevent Chinese expansion in that area. In other words we would rather have part of Viet Nam caressed by the tentacles of capitalism rather than kissed by the suckers of Chinese communism.

Our policy to secure an independent Viet Nam is a complete moral and political failure. We have forced the N.L.F. to rely more and more upon the North Vietnamese. Our support of the fascist Diem has brought us to war against a revolutionary group which in a manifesto issued in February of 1961 called for the establishment of a "largely liberal and democratic regime," a program to "implement agrarian reform with the aim of providing land to the tillers," and the "peaceful reunification on the basis of negotiations." It is easy to say this is mere communist propaganda. But one should not forget that this is what thousands of individuals - members of the Viet Cong - are fighting for and having fought so courageously for so long, are not likely to give up these aspirations to politicians in the North who have not been directly involved in the combat. And according to Bernard Fall "even the most inflated American official statistics concede that at the end of 1965, North Vietnamese components of the Viet Cong amount to less than 10% of the total enemy force, and that as of March, 1966 the Viet Cong was still recruiting 3,500 men a month inside South Viet Nam."

The bombings of North Viet Nam have, according to some people, forced Ho to become more closely allied to the Chinese. There are now some 30,000 Chinese workers helping the people of North Viet Nam repair the damage caused by American bombings. One should not forget that these people are experiencing the destruction of industries they themselves have built, nor should it be forgotten that the mills and power plants which this nation admits to bombing contain workers. Harrison Salisbury's reports have comfortably been forgotten. Now American troops are massing in the border of North Viet Nam and according to the CBC the government of North Viet Nam expects an American invasion of the North by the end of the summer; the people of that nation are being taught various techniques of sabotage and terror to resist the invader. An American invasion of the North would be an act as callous as the German crossing into Poland in 1939 or the Soviet invasion of Hungary in 1956.

As the war continues America seems to be following her heroic destiny of racism. We wiped out the Indians and enslaved the Negro. Even today, most of white America has no way to understand or to deal with the black minority in a meaningful and humane way. Most of our migrant workers are Mexican. The atomic bomb was dropped on the Japanese. Communist rebels in Greece and Turkey did not provoke a response as vicious as oriental rebels in Viet Nam. The only minority groups this country has been able to accept more or less fully are white minorities.

The flaccid Mr. White sits in meditation. His mouth is full. He reads the paper - Anti-War March peaceful - and mutters his rate. And the bombs fall on Viet Nam. Day and night the bombs and napalm fall on Viet Nam. The Viet Cong "butchers" have killed tens of thousands; Our Boys have killed hundreds of thousands - all for peace. One can not hate these Americans; they too are victims of an obstinate and unfortunate policy which has wasted enough money to wipe out poverty in this nation and in Viet Nam. Dripping up to their elbows in blood the true murderers give us their pious dull words. Oh, they are sincere. They want peace. But the bombs and the napalm fall on Viet Nam and somehow every night everyone of us can go to bed secure that we are being protected and fed by the bombs which fall on Viet Nam. I can remain silent no longer: the best interests of the people of Viet Nam will best be served by an immediate withdrawal of our troops. One cannot remain a good German forever. The best Germans were, one might recall, traitors.

I would like to apologize for erroneously identifying the city of Bien Hoa as having been subjected to bombings. Bien Hoa is a city in the south near an American airbase. I meant to refer to the city of Namdinh, which is in the northern sector. A city without any major installations, it has been bombed a number of times by American bombers causing many civilian casualties. Incidentally, the International Control Commission states 160,000 civilians were killed in the period between 1961-1964. Needless to say many, many more have been killed by the American escalation against the people of Viet Nam.

Is the UVM Student Intellectually Pathetic?

By Cary Ross Schaye

When I originally sat down to write on Dr. Guenther Lewy's recent lecture on the Germany of today, I was faced with two different avenues of approach. One, the straight reportage - common to The CYNIC, what the good professor said, basically an outline of his talk stretched into the prosaic medium, with a two or three sentence evaluation tagged on at the end.

My second avenue was of a more journalistic vein, a comment on Dr. Lewy's talk, its relevance, historical objectivity and validity, etc. This is the level I believe a student newspaper should try to attain, more a symposium to air student ideas and critiques than a summary of the week's happenings.

I quickly ruled out the first method of writing, that of straight reporting, for apparently if the student body had been interested in Dr. Lewy's lecture they would have attended his talk - the turnout was the usual twenty or twenty-five students faithful to most lectures. I am aware that there were several who could not attend, but out of a student body of over four thousand - what more need be said?

The second approach, that of a criticism or comment on the talk, would be worthless for those who chose not to attend the lecture - without the fundamental ideas delineated by Dr. Lewy a commentary would be meaningless, and probably attract less intellectual curiosity, if that is possible.

I'm not going to go on and harangue the student body about its obvious intellectual apathy; besides, students at UVM have a distinct aversion to being termed apathetic. Perhaps a more appropriate term would be intellectually PATHETIC.

Colburn Exhibit Opens

The Fleming Museum is arranging an exhibition of portraits by Francis Colburn. It opens May 5 and will continue through commencement to May 25.

Professor Colburn, who headed the Art Department until his retirement last fall, is best known for his Vermont landscape, but his portraits deal with things equally familiar to him. Most of them are of people he knew well and were commissioned by friends. Many of the sitters are University colleagues, some of whom the students will readily recognize. The museum extends an invitation to all former students in Professor Colburn's drawing and painting classes to come to the opening reception for him, Friday evening, May 5, from 8 to 10 in the main gallery.

Win a free trip home to get money!

(Or enough Sprite to throw a loud party every night for a semester.)

Don't write home to get money. Just write a college newspaper ad for Sprite. You may win a free trip home to ask for the money in person.

What should your ad say? How tart and tingling Sprite is. And how it roars! Fizzes! Bubbles! Gushes! And tastes! (And how!) Not too sweet. Not too innocent.

PRIZES

1st PRIZE $500 IN TRAVELERS CHECKS or 5,000 BOTTLES OF SPRITE

100 PRIZES OF $25 IN DINES

...so if you can't go home in person, you can use the telephone to make your point.

RULES

Write your ad the way you think would interest college newspaper readers.

Give it a contemporary, sophisticated flavor. (A few swigs of Sprite will give you the idea --though you don't have to buy anything to enter.) Neatness counts a little. Cleverness counts a lot.

Your ad can be any length--if it fits this space. (But remember you're not writing a term paper.)

Send each ad you submit to Ads for Sprite, P.O. Box 55, New York, New York 10046.

All entries become the property of The Coca-Cola Company. None will be returned. Judges' decision final. Entries must be received by May 2, 1967. Be sure to include name and address. Winners will be notified by May 24, 1967.

Passover Explained

By Mike Kropsky

Last Monday evening Jews all over the world began celebrating the festival of Passover. The holiday, which lasts for eight days, commemorates the liberation of the Jewish people from slavery in Egypt over 3,000 years ago.

The term "passover" is derived from the words "passed over," because God is said to have passed over the homes of the Israelites when he smote the first-born of the Egyptians with the last of the ten plagues. The story of that liberation is retold every year on Passover as a reminder to continually re-examine the meaning of freedom, and to try and help those who are still in bondage.

Aside from its historical aspects with its theme of liberty, Passover also commemorates the harvesting of spring crops. In the time of the Temple in Jerusalem, it was customary for Jewish farmers to collect the first fruits of the season and to bring them to the Temple as an offering to God on Passover. Thus Passover signifies both the theme of the "rebirth" of the crops from the land and the "re-birth" of a people from slavery — and as long as men will continue to enslave other men, and as long as men will cherish liberty, its relevance and meaning will endure.

Two One-Act Plays Rated Good and Bad

By K. Klonsky

The UVM Speech and Drama Department presented two one act plays in Arena Theatre last weekend. "The Sink" is a new work by an up and coming young playwright, Edmond M. Stevens, and "The Room," is by an established avant garde writer, Harold Pinter. Both plays were ably directed by James MacDonald with set decorations by Bill Schenk.

"The Sink" was presented first and it starred Kathleen O'Halloran as the mother, Jeff Kent as the father, and Steve Carlson as the boy. Although Stevens would probably prefer a much broader interpretation of his play, one is forced to approach the work as a portrayal of a vicious mother who destroys her husband and cripples her son as a male. The reason for this interpretation is that the mother is the only fully-developed character of the three. Kent, as an impotent, lower-class drunk and Carlson, as a romantic but belabored thirteen year old, performed admirably, but there was not enough in the lines to bring them to the surface.

The fact that the father deluded his son and to some degree, himself into believing that he was a war hero when he was nothing more than a truck driver seemed somewhat hackneyed and contrived. But the mother, approaching menopause, loving and hating her son at the same time, was clear and dominating if not grotesque, character. Miss O'Halloran was impressive in spewing raw filth and vulgarity about the stage. As the parents finally murder each other and the boy lets the grimy dishwater down the drain one has the distinct feeling that the playwright has worked out some deep emotional problems in himself. "The Sink" is therefore powerful but limited in value to the audience.

"The Room" is a brilliantly constructed and totally fascinating play. The cast of Elizabeth Clark as Rose, Mike Mermelstein as Bert, Joan Dennis as (continued on page eight)

ROTC Brigade To Show True Colors In Review

The ROTC Cadet Brigade will put its best foot forward in its final show of excellence for the year. At 4:30 PM at Centennial Field, the 99th Annual Military Review steps off before the watchful eyes of such dignitaries as Lieutenant Governor John Daley, Major General Reginald Cram, State Adjutant General, Deah George Kidder, Official UVM Representative, Colonel D. R. Longacre, UVM PMS and Colonel Frederic Palmblad, PMS at Northeastern University.

During the Review ceremonies, outstanding cadets will be honored with numerous awards and medals presented by attending dignitaries. Miss Judy Bamman, 1967 Military Ball Queen and her Court, the Misses Barbara Schmitt, Joyce Westcott, Betty Purda, and Nancy Bathgate, will also participate in the ceremonies. The Pershing Rifles sponsor, Miss Diane Monti, will represent that unit. As the Honorary Brigade Commander, Miss Bamman will present the colors to the Cadet Color Guard. She will also receive a bouquet of roses from her counterpart, Cadet Brigade Commander Douglas Orvis.

Faculty, students and the Community are invited to attend this display of military pageantry. In the event of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Thomas Wheel Cadet of Month

Cadet Thomas B. Wheel, a sophomore from Burlington and a member of Pershing Rifles, was awarded the Cadet of the Month Ribbon and Certificate for April by Colonel D.R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science, in ceremonies held Thursday night at the Military Science Building. Cadet Wheel, a recent ROTC Scholarship winner, was chosen from among five finalists of the 250 basic course cadets. He distinguished himself before a Review Board answering questions pertaining to classroom work, current events, and military affairs. He will, in addition, receive a number of prizes from participating downtown merchants.

MUSEUM SERIES ENDS

The last program of the Museum film series, Wednesday, May 3, features ten award-winning films from the National Student Film Festival sponsored by the graduate student association of U.C.L.A. The short films — fiction, documentary, animated and experimental types — were made by students in various university film department. There are seven from U.C.L.A., and one each from Wisconsin, University of Southern California, and the London School of Film Technique. The films have been described as anti-establishment, anti-conformity in spirit and technically first rate. Also on the program is "Circles," a short film made by students in basic design in the UVM Art Department. The films will be shown in Voiey Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is by museum membership. Memberships taken now are good for next year.

CORPORATION PRESIDENT TO SPEAK

On Friday, April 28th, the Society for the Advancement of Management and the Economics and Business Administration Honor Society will hold their Annual Banquet at the Sheraton Motor Inn (Cupola).

The guest speaker, Mr. Carl W. Stursburg, President of the Squibb Division of Olin Mathieson, will speak on, "Management and Marketing Problems, and Opportunities in A Diversified Corporation." Mr. Stursburg is also a member of Board of Directors, and a Corporate Vice President of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation.

The program will start at 7:00 p.m. with dinner served at 8:00 p.m. Interested persons are welcome to attend.

HILLEL ELECTS OFFICERS

The Hillel Foundation at the University of Vermont recently elected new officers for the coming year. Elected president was Steve Parnes '69. Steve comes from Baldwin, N.Y. Joel Weiner, a sophomore from Brockton, Mass., was elected Vice President. Other officers elected were as follows: Recording Secretary, Su Ostrand; Corresponding Secretary, Roberta Traub; and Treasurer, Barry Lehman.

PHILOSOPHY CLUB SPONSORS SPEAKER

The John Dewey Philosophy Club will sponsor a lecture Wednesday, May 3, in Waterman Lower Lounge, at 7:30. Prof. Angus Fletcher of Columbia University English Dept. will speak on "Allegory, Prophecy, and the Imagination." Everyone is welcome.

UPSHOT Introduces New Plays

On Sunday night, come to the Arena Theater — you'll be glad you did. For at 8:30, to a free public, UPSHOT will present three, new startling one-act plays which will crown this season's successful experimental productions.

"IGANNO," by Ed Stevens (author of the current success "THE SINK") will be directed by Peter Covette, president of The University Players. His cast includes Jim Collins and Forest Bowman, two of the finest male performers at UVM.

"A CRACK IN THE MIRROR," by H. Alberelli, is a brilliantly subdued yet subtle play and will be directed by Ed Stevens.

"A STRANGE ARRANGEMENT," has been adapted for the stage by Susan Noble from her own television script and will be directed by Linda Simet — whose exciting talents were demonstrated in her delicate handling of Jean Paul Sartre's play: "NO EXIT," last fall. She has an able cast including Betty Smith — this will be a play to see!

There is a possibility that some experimental films will be shown, but this cannot be confirmed at this date.

Mrs. Sands, Mike McNight as Mr. Sands, David Anderson as Mr. Kidd, and Fred Schlapp as Riley came across beautifully, giving a comprehending and highly skillful performance.

At first, the play seems headed for the sometimes obscure fields of absurdity. The characters are all speaking at each other; communication is non-existent. Rose is literally a prisoner in her apartment, her "room," but all the characters including Rose are prisoners of the self, oblivious to the world outside them.

Through Pinter's amazing subtlety, the fact that there is a man in the dark of the basement is revealed to the audience. Rose seemed to recognize this man when he entered the house earlier. Through all the clumsy clutter of conversation this is the one fact that stays with the listener and seems to make Rose suffer a terrible, nameless anxiety. When her husband leaves that evening, the blind man, Riley, finally makes his appearance, beckoning Rose to leave the room with him. She breaks through her isolation and reaches out to touch him, the first contact of any kind in the play, a touch that almost reverberates throughout the theatre. But just then her husband Bert returns, the man who had not said a word up until this point, the man who had been a sounding board for his wife while he sat behind a comic book. Bert proceeds to kill Riley and in so doing thrusts his wife back in painful isolation, back into the room, back into herself. "I am blind! I am blind!" she cries; the clam shell has snapped for the last time.

Despite its flaws, the Steven's play sustained interest because of its alive and snapping dialogue. The Pinter play was a treat in theatrical excellence and competent acting.

FEDERAL ENTRANCE EXAMS

The Civil Commissioner announces that all students who are interested in working for a Government Agency must take the Federal Service Entrance Examination (FSEE) on June 17, 1967. Applications must be received by May 17, 1967, and are available in the Placement Office, 36 Waterman. This is the last time this year.

Netmen Bounce Back

By Jeff Aronson

Bouncing back after their freak loss to St. Lawrence, the Cats rolled over UNH on Thursday, April 20, and then went on to nip Middlebury on Saturday, 5-4.

Showing UNH why they were Yan Con champs last year, the Cats too immediate control of the match. Paul Ryan made quick work of UNH's best, Chip Siedenberg, 6-1, 6-1. Laddie Cook beat sophomore Dick Fournier, 6-1, 6-3, despite a shoulder that was still sore and which prevented him from taking any of his favorite and effective overhand shots. Bruce Hanna bested junior Bill Rothwell, 6-4, 9-7. Dick Sachs played a beautiful match beating Bob Heaton, 6-1, 6-4. Ted Joslyn faced Paul Lorenza, who had an erratic, but blazing serve. Proving that there is more to tennis than just serves, Ted won 6-2, 6-4. Dutch Curtis gave an instant replay of the Boston Marathon as he finally outran and bested junior Sandy Spalding, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

This domination of the match continued in the doubles play. Ryan and Cook met Rothwell and Sawyer, and demolished them, 6-1, 6-0. At the same time, Sachs and Hanna teamed up to overpower Heaton and Fournier, 6-2, 6-4. Bruce was especially effective at the nets. Steve Rosenberg made his debut as he teamed with Dutch Curtis to beat Bill Meehan and Siedenberg, 6-1, 6-2.

It was a great day for the Cats as they really showed the form which carried them on to last year's 8-1 record. Laddie Cook showed that he was ready for Middlebury, despite the fact I predicted that he would not be able to play. Paul Ryan found the mark and completely overpowered his opponent. Bruce Hanna continued his winning ways, playing heads-up ball with a lot of hustle. Dick Sachs controlled his match with his brilliant, long, ground strokes. Ted Joslyn faced a fantastic serve, but overcame it and quickly put Lorenza away. Dutch Curtis played what seemed to be a million sets, but kept up the pressure, winning his singles, and combining with Rosenberg to take their doubles. It was a great team effort, and a tribute to Coach Cheng, who must have done something right to get the Cats on track.

The big one was Saturday against Middlebury. The matches were fast and hard fought, but the Cats prevailed, 5-4.

Middlebury's arrival was marred by a collision with a truck on their trip up. Their number 4 and 5 men were hurt (Stu Dunn and Terry Plum), while number 4, John Kirby, made it safely but with a sore shoulder.

Things started ominously enough for the Cats as Paul Ryan lost to John Mallouk, Middlebury's junior Co-Captain and local star. Ryan had beaten him once, and almost won this one. However, he was erratic, and Mallouk capitalized on each error. Paul lost 4-6, 4-6. Laddie Cook played sophomore Bill Levin, and bested him 7-5, 7-5. Laddie had apparently shaken off all the effects of his injury during the first match, but ran into trouble during his second, and almost lost. Bruce Hanna had one of those days as he lost to Co-Captain Jeff Riotte, 6-2, 6-2. Riotte played well, but Bruce played worse - and that was the game. Dutch Curtis took junior Sandy Spalding 6-4, 6-2, deciding to end this set quicker than in the past. Ted Joslyn quickly took Dave Brautigam 6-2, 6-2, and Dick Sachs made even quicker work of junior Conran Ambrette, 6-0, 6-0. Ted and Dick controlled their games all the way. It was obvious that the loss of the two men in the accident gave middlebury little depth.

The doubles matches were more precarious. Ryan and Cook paired against Mallouk and Riotte in the most exciting match of the day. The first one went quickly to the Cats 6-2. The second match looked like a Vermont win, but Mallouk fought back and forced the match up to 9-7 before the Cats won. Hanna and Sachs were not as lucky against Levin and Kirby as they lost 4-6, 4-6.

Bruce and Dick just couldn't put together the necessary streak to take the lead. Curtis and Rosenberg also lost to Spalding and Brautigam 6-4, 3-6, 0-6. But the singles matches made up for the doubles losses as Vermont won 5-4.

The Cats record is now 2-1, and they look like they are on their way to another great season. The next matches are against Rhode Island on the 29th, and at Middlebury on May 1. If Cook can stay healthy, and everyone continues their fine play, this "spring" could see a great season.

starting lineup is unlikely. This does not say that this year's frosh club was devoid of talent, but it is indicative of the strength of the Catamount varsity.

Two new players who have the best chance of cracking the starting lineup are Pat O'Reilly a rock-ribbed two hundred and fifteen pounder who can play both guard and linebacker and Jim Sedar a defensive back with tremendous speed and catlike reactions.

Ed Faye and Bucky Doria have performed well at the fullback slot and Jimmy Culhane, who has been injured, may have a hard time keeping his starting role.

Harry Canning and Tom Daigneault have impressed running from their halfback positions as has Gene Monahan who will probably be Pete Clifford's back-up man at the flanker spot. In addition to being a strong runner Daigneault is a fine punter and seems to have the inside track on that position.

One of the most pleasant surprises of the spring season, however, is the play of quarterback Pete Peterson. Peterson didn't play freshman ball and was virtually unknown until this spring.

The line has Di Rocco vying for both the center and middle guard

Cats Face Two State Foes

THE INSIDER

By STEPHEN KUNKEN

Salvation for the University of Vermont did not come in the form of the University of Mass. this past weekend as the Cats dropped their second 2-day series, 4-3 and 10-3. The Conference outlook now is bleak with UVM all but eliminated from competition for first place honors. Shackled to a 0-4 record with only 6 league games remaining, Vermont is trying desperately for that first big win which, hopefully, will break the ice and put us back on our feet. But, this is all future; the Redmen from Mass. added a very unsuccessful chapter to our past.

Friday afternoon brought as a companion an intermittent rain that did not cancel the game only because it was being played in Burlington. With Len Sheflott starting his second Conference game, UVM quickly picked up 3 runs against UMass. ace lefty, John Canty, who, the week before, pitched a shutout against Maine while striking out 20. It appeared that the breaks might finally be coming our way when Dave Lapointe completed our first double play of the regular season to get out of a bad situation. However, the Redmen came back with strong hitting and a tightened defense. By the 5th inning, the score was tied at 3, and with Mr. Canty unceremoniously shutting the door in our face, UMass. put together a triple and a single to provide the margin of victory in the 6th inning. Bruce Bovenizer again pitched 3 effective innings in relief, and the defense made only one inconsequential error. The weakness again showed up as hitting, with the Cats collecting only 4, none after the 3rd inning.

Saturday afternoon's game remained such, only until the 7th inning, when UMass. came up with 7 runs that put out of reach a contest that was almost within our grasp. Trading runs in the 2nd and 3rd frames, UVM picked up one that broke the tie in the 5th on a single, a perfectly executed hit-and-run by Rick Aldrich, and a run-scoring single by John Packard. With John McCord having only minor difficulty through the first six innings, Vermont had a chance to pull out a big one with three innings of tight ball. However, McCord never got out No. 3 in the 7th before Mass. unloaded for four runs. Don Schneider, with ten strong innings of relief since the beginning of the season, replaced McCord, but let up a 3-run home before ending the inning.

The Cats got eight hits, with Joe Soldano getting three and Dave Lapointe two, but we couldn't put them together enough times. The weekend ended with UMass. only a half game in back of UConn. and UVM struggling along with its worst start in several years.

There is no one weakness that can be pointed to as the key to our non-success because several factors play a part in any defeat. However, it is evident that our pitching, rated before the season as our strongest asset, has not yet found the groove; we have been outscored, 25-10, in the first four games. When it does, conceivably this Monday against Norwich, the victories are going to start becoming familiar again.

Something that is a very real part of the success of any team is the ability to practice together as a working unit, coming to know exactly what the talents of your teammates are. With weather that offers us little opportunity of working outside, the Cage becomes a very poor substitute. It is necessary to get down timing on double plays, pickoff plays, and various game situations. Outfielders are given no chance to field fly balls or perfect relay throws. Batters must make a complete adjustment when outside according to background and wind conditions. This is a problem with only one solution - good weather - and in the state of Vermont, that is a gross uncertainty. I mention this only to point out that we are trying our best to work with unfavorable conditions, and the results so far have not been satisfying.

At the time of the release of this article, games with Norwich and New Hampshire (2) on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday will have been completed. Saturday brings Middlebury to Centennial Field for an afternoon game. With only one-quarter of the schedule gone, this week could prove to be a pivotal one. Brad Stevens, Terry O'Leary, Don Fitts, and Joe Soldano are being moved around in the outfield, and a tightened infield with the return of John Packard to first will give Vermont a foundation from which to work. As always, hitting and pitching are the keys. Hopefully, we'll start getting the right combination before the week is out.

MITCHELL

Bob Mitchell, UVM's Little All-America Halfback, received another important honor last weekend when he was named Vermont Athlete of the Year at the Second Annual Vermont Sports-casters and Sportswriters banquet. Mitchell succeeds Olympic ski star Billy Kidd as the recipient of the award.

Among the other nominees, who were named monthly through out the past year, were 1966 Catamount baseball captain Bob Cronin and Dick Farrell of Windsor High, currently a pitcher for Fuzzy Evans' Kitten baseball team.

Massachusetts came, they saw, and they conquered. And when the Redmen left this fair state, Vermont's baseball team found itself in the Yankee Conference cellar and virtually eliminated from the YC race.

Vermont played a good game Friday, April 21st. The Cats threw Len Sheflott against John Canty, a UMass lefty who had struck out twenty Maine batters the week before. Once again, Vermont weather was true to form as it began to rain and then stopped each time the Cats came to bat in the first three innings.

The Redmen scored in the top of the first frame on a two out triple to left and a run producing single. Vermont came right back in the bottom of the first. With two outs Steve Kunken got a broken bat single and Rick Aldrich reached on a two base error.

John Packard, starting his first regular season game of 1967, stroked a clean single to right scoring Kunken and Aldrich. The Cats added a run to their lead in the third inning when Dave Lapointe singled over short, stole second base. Kunken then singled to right and Lapointe scored from second when the right fielder bobbled the ball. The Catamounts then loaded the bases with no outs, but Canty bore down and got out of the inning.

UMass tied the game in the fourth inning when Sheflott walked two batters and then gave up a long double which scored the two base runners. The Redmen opened the fifth inning with a triple to left-centerfield, followed by a single which drove in the winning run.

BRUCE BOVENIZER has emerged as the ace of the Catamount pitching staff.

Canty pitched stronger ball after he gained the lead, and ended the game with a four hitter and twelve strikeouts. Bruce Bovenizer replaced Sheflott on the mound in the seventh inning and pitched one hit, shut out ball. UMass won 4-3. It was a tough loss, but the worst was yet to come.

Included being named Yankee Conference Player of the Year by a Vermont Sunday News poll of the conference coaches All-New England major college first team by both UPI and AP, and the Mobil Oil permanent trophy as the Outstanding Player in the State of Vermont.

Aside from these honors, the Bridgport, Vt., native became the first UVM player ever to attain national status when he was named to the second team Little All-American.

According to the sports editor of the Vt. Sunday News, John Cunavellis, "The World Champion Packers say 'Bobby Mitchell of the University of Vermont is 'out type of back... he's the type of our back we're always interested in... We're very impressed with his record, and we're impressed by the type of people - our New England scouts, Vic Fusia (UMass coach) and the JOE SOLDANO scores for UVM.

Saturday, the Cats met the Redmen in the second game of the two game series. From my vantage point in the stand, the Vermonters were not lacking in spirit or hustle, despite their loss of the previous day.

John McCord started for the Catamounts and looked impressive through the first six frames. UMass scored solo runs in the second and third innings. Vermont scored one run in the second when Joe Soldano singled, moved to second on an error and came home on a single to right by Bruce Lombard. They knotted the score at two all in the third when Steve Kunken and Rick Aldrich walked. Kunken was picked off second, but Soldano singled, and Aldrich scored a little later on a wild pitch. The Cats loaded the bases with two out, but UMass pitcher Don Boteze got out of the jam.

The Catamounts took the lead in the fifth inning when Kunken singled, moved to second on an infield out, and scored on John Packard's single.

Things were going too well for Vermont, and when the sun suddenly popped out from behind a rain cloud, the small crowd at Centennial Field knew there was something wrong.

Without going into painful details, UMass scored, seven runs in the top of the seventh inning off McCord and reliever Don Schnieder. Included in the barrage was a home run that ended up deep under the bleachers of the football field.

Massachusetts added two more runs in the eight to coast to their third YanCon victory in four starts, 11-3.

The Cats had blown leads in three of their four losses and their pitching staff had given up twenty-six runs in four games. Only Bruce Bovenizer had been truly effective. So it was Bruce that Coach Lapointe sent against New Hampshire on Tuesday, April 25th.

The team needed a big win and they came up with it. Bovenizer pitched six hit baseball and gave up three runs, all unearned. Bruce struck out eight.

The Catamount batters had a field day against two UNH pitchers. All together, they pounded out seventeen base hits including doubles by Packard and Brad Stevens, two doubles each by Lapointe and Kunken, and triples by Soldano and Don Fitts. The result was fifteen runs for a 15-3 victory. The Cats left ten men on base, as they had in their last game against UMass. Lapointe, Packard, and Soldano each got three hits.

With this victory, the Catamounts are off and running to what, I'm sure, will be Coach Ralph Lapointe's fourteenth consecutive winning season.

DAVE LAPOINTE leaps for high throw against UMass.

other people who have brought Mitchell to out attention. We know Fusia is very high on him, and this means a lot to us."

Besides citing thirteen athletes the Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association also presented UVM baseball coach Ralph Lapointe with an engraved silver yowl for his outstanding contribution to Vermont sports through the years.

spots, with Ardell Gargano and converted defensive end Ron Tice working at the tackle spots. Coach Clifford has done quite a bit of experimenting this spring, but perhaps the most interesting one was the conversion of Bill Rivers and John Wojciechowski to end. He wanted to get some blocking ends, so he tapped Wojciechowski and Rivers both of whom played tackle in high school.

With the newcomers showing a great deal of promise and the veterans performing well, the annual Green and Gold intrasquad clash for Saturday should prove to be a very exciting game.
